Mr. and Mrs. Bill Peterson and Richard and Mrs. John Reed and sons Bill and Bob of Thief River Falls visited at the John Reed home Friday.

Shorten Farm Day

One of the best ways to cut down the length of the farm working day is to cut a minute or two off the time for each daily chore. Planning the farm work and the arrangement of chores may shorten the workday by a total of an hour or more.

New Years Wishes

At this time of the Holiday Season we should all remember our friends and neighbors with some kind of greeting, let it be in person or in writing. It is impossible for us to see you all at this time so thru the columns of this paper we wish to thank you all for all your hearty cooperation and for the interest you have shown in your Creamery.

Farm Economy In Good Health

WASHINGTON — There'll very likely be no new depression ushered in by the unprecedented farm prosperity which rural areas are now enjoying, experts of the bureau of agricultural economics predict.

They say today's agricultural economy is far stronger than a generation ago and they feel that the increased population plus new eating habits will stabilize foob markets well above depression levels.

Their predictions soothe the feelings of farmers and grass roots editors who recall that rural economy fell from similar prosperity to unparalleled debt after World War I, and fear the same reaction again.

They beleive that the nation has learned economic lessons since the last war, that enlarged markets gaurd against collapse, and that the low consumption of the 1930s resulted from a volume of national income that was smaller than is likely to be experienced in the years ahead.

Drivers Test Dates Announced

Drivers license examinations under the new law which takes effect Jan. 1 will be given at the City Hall in Warren every Tuesday from 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m., according to the schedule announced by E. P. Lee, drivers license supervisor for the Minnesota Highway Department.

All new applicants for drivers licence must pass tests of vision, ability to read and understand highway signs, knowledge of traffic laws, and a road test to show ability to operate motor vehicles safely.

Each applicant must pass the eye test, the sign test and the law test before being allowed to take the road test. If, for instance, he fails in the sign test, he must take time for study, return and pass before taking the road test.

The applicant must furnish a car for their road test. The car will be checked for compliance with laws governing lights, brakes and other essential equipment.

To allow time for completing examinations, applicants should be on hand at least 45 minutes before closing hour.

Applicants are not required to take examinations in the county in which they reside but may take them at any convenient place on the days designated.

Examinations will be held at Roseau county court house on the first, third and fifth Wednesdays at 10:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. and at the court house in Thief River Falls the first, third and fifth Thursday 10:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.

Success At Last

A Texas newspaper publisher who retired with $50,000 in the bank was asked how he did it, and replied as follows:

I attribute my ability to retire with a $50,000 bank account, after 30 years in the country newspaper field, to close application to duty, always hewing to the mark and letting the chips fall where they may, the rigorous rule of economy, never spending a cent foolishly, everlastingly keeping at my job with a whole heart — and the death of an uncle who left me $49,999.50.

Magnet Brings Up Nail From Intestines of Boy

Using a special magnet, an Atlanta physician recently removed a 1½-inch nail that had been lodged for six days in the duodenum (first part of the small intestine) of a four-year-old boy. In this case, the first on record in which an object was removed from this part of the body without a surgical operation, nearly six hours were required for the magnet to reach the nail, but only two minutes for the magnet and nail to be drawn back into the stomach and up through the esophagus.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

London Conference Ends in Failure; GOP Anti-Inflation Bill Rejected; U. S. Policy on Palestine at Crisis

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DISUNITY:
Big Four Fail

The lethargic, uninspired ending of the Big Four foreign ministers' conference in London was reminiscent of nothing so much as the rather dreary business of tossing out the Christmas tree after the holidays.

There was a small amount of nostalgia and regret expressed over the abrupt finish of the unsuccessful discussions, but there was also a thinly veiled feeling that perhaps, after all, it was a good thing the affair was over.

As seen dimly through clouds of futility and frustration, what the wind-up of the German and Austrian peace treaty talks amounted to was this: The western powers had failed utterly to reach any kind of agreement with Russia on the fate of Germany, and the failure leaves Europe more firmly divided than at any time since the war ended.

Although the delegates were unable to agree on any single issue on their agenda, the point upon which the conference balloon burst was the problem of German reparations.

To the inevitable question, "What now?" diplomatic authorities were answering with a prediction that the United States, Great Britain and France would begin negotiations soon among themselves concerning the unification of western Germany. Russia would be out of it, and there was no prospect of another four-power meeting in 1948 or in any other year.

CONGRESS:
'Straw Man'

Of the two pressing reasons why President Truman called congress into special session in November, one had been disposed of but the other kept hanging around like an evil spirit as the year drew to a close.

The senate and house had voted strongly in favor of authorizing up to 597 million dollars for emergency winter relief for France, Italy, Austria and China, but no such accord was displayed in dealing with the problem of inflation at home.

Rejecting President Truman's 10-point proposal for fighting inflation by imposing wage and price controls and selective rationing, house Republicans offered an anti-inflation bill based upon voluntary agreements for price reductions.

With a two-thirds vote needed for passage, the Republican measure went down to defeat 202 to 188. The house split almost exactly along party lines over the bill, not one Democrat breaking ranks to vote in favor of it.

"The President has asked for bread and you have given him a stone," said Rep. Brent Spence (Dem., Ky.) in summing up the debate for the Democrats. Rep. A. S. (Mike) Monroney (Dem., Okla.) dusted off another bromide when he charged the GOP majority with "setting up a straw man to combat the menace of inflation."

That was the swan song for any anti-inflation legislation during the special session. Although the senate was preparing to act on the house-killed bill, there appeared to be little likelihood that the Republicans would be able to put through their proposals.

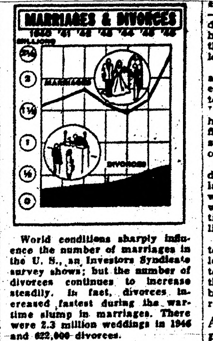
Thrift Plan

Meanwhile, although congress had given its approval to the proposition that interim relief should be rushed to Europe and China, the emergency aid issue continued to send forth echoes.

This time the struggle arose over the actual bill to appropriate the 597 million dollars previously approved by congress. The house appropriations committee, showing the same cutting ways it had exhibited earlier in the year toward budget requests, knocked 88 million dollars off the original figure in preparing the bill for floor action.

Thus, the bill carried only 509 million for winter relief. The appropriations committee, headed by Rep. John Taber (Rep., N. Y.), said the cut was represented by items which would have been used by France and Italy for payment of interest on their foreign debts and for making payments on commercial accounts.

Aroused at the Republican display of economy, Democrats labelled the committee's action as an "undercover" attempt to hamstring the aid program. They served notice that they would attempt to restore the cut.



World conditions sharply influence the number of marriages in the U. S., an Investors Syndicate survey shows; but the number of divorces continues to increase steadily. In fact, divorces increased fastest during the wartime slump in marriages. There were 2.3 million weddings in 1946 and 622,000 divorces.

APOLOGY:
Doublecrossed

The Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor was a doublecross in more ways than one, Shigenori Togo, Japan's wartime foreign minister, told the international war crimes court.

He explained that he himself was a victim of double-dealing on the part of some of his country's leaders in the Pearl Harbor event.

In a 3,600-word statement involving many of his 24 fellow defendants, Togo gave the fullest version of Japan's secret prewar plot that the court had heard during its 19-month session.

He alone, Togo said, had opposed a Japanese navy proposal to begin the war against the U. S. without giving due warning.

At a conference in December, 1941, Togo related, he had "assumed" that customary warning would be given America.

"I was immediately met, however, with a statement by the late Adm. Osami Nagano that the navy wished to carry out a surprise attack."

Nagano was not around to defend his motives. He died during the war crimes trials.

THE SQUEEZE:
For Arms

Ever since the U. N. action which partitioned Palestine into Arab and Jewish states and the subsequent outbreak of hostilities between the two groups, top U. S. officials have been hoping against hope that this country would not be called upon by the Jews to contribute arms and funds to help them fight the Arabs.

Everyone agreed, however, that such a request was virtually inevitable, and when Moshe Shertok, head of the Zionist political department, arrived in Washington to lay his case before U. S. authorities it was apparent that the nation faced a major crisis on its Palestine policy.

As one state department member put it, administration officials fear that they will be "damned if they do and damned if they don't" agree to Zionists requests.

Zionists believe the U. S. can and should act on its own initiative and help the Palestine Jews without waiting to act through the U. N. They say the Jews are seeking to uphold the U. N. decision on partition while the Arabs are attempting to nullify it.

America, according to the Zionist view, has a twofold obligation to help the Jews—first, as a member of the U. N., and second, as the leading advocate of partition.

Well aware of the moral issues involved, U. S. leaders nevertheless fear that if America intervenes in the Palestine strife Russia is almost sure to make an appearance on the scene also. From such a situation could arise the most dangerous kind of complications with both Russia and the Arabs.

Unless the present trend alters profoundly, circumstances in Palestine will build up to a crisis which will burst upon the world next summer when British troops withdraw from the Holy Land. What the U. S. position in the conflict will be probably will have been made clear by that time, with the November elections playing a big part in forcing a definite stand one way or the other.

DON'T SNIFF AT THIS

Anti-Histamines May Provide Cold Cure

Forget the atomic bomb. Civilization may have something far greater in store for it—a golden age in which no one ever has a cold.

Results of his experiments have convinced a navy doctor, Capt. John M. Brewster of Great Lakes naval station, that he has found a cure for the common cold if it is treated early.

He claims that drugs of the anti-histaminic type, which he has been using in the treatment of allergies, can be used successfully in halting the progress of a head cold, including sniffles.

Dr. Brewster explained that the three anti-histamine type drugs—phenylene, benadryl and pyribenzamine—are all equally effective in dealing with this minor bane of man's existence.

KOREAN FATE:
Partition

Destiny of Korea, that almost forgotten country, may be decided by the U. N. early in 1948, and that decision may involve a now rather ominous-sounding procedure — partition.

A U. N. commission is expected to ask Russia to help carry out a U. N. decision calling for country-wide elections leading to establishment of an independent Korean government. If the Soviet answer is no—and Andrei Vishinsky, Russian delegate, previously had indicated his country would not cooperate—the alternative could be a course leading to partition.

The Russians, firmly entrenched as an occupying power in the northern half of Korea, are not expected to sanction any elections or permit U. N. observers to cross into Soviet-held territory. But the U. S., equally firmly established in the south, has sponsored Korean independence and of course is ready to cooperate.

With the American-Russian split dominating the situation, the U. N., lacking Soviet approval of its plan, will be faced with the decision on whether to proceed with the elections in the south only and establish a government there.

Such a step would be tantamount to a partition of Korea. It would leave the Russians alone in the north to pull out their troops when and if they pleased, after which they would be free to establish a Communist regime there.

ARGENTINA:
High Bid

Argentina, one of the unknown quantities in South America, has hemispheric ambitions.

That fact was demonstrated rather satisfactorily at the international trade conference in Havana, Cuba, when the nation announced that she has offered five billion dollars in long-term credits to "deserving" Latin American countries.

The scheme, described as a "Marshall plan" for the Western Hemisphere, was interpreted as Argentina's bid for economic supremacy in the Americas.

Diego Luis Molinari, chief Argentine delegate to the conference in Havana, who made the announcement of the loan offer, also urged an immediate international monetary conference to which non-United Nations members would be invited.

He heaped criticism upon the U. S. for its possession of the majority of the world's gold and declared with some rancor, "There is no such thing as the 'Big Four.' Everybody is equal."

Back on Her Feet

Marjorie Lawrence, noted Australian soprano, stricken with infantile paralysis in 1941, stood for the first time in six years to sing the title role in Richard Strauss' "Elektra" at Chicago's Orchestra hall. She had given previous concerts from a wheel chair.

TRAINING:
In Driving

If a training course in automobile driving were made a requirement in the curriculum of every high school traffic deaths could be reduced by 5,000 to 10,000 a year, according to Dr. Wayne Hughes, director of National Safety council's college and school division.

A safety council survey made among Cleveland high schools between 1939 and 1941 showed that effectual driver training reduced traffic accidents by 50 per cent, the council said.

"It is our firm belief that if every high school in the nation would put into effect such a course we would see miracles within five years," Dr. Hughes asserted.

Officials pointed out that statistics for 1946 proved that mile for mile the 15-24 age group was a third more dangerous behind the wheel than any other comparable segment of the population. That group accounted for 33.8 per cent of the nation's fatalities in 1946.

At present only 10 per cent of the 25,000 high schools in the U. S. have what the council regards as adequate driver training courses. And only a part of the schools conducting such courses have actual automobiles in operation.

Guard Strength Up

Members of the U. S. national guard totaled 201,041 on November 30, 1947, a strength larger than that of the prewar national guard in any year except 1940, according to an announcement by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer.

Projected strength of the national guard on June 30, 1948, is 271,000 men, 250,000 of whom will be in approximately 4,500 army units and 21,000 in 365 air units, he said.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Mountains Save Martens

If the pine martens, valuable fur animal, was a denizen of the lowlands of California, its valuable pelt would presumably have encouraged too-intensive trapping, resulting in serious reduction in its numbers, much as once occurred to the beaver and sea otto. Its haunts, however, are the forest of the higher mountains and the rockslides and moraines of the Arctic-Alpine zone. Roads into marten country are usually blocked by snow during trapping season and a marten trapper must be equipped to live in a rigorous climate and usually to trap in steep, rugged country, consequently much marten country is not trapped and the species has been able to survive.

Tap Watermelon

Tap a watermelon to determine if it is ripe. If it sounds hollow, it is usually ripe; overripe melons are dull and lifeless and are springy to pressure. Immature melons are greenish, with a white or pale green underside. Store in a cool, dry location.

Heat Measure

As the gallon is a unit measure of liquid and the pound is of weight, heat is measured in BTU's (British Thermal Units). One BTU will raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. It is a small measure, as 100,000 BTU are required per hour to heat a small house.

Busy Fish Spins Nest; Rears Young Himself

The little male stickleback is only three to four inches long, but he's an active fish. He builds a cylindrical nest of reeds and seals all openings but one by means of threads secreted by the kidneys. Then he seeks out a female and induces her to deposit eggs in the conical opening, after which he drives her away. After the eggs hatch, the male destroys the nest and rears the young himself.

Happy New Year

THE New Year, the turning of another page in the book of our lives. Before us appears a new clean white page, a slab of snow-white marble, whereon we must record the events of the coming year as they apply to us, to our country and to the world. What shall we record thereon? As Longfellow said: "Life is real, life is earnest. Let us then be up and doing with a heart for any fate; still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait."

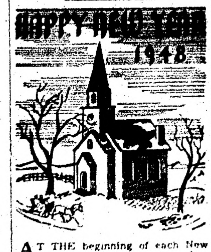
On the new page we might place our first entry: "Smile, save, serve." We can be thankful for another morning of life. We can be thankful for this day; for its failures which we must acknowledge as lessons. We must check our faults and failures. We must scatter seeds of smiles and service, so that they may grow to maturity, so that the reaping will not be shame and sorrow. We will smile, save and serve.

DAY'S MIXUP

The whole world celebrates New Year's Day, but not always on the same date.

The biggest mixup occurred from 1582 to 1772 when Europe and England observed the New Year on the same day but at different times! In 1582, Pope Gregory III eliminated 10 days from the Julian calendar previously in use because it was 11 minutes longer each year than the astronomical year. England did not adopt the new Gregorian calendar until 1772, however, thus observing the same holiday at a later day.

When translated into the Gregorian calendar, the Jewish New Year's varies from September 6 to October 4. The Mohammedans not only celebrate at a different date but their calendar is dated almost 600 years behind the Gregorian since it begins with the Prophet's flight from Mecca in A. D. 622.



AT THE beginning of each New Year two pathways open. One slants downward, slow deterioration clouding and finally blotting out all mental excellence, spiritual appreciation and even physical strength. The other leads to the finer things of existence, ascending gradually to lofty heights of mind and spirit. At the entrance Life stands with cheery greeting and forward impetus for all who heed. Choose well your way! He who lives fully in the year at hand will create grandly for the year that follows. Regardless of any past, he who is his best self today will find much beauty in tomorrow.

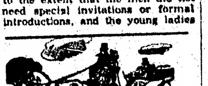
Start of The Year

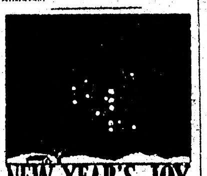
First community in the world to celebrate New Year's Day every year is the little colony on Chatham island. This British islet in the South Pacific is the nearest land area west of the International Date Line on the 180th meridian. The people are mostly Polynesian fishermen, but the few British residents hail the New Year in proper style. Chatham is [illegible] miles east of New Zealand.

Informality Marked Early Holiday Calls

A gala occasion in the lives of the American belles was New Year's Day of former years. Each expected her men friends to accept her hospitality on New Year's Day. On that day barriers were lowered a bit and the strict social form was relaxed to the extent that the men did not need special invitations or formal introductions, and the young ladies could talk more openly and act more natural than on formal occasions.



Fond mammas told their unwed daughters that among so many charming and eligible young men they surely must find one on whom they could bestow their affections. It must be noted, however, that the young ladies had to be fast workers. No matter how informal these New Year's Day calls were, it was a gross breach of propriety for a young man to stay more than 10 minutes.



NEW YEAR'S JOY

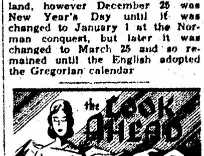
The theme of New Year's Day always has been one of joy. Regardless of the country or the people, or of the date on which it was celebrated, joy marked the spirit in which it was observed.

New Year's Day of the Mohammedans is given as October 17; of the Hebrews as September, and of the Chinese as early February.

The ancient Egyptians, Phoenicians and Persians began their year at the autumnal equinox, September 21, and the Greeks until the fifth century B. C. at the winter solstice, December 21. In 432 B. C. the latter altered the New Year's Day to June 21.

The ancient Romans celebrated December 21, but this was altered to January 1 by Caesar in adopting the Julian calendar.

March 25 was the date observed among most Christian peoples in medieval days. In Anglo-Saxon England, however December 25 was New Year's Day until it was changed to January 1 at the Norman conquest, but later it was changed to March 25 and so remained until the English adopted the Gregorian calendar.



"I am done with the years that were,
I am quits.
I am done with the dead and the old,
They are mines worked out, I delved in their pits,
I have saved the grains of gold—
Now I turn to the future for wine and bread—
I have bidden the past adieu—
I laugh, and lift hands to the year ahead.
Come on! I am ready for you!"
—Edwin Markham.

Progress Continues On New Year's Day

It was on New Year's Day, 1852, that the first practical fire engine was tested.

The cable across the Pacific ocean was completed, January 1, 1903.

A noted authority on flowers and flower arrangement advises the use of glass or white pottery vases or bowls as these go well with the colors of all flowers and the decorative colors in all rooms. Vases of decided color, unless bought especially to go with a particular color scheme or period room, distract attention from their contents.

To make ripe olives shiny and bright, roll them in a few drops of olive oil or salad oil and cover until ready to use.

When removing a frock, place it on a hanger immediately and hang it in the air so that it may be thoroughly dried out. A fragrantly scented sachet hung inside the dress will leave its essence with your garment as it dries.

Farmers Produce Practically All Margarine Materials

Farmers in all but four of our 48 states—Maine, New Hampshire, Nevada and Rhode Island — now produce practically all the material that goes into our annual production of over six hundred million pounds of margarine.

In 1946, we produced 572,537,990 pounds of margarine in which we used 222,830,000 pounds of cotton seed oil; 200,718,000 pounds of soy bean oil, 13,794,000 pounds of peanut oil and 6,589,000 pounds of corn oil.

In addition to this, margarine contains about 10 per cent cultured pasteurized skim milk, one to one and a half per cent of skim milk solid, three per cent of salt and one per cent vitamins and other ingredients, all of which are produced in the United States.—Adv.

For Joyful Cough Relief, Try This Home Mixture
This splendid recipe is used by millions every year, because it makes such a dependable, effective medicine for coughs due to colds. It is so easy to mix—a child could do it.
From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its soothing effect on throat and bronchial irritations.
Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Put the Pinex into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This gives you a full pint of cough medicine, very effective and quick-acting, and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it.
You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of coughs, giving quick relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.
Pinex Saves You Money!

An Echo Testifies

President Truman recently suggested that price controls might have to be used to meet the present emergency. Here is a bit of history. It is an echo from government managed economy that keeps on testifying to the ill effects of government managed economy. During the war the government kept prices of crude oil at an abnormal low. This column called attention to that fact then, indicating there would be a future shortage of oil.

Wild-cat operators and small companies find most of the new pools and sell much of the crude oil. But prices during the war kept wildcatters from buying adequate equipment. It didn't pay. Machinery and wages kept going up, but the price of oil was held low. Instead of buying new rigs for new wells, oil men removed old rigs from low producing wells that would have been kept in production if the price of oil had been favorable.

How to Stall Industry

There was less searching for new fields, because oil prices were so out of line with cost of labor and machinery. The risk was too often a losing proposition. This unwise control continued so long that a grave shortage developed in oil field equipment, in oil well pipe lines, and even in refineries. Now we are reaping the harvest. Many will go cold this winter. Gasoline may be short in some areas, and industrial fuel scarce.

One big operator said to me during that period: "To help win a war I am operating present equipment at full capacity. But I am making only about ¼ of 1 per cent profit on my investment. Consequently, I am not spending new money for expansion of my business. A man can't risk his capital when there is only a chance of ¼ of 1 per cent profit even if the venture proves entirely successful, and 100 per cent loss if it fails, as many of them do in the oil business."

Sad Picture Now

On November 12 Oscar L. Chapman, Under-secretary of Interior, told the American Petroleum Institute in Chicago: "We face critical times, critical for all of us, and for the competitive freedom of the petroleum industry. This winter for the first time in its peacetime history, the oil industry will be unable to meet the full needs of the American people."

The oil people may come through with another miracle as they did during the war. They may actually meet the demand, even though this well-informed government official thinks they cannot. I am awfully slow to put a limit on what free men in a free country can do. But it must be said that the present threat of fuel shortage results from the abnormally low price that government maintained on crude oil during the war and thereafter.

The Danger is There

This should underscore the danger of giving the government power to set prices. Even now, such power can be misused. It could happen that price control now might well obstruct the building of homes, hospitals, and factories — five years from now. Free markets and free prices are the only sane controls. These have given America higher wages for workers, better income for farmers, and better living conditions than any other system. Let us have the courage of good citizenship to keep freedom and do what we know we should do.

Energy Source

Coal provides 70 per cent of all the energy produced in America. Natural oil and natural gas provide 25 per cent and water power accounts for only 5 per cent.

Early Spring Pasture Can Help Solve Feed Shortages

CHICAGO — Early spring pasture can be a "life-saver" for many farmers faced with the prospect of critically short supplies of feed grains, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, in a statement made public here. And fertilizer put on grasses and legumes next spring will make that earlier pasture possible.

Prospects of a smaller winter wheat crop following the poorest corn crop in 10 years, have made the outlook for adequate supplies of feed grains more critical than ever. Discussing how fertilized pastures can help solve this problem, the committee says:

"Fertilizer will give spring pasture a head-start. It will help legumes and grasses make a sturdier growth and provide extra grazing days for livestock. It will save needed grains by providing low cost feed high in proteins, minerals and vitamins."

The following were entertained at a turkey dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Algot Skoglund on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Edeen and family of Newfolden, Mr. and Mrs. Chas Skoglund and Roger, Mr. and Mrs. A. Holmstrom.

Bank Going Ahead

We are this week publishing the statement of the condition of the Marshall County State Bank and we are proud to state that the footings are $1,002,947.74. July 1924 the footings were $79,586.15.

This bank has increased its volume of business every year since it was organized.

Mr. and Mrs. Delmar Hagen and Penny of Gatzke were Holt visitors Wednesday. They are planning a trip to the west and plan to leave Monday. Enroute they will attend the International Livestock Exposition at Denver.

Food For Thought

The book of time for the year 1947 is now closed. What 1948 has in store no one knows. Assuredly you and I as individuals, have an important part to play.

Roll up your sleeves and resolve to join the battle. There need not be monoplies, there need not be another war—there MUST not be another war. The determination and effort of common people led and supported by the power of God, can bring peace, security, abundance and justice for all people everywhere

To the People of this Community

Our Secretary of State Warns:

"During this critical period . . . food is a vital factor in our foreign policy. And the attitude of Americans toward food can make or break our efforts to achieve peace and security . . . our foreign policy has entered the American home and taken a seat at the family table."

That's the fighting general talking. Here are the facts he's deeply concerned about.

Western Europe's grain crop is pitifully short of the scarcely ample goal the farmers hoped to reach. Weather beat them. Our own 1947 wheat crop hit a record high.

If you and I take a few necessary steps, Uncle Sam can make up Europe's shortage and avert famine with its ugly consequences . . . certain to involve us.

How about it? Can we get our families to save on bread—one slice of bread each per day?

Can we make an honest effort to substitute other food for meat on Tuesdays . . . to eat no eggs on Thursdays? Just for a few months?

We can and must to prevent a world crisis.

Let's all save wheat — save meat — save the peace.

Winter Storage of Plant Food to Aid '48 Spring Planting

CHICAGO — Farmers can have fertilizer "on hand" for their 1948 spring planting if they will order plant food early and store it on their farms this winter, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement made public here.

Fertilizers can be stored in good condition provided a few simple precautions are followed, the statement says. The committee lists these five rules for storing plant food:

1. Store the fertilizer only in the barn or some other dry building that has flooring off the ground.
2. Do not pile bags of fertilizer directly on earth or cement floors.
3. Stack the bags closely together. This will reduce the circulation of air from which the fertilizer absorbs moisture.
4. Do not stack the bags too high. The pressure of the bags on top will tend to cake the fertilizer on the bottom of the pile.
5. Keep broken bags separate from the main pile. Loose fertilizer is likely to absorb moisture.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Troops Leave Panama Bases; Anderson Lists Grain Speculators; Nation Warned of High Price Perils

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

PANAMA:
No Bases

Unanimous rejection by Panama's national assembly of a treaty which would have given the U. S. the right to lease and man 14 military and airfield sites to defend the Panama canal not only precipitated a diplomatic disaster but also left this nation in the position of a fighter without a left hand to guard his jaw.

The action, strongly opposed by Panama's President Jiminez, left the U. S. with just one alternative—to pull out—since commitments had been given that no American troops would remain in Panamanian territory without sanction of an authorized treaty.

Military officials later announced that the withdrawal of some 2,000 U. S. soldiers from the 14 bases surrounding the canal would be begun immediately. That meant, probably, that the troops would be pulled into the canal zone proper, which the U. S. leases from Panama.

This was, by all odds, the most crucial issue to arise in U. S.-Panama relations since this country purchased the canal from France in 1904. And it was aggravated by the fact that the inability to man defense bases around the canal left this most vital point in American military security dangerously exposed.

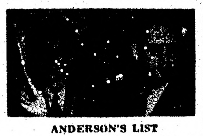
Rep. Albert Engel (Rep., Mich.), chairman of the house appropriations subcommittee on defense, stated his belief that the national assembly's 51 to 0 vote against the treaty was influenced at least in part by the Communist movement in Panama; and he suggested that the U. S. build a new Atlantic-Pacific canal outside Panama if that nation continued to refuse use of bases.

There did not appear to be much chance of further negotiations, however; the assembly's rejection of the pact probably closed the door on that course. Some officials were speculating on whether the problem might not wind up in the lap of the United Nations for solution.

SERIAL:
Grain Opera

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson, at the behest of the senate appropriations committee investigating commodity speculation on the part of government officials, came through with the first installment of the "names" he had promised to name.

There were 711 of them — big traders in grain and other commodities. But except for the name of the man who precipitated the investigation, Edwin W. Pauley, presidential advisor and special assistant to Army Secretary Kenneth Royall, there were no spectacular disclosures on the list.



ANDERSON'S LIST

While there is no law against speculation, the current investigations ordered by congress stem from reports that government officials have profited from "inside" information on government commodity buying plans.

Anderson's 711-name list was the first installment in a series which the agriculture secretary will forward to the senate appropriations committee, simultaneously making each list public. An estimated 14,000 names are available for such listing.

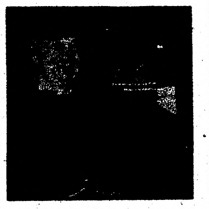
Meanwhile the senate appropriations committee, as well as a house committee, were ready to start sifting the rolls for possible irregularities and especially for leaks of inside information.

WARNING:
On Prices

The President's council of economic advisers, an astute group that sometimes functions as Mr. Truman's conscience, has warned that the U. S. must return to "real price competition" if the present boom period is not to collapse into a shapeless economic mess.

In its annual report the council sharply criticized "monopolistic practices" and declared also that "Many industrial prices must come down at least in relation to other prices and many rates of profit must subside while reasonable profitability is established in other areas."

Home Again



Back in the U. S. after attending the United Nations human rights session in Geneva, Switzerland, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt proclaimed that the commission, of which she was chairman, "did a very good piece of work." She expressed satisfaction with interest shown by all nations in the discussions of human rights, was pleased, too, with Russian cooperation.

This was a clarion call for a revival of the old freebooting competition in American industry.

The report surmised that the present era of prosperity was "abnormal" because of such factors as heavy exports, short crops and great military expenditures. To remedy the situation the council offered these recommendations:

1. Elimination of deliberate curtailment of output as practiced by some labor organizations.
2. Discontinuance of the practice of big business of hampering the development of new, small businesses.
3. Development of natural resources and increase in the industrial facilities of the nation.

PROPAGANDA?
For UMT

Rep. Forest Harness (Rep., Ind.) has charged the army with carrying on an illegal campaign of "propaganda" in behalf of a universal military training law, thereby adding more fuel to an issue already destined to be superheated in 1948.

Harness, chairman of a special house investigating committee, said he would call high army officials before his group soon after congress reconvened on January 6 to answer accusations concerning the use of taxpayers' money to influence public legislation.

Said he, "I am receiving hundreds of letters daily from every part of the country concerning a propaganda pressure campaign being waged by the army for universal military training."

A recent investigation by his committee, he said, had disclosed the hiring of two civilians to tour the country addressing women's groups and making radio speeches favoring the proposed law.

Contention of the army is that it simply is doing everything it can to foster a sense of the need for national security among the people, and Harness had yet to prove that the army was morally wrong in that view, whatever the legal technicalities of the situation might be.

THE PAYOFF:
Who'll Pay?

Economy-bitten members of the house of representatives who juggle billions of dollars with the aplomb of a high-wire performer are at a loss as to whom they can stick for a $418 printing bill.

With the dreadful irony that sometimes appears to make an embarrassing situation worse, the bill is for a committee report on money entitled "Money Makes the Mare Go."

The committee on coinage, weights and measures ordered the report two years ago but has since gone out of existence, hence, can't be handed the check.

John McBride, former clerk of the committee, drew up the report but can't be convinced he should pay for it, maintaining that it wasn't his fault that it came out "a little late."

BABY RATIONING

Europe's Population Too Dense for Resources

For her own good, Europe should lose no time in attempting to establish a favorable ratio of population to its feeding resources, observes Guy Irving Burch, director of the population reference bureau.

It is imperative, he said, that such action be taken before the U. S. reaches the point where it no longer can underwrite Europe's material shortages under the Marshall plan or similar ventures.

One way to reach that favorable ratio is to increase Europe's resources. The only other way is to decrease population. Yet, Burch pointed out, many European countries are giving bonuses for larger families. Today, he said, Europe literally cannot support her dense population either by industrialization or agriculture.

Oh no, you don't ...where's your search warrant?

Spoken like an American!
You bet you can say it . . . You're an American . . . and the American Bill of Rights says you're protected against illegal search and seizure . . . that your home is sacred. But . . . Freedom doesn't work unless you work at it . . . Vote, serve on juries, be active in community affairs, know what's going on, and do something about it.
Freedom is everybody's job!

The People Hold the Power

Those who went into that second-act climax on their behalf cannot be blamed for underestimating the powers of a committee of congress to rebuke contempt for the congressional authority.

It has been our custom and our mental habit for so long to ridicule congress that actually the members themselves of the Thomas committee on un-American activities were not sure of their rights and powers. But they are sure now. Their lawyers looked things up and they are on safe ground.

The people of the United States really have unlimited power. Some essayists think the Constitution limits the powers of the people, but they are wrong. The people limit the powers of the Constitution. They made it. They can widen or warp it, as they please.

At present we deny ourselves the protection of a law providing punishment, even up to the death penalty, for membership in the Communist party or collaboration with Communists by non-Communists toward the destruction of our government by force.

There is a superstition that because thus far we have passed no such law, we can't. That is just a superstition. Congress could fix it up tomorrow.

Voluntary Control Fails

HERE'S how voluntary agreements on controls work with the patriotic industrialists and business men of the nation. The citizens food committee along with the secretary of agriculture worked out a voluntary plan with distillers to save about four million bushels of grain a month by the simple expedient of not distilling whiskey. Most all whiskey distillers agreed. But one manufacturer of neutral spirits was not covered in the agreement.

So what happened? Whiskey distillers use neutral spirits in blending their whiskies, so this manufacturer of neutral spirits quadrupled his production, doubled his price of neutral spirits and used eight million bushels of grain a month during the entire period of the agreement.

Hence the government lost about four million bushels of grain a month instead of saving it, distillers were forced to pay double the price for neutral spirits and this fellow reaped a harvest at the expense of those who agreed with the government to do the patriotic thing and save grain for starving people in Europe.

When consumer credit controls went off November 1, mail order houses attempted to make a voluntary agreement among themselves to limit credit. All agreed but one. Result — all of them now are competing with one another in offering the lowest credit terms.

Off the Washington Ticker

Insiders tell you another reason the White House can't handle the increasing threat of inflation is that Mr. Truman's right-handers "keep everybody away from him." Which, they add, is why the President doesn't know "what's going on!" Has Barney Baruch ever been "sent for"???

Figure this out yourself: Under unification the army and AAF will have separate adjutant generals' offices. Previously they had one "unified" A.G.O. between 'em.

The American Labor party, some gazettes think, will split its right and left wings for the '48 campaign. This outfit swings New York state elections. Insiders tell you that the ALP will not split, but will stick together to beat Mr. Truman. They want "a more liberal Democrat." . . . The one person John Edgar Hoover would like to meet and know is his favorite comedian, James Durante.

Newspapers should read page 244 of an opinion by Judge W. Leach, presiding justice of the court of common pleas of Lackawanna county, Scranton, Pa. DREW PEARSON

Uncle Sam as a Banker

MOVIE magnates and publishing houses have hatched a new plan which may make Uncle Sam even more of a banker than he is today.

At present, Europeans buy foreign-language editions of magazines and translations of American books. They also are flocking to theaters to see Hollywood movies.

But because they have little to export to this country in return for U. S. food and goods, they do not have the dollars to pay the movie producers and the magazine publishers.

Result: Millions of dollars in foreign currencies are accumulating in the capitals of Europe to the credit of these American business firms. Some day they may be converted into dollars, but nobody knows when.

Some companies long have depended upon their foreign sales to keep them out of the red, thus are in serious difficulties with revenue from foreign sales frozen abroad.

Therefore, movie czar Eric Johnston now proposes that employes of the U. S. information service abroad be paid in currency of the foreign nation, accumulating to the account of publishers and movie companies. In return, the U. S. treasury would pay off the home offices in good green U. S. dollars.

Members of congress who have been approached generally approve the idea. They also see a possibility of extending it to use blocked funds for paying expenses of government personnel abroad, who administer the Marshall plan.

Energy in Voice

Although the range of sound is very great, the absolute energy of an average voice has only about one-millionth of the energy needed to operate an ordinary electric lamp.

To the People of this Community

Our CHILDREN Will Do It

Chairman Charles Luckman of the Citizens Food Committee explains the requirements for European aid this way:

We have an excess of 470 million bushels of grain. Our export for minimum world relief needs must be 570 millions. That 100 million bushels difference must come from what you and I think we need during the next few months.

We can help save on bread. But surprisingly enough, three-fourths of all of our grain goes to feed livestock and poultry. So you see the need for keeping down our production and consumption of meat and eggs.

That's why you must observe meatless Tuesday and eggless Thursday. That's why we must stop wasting food—any food. It's a challenge to the homemakers—the cooks—of this community's families.

You women can do it. Just remember people are desperate—they'll fight to get food. We've had enough of fighting.

Save wheat—save meat—save the peace.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Knutson of Thief River Falls visited at the Geo. Johnson home Thursday. They are planning to spend the next three months with their daughter and son-in-law and family at Seattle, Wn.

Alice and Margaret Peterson of Minneapolis spent the holidays at their home here. Margaret is employed as a bookkeeper and Alice is a student at the University of Minnesota.

HAPPY
NEW YEAR

TO ALL OUR CUSTOMERS:

As we enter another New Year we are not unmindful of our responsibility to our many customers. We fully realize that our service in recent months has not been adequate at all times due to lack of generating capacity, but we are doing everything possible to rectify this condition. Our new plant at Devils Lake, North Dakota, which had been under construction for the past two and one half years, was completed in November - - others will be completed during 1948, the first by early spring. When these plants are in operation, we will have ample generating capacity to take care of the needs of our customers. Until spring, however, we must continue to ask you to refrain from using electricity as much as possible during the peak load hours - - from 11:00 A. M. to Noon, and from 5:00 to 6:00 P. M.

We want to again express our sincere thanks to you for your patience and understanding. May the New Year bring you much joy and happiness.

C. G. Wright,
Vice President.

Reasons Why It Pays to Market thorugh Land O'Lakes

1. Land O'Lakes is the farmers' own marketing organization—owned by farmers, run by farmers, in their own best interests.
2. Land O'Lakes offers you a time-tested way to control the sale of your products all the way to market.
3. Land O'Lakes has developed new markets, new products—for example, dry milk.
4. Land O'Lakes has pioneered in quality improvement for 25 years
5. When you sell to Land O'Lakes, you get fair weight, fair test, fair price.

Rail Quiz

How much in taxes does the Great Northern Railway pay to the states and their local units of government?

Of the railway's total tax bill of $40,001,258 last year, $8,190,746 went directly to the states the railway serves and their sub-divisions of government. By states payments were: Wisconsin, $807,204; Minnesota, $3,063,896; North Dakota, $1,477,875; South Dakota, $81,897; Iowa, $37,597; Montana, $1,572,437; Idaho, $163,788; Washington, $1,180,360; Oregon, $90,526; California, $60,942.

700 Attend LOL Conference

The great expansion of Land O'Lakes distributing facilities in the large consumer markets in the midwest and east, and the need for increased production of quality dairy and poultry products to meet a growing demand were discussed last week at the annual conference of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc. at the main plant in Minneapolis.

More than 700 operators and directors from communities all over the upper midwest attended the meeting Thursday and Friday to hear Land O'Lakes executives report on progress and activities for 1947 and plans for 1948. Attending from Holt were Walter Stienhauer, Alf Mavick, John Payne and Oliver Grondahl

Delegates were told of increased facilities at Land O'Lakes branches in a number of large community centers, with new delivery trucks and many new retail outlets added in 1947. This expansion means that the greatest need now is for expansion in production.

L. L. Getten, production manager of Land O'Lakes, said that the steady growth of the association in the past must be maintained and increased in the coming year to take advantage of marketing opportunities existing at the present time.

It was stressed, however, that the need for constantly and aggressively advertising and merchandising Land O'Lakes products has not lessened. It was pointed out that 40 per cent of American housewives have never before shopped on a market that was not controlled or on which shortages do not exist. This fact, combined with the greatly increased birth rate of the last few years, means that alert and hard hitting advertising is essential to maintain and increase demand in the future, delegates were told.

John Brandt, president said that many farmers associated with Land O'Lakes are familiar mainly with the production phase of the business. They do not often have the opportunity fully to grasp the meaning of the far reaching and tremendously important merchandising activities which provide a steady outlet for their products. He said, also, that the brand name associated with quality in the consumer mind is an asset paying dividends continuously to midwest farmers.

One of the purposes of this meeting, Brandt said, is to provide the delegates of the cooperative creameries who own Land O'Lakes with a better understanding of the merchandising problems and activities.

The delegates also heard reports on research developments, the Herd Improvement Division, inaugurated in 1947, and the Feed, Seed, and Fertilizer and Equipment Sales Departments.

The annual Land O'Lakes membership meeting, at which final 1947 statistics will be presented, will be held in Minnea- in March.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Wallace Enters Presidential Race; Michael Quits as King of Romania; Farm Product Prices Hit New High

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

FOR PEACE

Wallace Comes In

Henry Wallace was deluding no one, not even himself, about his chances of being elected President of the United States in 1948 on a third party ticket when, with zealous idealism, he announced that he would be an independent candidate.

His entry into the contest, as he announced on a nation-wide broadcast from Chicago, was based upon his revulsion against "the bi-partisan reactionary war policy which is dividing the world into two armed camps."

Both Republicans and Democrats, he indicated, can be filed in the same political pigeon-hole because both stand for the bi-partisan policies which are leading the nation to war and depression.

"That menace can be met and overcome only by a new political alignment in America which requires a new political party," averred the former vice president.

Wallace

Whether or not it could be met by a third party — a "peace party" — founded on the assumption that the U. S. must adopt a softer, more co-operative attitude toward Russia and at the same time reject universal military training and preparedness in general was a question that probably even history would not answer.

Domestic political significance of Wallace's emergence as a third party candidate may be summed up briefly: Republicans like it, Democrats don't.

If Wallace can get on the ballots in one or more of the pivotal states — New York, Ohio, California, Pennsylvania, or Illinois — he may be able to split off enough of the Democratic vote to swing the election to the Republican nominee.

Always the eminent liberal, Wallace is angling for all or a portion of the left-wing Democratic vote; and if he makes his inherent devotion to Rooseveltian ideals stick, he may be able to corral a considerable section of those on the left side.

One thing was certain. Wallace would have the hearty, although somewhat onerous, support of the Communists, no matter how much he might avow his own anti-Communist principles. He would have to go through the campaign with the Reds and fellow-travelers hanging to his coat-tails.

NEW HIGH:
Farm Prices

U. S. farmers continued to set new records in price levels, both for the produce they sell and the goods they in turn buy.

It was reported by the department of agriculture that the general level of farm prices rose 5 per cent between mid-November and mid-December to a record high of 301 per cent of the 1909-14 average.

Previous all-time high was 289 per cent, set last October.

At the same time, prices paid by farmers for items for living and farm production also reached a new record. On December 15 the index of prices paid was 245 per cent above the 1909-14 average.

The farm price level in mid-December, the department said, was 14 per cent higher than January, 1947, and the index of prices paid 16 per cent higher.

Between mid-November and mid-December, average prices for virtually every group of farm commodities except fruit showed measurable increases.

REPUBLIC:
Michael Quits

Communist-controlled eastern Europe cast off its last tie with a happier past when King Michael I of Romania made public his abdication from the throne.

His announcement had not yet fully registered on Romania's bewildered populace when the Communist government promptly proclaimed the nation a "popular democratic republic."

Thus, with the 26-year-old monarch's abdication, ended a dynasty established in 1866, the last monarchy in the Soviet sphere of influence in eastern Europe and the last throne held by the House of Hohenzollern.

Warning Voice

On his traditional birthday interview in Washington, D. C., Gen. Peyton C. March, 83, World War I chief of staff, observed that the U. S. is "approaching the breaking point" with Russia and has "got to have" universal military training at once.

Michael, as some romanticists would have had it, might have renounced his throne purely for the love of Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma and Denmark, but the Communist establishment of a "republic" and immediate reorganization of the government came too swiftly, too efficiently to lend much credence to that theory.

As the king himself pointed out in his abdication proclamation, he was resigning the throne because a monarchy no longer coincided with the "great political, economic and social changes" in Romania.

Nor was it logical for the Communists, grim advocates of their "international dictatorship of the proletariat," to be countenancing and cooperating with a hereditary monarchy. And Michael had acted as a sort of brake on some Communist actions in Romania.

DOWNTURN:
Prices

As two nation-wide retail firms announced major price reductions on a wide range of their goods American consumers stopped to wonder whether this might mark a definite break in the high price line or would simply turn out to be another incident like the Newburyport experiment last year.

General Electric company disclosed an average price cut of 5 per cent, effective January 1, on an extensive selection of home appliances. The company estimated consumers would save 50 million dollars this year as a result.

Sears Roebuck, large retail mail order house, put into the mails a regular mid-winter sales book listing price reductions up to 20 and 33⅓ per cent on some merchandise.

The actions followed closely after President Truman signed the anti-inflation bill which would combat high prices by seeking voluntary agreements among business and industry to lower costs.

Charles E. Wilson, General Electric president, declared that the reductions were not made to stimulate business. "We could sell in many lines twice what we can produce," he said.

He added his voice to the theory upon which the Republican congress based its recent anti-inflation act: That industry generally must take the initiative in reversing the inflationary trend.

London Braces

England is full of suspense but it isn't the kind that keeps a man's trousers up.

British braces (suspenders), made under a government order limiting the elastic to three inches at the back, have been the cause of a number of London breeches falling down and finally drove Historian Arthur Bryant to reporting his plight in a letter to the London Times.

In the past year, he said, he bought four pairs of braces. "After each occasion," lamented Bryant, "the braces have broken irretrievably within three months."

The Times, in a helpful mood, deplored the situation in an editorial:

"The Four Freedoms are a hollow mockery if our braces are going to be bursting all the time. No nation can be expected to hold up its head if it also is required to hold up its trousers."

LIFE EXPECTANCY

Science Lengthens Man's Span of Time on Earth

Middle-aged and elderly persons at last have begun to share in the progress of medical science which, until recently, conferred most of its benefits on children and young people, according to an analysis of old and new mortality tables by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

Although a 40-year-old man's remaining span of life expectancy has lengthened only four years since 1789, medical improvements in the next quarter century are expected to secure for him much more time on earth.

In 1789 it was estimated that a man 40 years old would live 26 years longer, while today he has 29 or 30 years ahead of him.

Redskin Population Now 400,000 in U. S.; 846,000 Here in 1492

Our Indian population in the United States today is scarcely less than half the number that roamed the region when Columbus discovered America in 1492.

The Office of Indian Affairs, back in Washington after a wartime sojourn in Chicago, counts 400,000 Indians in the United States, plus 33,000 Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts in Alaska and adjacent areas.

The reservations and tribal lands managed by the office would cover two Pennsylvanias, according to the National Geographic Society. Besides the Indians on reservations, there are many leading their own lives. Scattered groups like the Powhatans always have lived independently of federal stewardship.

Ethologists say there were 846,000 Indians here in 1492. After a decrease in population, this century has seen a steady increase among the 150 tribes on reservations.

Measures of health education and medical care have brought Indian birth and death rates in recent years considerably closer to those for the nation as a whole.

Some 55,000 Navajos in Northern Arizona and New Mexico lead the nation's tribal groups in both numbers and land. Cherokees, mostly in Oklahoma with a remnant in North Carolina, are second in numbers with 50,000. The Sioux, the Chippewas, and the Chotaws are other large tribes.

Painting Icons

Several centuries ago in Russia, many artists, when painting icons of sacred personages, employed a strange method in order to give complete individuality to each figure. They would first paint the skeleton, then add the body organs, then the skin and, lastly the cloths.

First Crook Conspires And Then He Perspires

If a crime suspect says, "The cops sweat it out of me," he may be speaking the literal truth, a nerve specialist said recently.

Dr. G. B. Bishop, professor of neurophysiology, at the school of medicine of Washington University of St. Louis, cited "the so-called psychogalvanic reflex."

It lowers skin resistance due to sweating and forms the basis of the lie detector test.

He spoke to the annual convention of the American Academy of Dermatology and Syphilogogy at the Palmer House, Chicago.

Juries in Ireland

In criminal cases in Ireland, the jurors are known to the press and public by numbers, instead of by their names, as a precaution against bribery and intimidation.

Russia Is Losing 'Cold War'

THE Russians can be very frank at times, and oh, so secret at others times. I caught one in a frank mood the other day, however, and he surprised me by confessing that Russia had just about lost the "cold war."

The diplomat, who was of high rank, probably let his hair down because he was talking to another ambassador. I think he was telling the truth. At any rate, he listed three basic errors made by Moscow. They were:

1. The belief that the U. S. would face wide unemployment and economic collapse soon after the war. The politburo expected this would enable them to point to the United States and tell European nations: "You see what a sham American capitalism is."
2. Moscow's mistaken belief that the Frenchmen and Italians who flocked to Communist banners after V-E Day were real Communists.
3. The anti-American campaign that was staged by Molotov and Vishinsky.

This diplomat reported that Stalin and his associates still believe the United States is on the verge of collapse. The Soviet embassy in Washington hasn't been able to convince them otherwise.

The politburo also still thinks that American collapse would prevent wholesale aid to western Europe under the Marshall plan, and that American unemployment soon will make American manufacturers plead with Russia for large orders from the Soviet union to keep U. S. factories going.

Uncle Sam's newest weapon is an anti-atomic bomb. . . . Congressman Fred Hartley (the Taft-Hartley man) will quit congress after this term. WALTER SHEAD

Co-op Tax Issue Dropped

WHETHER or not Cong. Walter Ploeser (Rep., Mo.) intends to give up his fight against co-ops remains to be seen. It will be remembered that Congressman Ploeser sought to brand farm co-ops as "un-American" and to tax patronage refunds.

It may be that his latest move to help members of the tax equity league, principal backers of the battle against co-ops, indicates that he has given up hope and that he is starting on another tack. At any rate, he is credited with sponsoring a phase of the next GOP tax bill which would exempt the first $25,000 of corporate income from taxation. This ideal, if adopted, would give thousands of small businesses a tax-free status.

Chairman Harold Knutson of the house ways and means committee has completed hearings on the question of taxing farm co-ops but has not considered the question in executive session. These hearings were taken over by Knutson's committee when the GOP high command took the subject matter out of the hands of Representative Ploeser's small business committee, which had stirred angry cries from farmers from coast to coast.

There is every indication that nothing will come out of the hearings this year. As a matter of fact, a regular hornet's nest was stirred up and churches, lodges and hundreds of organizations owning tax-free commercial properties have moved into the picture protesting against any tinkering with that section of the internal revenue code at this time.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Weary Walking in Washington

THE distance from the far corners of both the old and new house office buildings to the house of representatives in the capitol is about a half mile. There is no transportation except by taxi, which is futile for several reasons. Even the nearest offices are more than a quarter of a mile away. The representatives and their office help almost always walk. Their errands are frequent. A member may have to walk three round trips a day, either overland through the park, or by tunnel.

The senate office building also is connected with the capitol by tunnel. For some obscure reason, while the senators have a set of electric trolleys like old-time Broadway summer dinkeys, there are no vehicles in the subway to the representatives' offices.

It would cost little and it would save time and energy, but still there is no trolley-line. Even factory scooters would be fine, but, nevertheless, the representatives and their help walk.

Most of the representatives are distinctly younger and more active than most senators, but I have thought, while wearily plodding the monotonous route, that it would be in the public interest that they take their exercise on their own time and use their energy on their work.

TVA Conceals True Costs

A SOCIALISTIC acquaintance keeps persistently demanding government ownership and operation of industry. He insists it would provide a more equitable division of production, with lower prices for consumers, and points to Tennessee Valley authority as an illustration to support his statements. He refuses to consider the fact that TVA is financed with government money, on which it pays no interest charges, but the American people do pay that interest; it pays but a small amount, if any, taxes, while privately owned utilities pay a large proportion of the local, state and federal taxes, and what TVA does not pay the people must pay. Of course, I have not made my friend believe this point

To Relieve Your Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home
You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.
Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of medicine that will please you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine.
This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Keep Milk From Sun

When a bottle of milk is delivered and left on the porch, where the sun beats down on it, your family will be cheated out of some of the milk's appetizing and nutritional values. Even in cold weather, if left in direct sun, the flavor and vitamin content of milk will be changed. The flavor of homogenized milk is affected within half an hour when in the sun, and other milk within one hour. The milk doesn't sour or "turn," but a distinct taste change occurs due to the sunlight.

SATURDAY SUGGESTION

A little hamburg goes a long way in today's substantial Peace Plate suggestion from home economists of the Consumer Service Section, Citizens Food Committee. In fact, the course-in-one dish, Texas Hash, serves 8, and three Variations make this a "Must" for the recipe book.

With hearty Texas Hash, serve mixed green pickles and baked potatoes, not forgetting to rub a little fat on skins before baking. For dessert, treat the family to frosted spice cake.

TEXAS HASH

- 2 large onions, sliced
- 2 green peppers, cut fine
- 3 tablespoons fat
- 1 pound hamburg
- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- ½ cup uncooked rice
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper

Cook onions and green pepper slowly in hot fat until onions are yellow. Add hamburg and fry until mixture falls apart. Add tomatoes, rice, and seasonings and mix. Put in large greased casserole, cover, and bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 45 minutes, or until done. Serves 8. To serve 4, divide recipe in half.

Variations:

1. Instead of rice, use 1 cup uncooked spaghetti, macaroni, or noodles.
2. Substitute 1 cup chopped celery stalks and leaves for green pepper.
3. Use 1 teaspoon paprika instead of chili powder.

Hard of Hearing Amazed By New Developments!

Out of the electronic laboratories come two amazing new developments that are now avialable to the hard hearing everywhere. Imagine, if you can, an extremely tiny device with power enough to make even a whisper be heard distinctly, yet because of its new Automatic control, painful, unwanted noises are cut off.

More surprising still, is the fact that, in spite of its tiny size, not two, or three, but FOUR vacuum tubes in a push-pull output circuit deliver tremendous power way beyond the realm of ordinary aids to hearing.

So enthusiastic are the manufacturers of this new development, The Microtone Company, Dept. 201 Marquette Avenue, Minneapolis 2, Minnesota, that they will gladly send, without cost, complete information to anyone interested in improving his or her hearing.

Whether you now own an old hearing aid, a comparatively new one or none at all you owe it to yourself to learn the facts.

More Turkey

Half a large turkey yields considerably more cooked meat than a whole small turkey of the same weight, say home economists of the department of agriculture. For instance, an 11-pound half turkey gives 15 to 20 per cent more than an 11-pound whole turkey.

FRIDAY SUGGESTION

CREAMED SALT CODFISH IN POTATO RING

- 3 tablespoons fat
- 3 tablespoons flour
- Dash of pepper
- 2 cups milk
- 2¼ cups shredded salt codfish (10 ounces)
- 2 shelled hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- 3 cups hot mashed potatoes

Melt fat in saucepan, stir in flour and pepper. (No salt is needed because of the salt fish used.) Add milk gradually, while stirring, and cook until smooth and thickened, stirring constantly.

Shred codfish by pulling it apart with two forks or cutting it with scissors. Freshen it following manufacturer's directions. Drain, cover with cold water, and simmer 15-20 minutes or until tender. Drain. Add to white sauce with sliced eggs. Arrange hot mashed potatoes in a ring on a platter with creamed fish in center. Sprinkle mashed potato with paprika or finely chopped parsley if desired. Serves 4.

Menu Suggestions

With Creamed Salt Codfish in Potato Ring, serve lemoned green beans (cooked or canned beans seasoned with lemon juice, butter or margarine, salt, and pepper); also sliced pickled beets. For dessert, have crisp molasses cookies and spiced applesauce made by adding ½ teaspoon cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon nutmeg to 2 cups applesauce. And remember in following any recipe to use level measurements.

WEDNESDAY SUGGESTION

Less-expensive shoulder chops come tenderly to table, with enough savory brown gravy to give everybody a generous helping, when braised unhurriedly as suggested by home economists of the Citizens Food Committee's Consumer Service Section. Follow the same flavor-conserving method for lamb or veal shoulder chops.

Sharing honors on today's menu are Diced Parsley Potatoes, scalloped corn and apple jelly, with lemon meringue pie as a dessert treat.

BRAISED SHOULDER PORK CHOPS

- 4 shoulder pork chops, 1-inch thick
- Flour
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ cup sliced onions
- 2 cups water

Dredge chops with 2 tablespoons flour. Brown on both sides in fat heated in skillet. Add remaining ingredients. Cover; simmer 40 to 60 minutes, or until tender. Arrange chops on a hot platter, and keep warm. Then thicken liquid remaining in skillet to gravy consistency, using 1 tablespoon flour for every 1½ tablespoons cold water. Mix the flour and water to a smooth paste before stirring into liquid. Cook until thickened, while stirring. Pour over chops. Serves 4.

DICED PARSLEY POTATOES

- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 4 cups pared, diced raw potatoes
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup boiling water
- ¼ cup minced parsley

Melt fat in saucepan; stir in flour. Add potatoes, salt, pepper and water; cover, simmer over low heat 15 minutes. Add parsley; cover, and cook 15 minutes longer, or until potatoes are tender. Serves 4.

Lettuce Center

One-fifth of all the lettuce produced commercially in the United States is grown in the Valley of the Sun, of which Phoenix, Ariz., is the hub.

SUNDAY SUGGESTION

Two-day menu planning that looks ahead to Monday's satisfying Peace Plate is part of today's good eating suggestion from home economists of the Citizens Food Committee's Consumer Service Section. Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb—a meat cut in line with the food conservation program—has a Vegetable Stuffing that spares bread and contributes special flavor with food values.

Sharing the roasting pan and the meat's fine flavor are Pan-Roasted Potatoes. Try a salad of diced canned pineapple and sliced raw cranberries tossed with broken-up lettuce leaves and your favorite salad dressing. For Sunday dessert, serve chocolate or vanilla ice cream.

ROAST SHOULDER OF LAMB WITH VEGETABLE STUFFING

- 1 medium onion, diced
- ½ cup celery, chopped
- 3 tablespoons green pepper, chopped
- ¾ cup raw carrot, grated
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon thyme
- ½ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ cup melted fat
- 4 pounds shoulder of lamb, (cut with "pocket" for stuffing)

Combine first 10 ingredients. Fill pocket of meat with stuffing. Fasten together with skewers or tie securely with cord. Brush with additional fat. Season with 2 teaspoons additional salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Roast in moderate oven (350°F.), allowing 45 minutes per pound. Serves 6 to 8, with leftovers.

PAN-ROASTED POTATOES: Pare 8 medium potatoes and boil 10 minutes. Arrange around roast in roasting pan and bake 40-60 minutes, or until tender, turning occasionally and basting with fat in pan. Plan so that the meat and potatoes are done at the same time.

MONDAY SUGGESTION

Second step in thrifty week-end menu planning, as worked out by the Consumer Service Section, Citizens Food Committee, is a Peace Plate that features Lamb Curry, made with cooked lamb remaining from Sunday's roast shoulder.

Here's a main dish from leftovers that can face family or guests with no apologies, especially when served with mashed sweet potatoes—now plentiful—and apple rings sauteed in a skillet with a little fat and sugar. Wind up with Peanut Butter Blanc Mange, a flavorful dessert that supplies a good portion of the daily quota of milk.

LAMB CURRY

- ¾ cup sliced onions
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1 minced peeled clove garlic (optional)
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1½ cups cubed leftover cooked lamb
- 1 teaspoon curry powder
- 2 cups stock from lamb bones or lamb gravy diluted with water
- Salt
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ¼ cup cold water

Cook the onions, celery and garlic in the fat in a skillet until lightly browned. Add lamb, curry powder, stock and salt to taste. Cover; simmer 30 minutes. If necessary, thicken with the flour mixed with cold water. Serves 4.

REGULAR FAVORITE: Clip this recipe and use with leftover beef, veal or pork.

SUGGESTED MENU FOR MEATLESS TUESDAY

—Citizens Food Committee

• • •

SALMON LOAF

- 1 1-pound can salmon (or 2 cups any flaked, cooked or canned fish)
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- ½ cup milk
- 1 egg, well beaten
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash of pepper
- 2 tablespoons melted fat

Drain salmon, reserving liquor. Remove skin and bone; and flake the fish. Combine with remaining ingredients and turn into greased loaf pan, 7½x3½x2¼ inches. Bake in moderately hot oven (375°F.) 40 minutes, or until firm in center. Serve with a tasty hot sauce made by stirring 2 tablespoons catchup into 1 cup medium white sauce just before serving. Use the reserved salmon liquor as part of the milk in making the sauce. Serves 4.

If very dry bread crumbs are used, more milk will be needed to make a moist loaf.

With thick slices of the hot Salmon Loaf, we suggest scalloped potatoes and baked Acorn squash, and, for dessert, a tart refreshing lemon-flavored gelatin with cut-up fruit molded in it.

Farmers are the largest single group of motor vehicle owners. More than four million passenger cars are in use on farms. Farmers own 1,110,000 trucks, and in addition, hire another half-million to handle farm products and supplies. Thirty-four per cent of all trucks are used in agriculture.

Sportsman Club Corner

In a letter to sportsmen's clubs game wardens, refuge supervisors and patrolmen, Taylor W. Huston, supervisor of Game and Fish division, asks for plans and cooperation in a spring planting program to provide food for wildlife next winter.

Seeds will be provided for planting areas where there are concentrations of game birds and where the present food supply may not be adequate. Cane, millet, sunflower and buckwheat seed is available and repuests for seed should be given to the local gamewarden, refuge supervisor or patrolman before February 10th.

Sportsmen's organizations are urged to contact farmers and members who might be willing to plant small plots of seed and not harvest it next fall. The seeds on the standing grain will provide a valuable source of food during the winter of 1948-49.

Low Wheat Prospects, Big '48 Food Demand, Spurs Need for Ordering Plant Food Early

CHICAGO—Prospects for a lower winter wheat yield in the West due to scanty autumn rains were cited as a reason why farmers should make immediate arrangements for their 1948 fertilizer supplies.

"With the outlook for another bumper wheat crop dimmed by unfavorable weather," says a statement made public by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee, "the need for higher production of other feed grains will be more critical than ever. Fertilizer will play a vital part in making possible that bigger output.

"That is why it is so important for farmers to heed the 'Order Early' slogan for plant food supplies.

"Only by teamwork between farmers and producers can every pound of available plant food be distributed in time to do the most good in promoting peak food production in 1948.

"For farmers, that means ordering now, taking delivery during the coming months and storing the fertilizer in their barns until spring seeding time. By doing this, farmers will have their plant food when and where they need it most."

The statement points out that in addition to its benefits in boosting per acre crop yields, fertilizer is "one of the best buys a farmer can make today."

Plant Food Will Boost Crop Output.

"Farm production cost studies by Purdue University's department of agricultural extension showed that the price of fertilizer per ton had risen only 36 per cent above prewar levels," says the statement. "Prices of all goods and services needed in farm production have increased an average of 85 per cent since 1935-39."

News From AAA Office

We have been advised by our farmer field man Selvin Erickson that the conservation practises approved for our county are as follows: Phosphate on concerving crops also in applying on new seeding with a grain crop, summer fallow, and green crop plowed under.

You will notice that weed control in no longer one of them, therefore, it will be more difficult for the farmer to earn his conservation payment. Applications of phosphate gives the best return in dollars and cents of any practice we have.

We have placed our order for 20 to 30 cars of phosphate and would urgently recommend that you place your order for phosphate immediately by either contacting your County AAA office or mailing in your order at once.

Three cars of this phosphate have already been distributed and notice of acceptance and shipment have been received by us for more. Shipment will be made to your nearest town as soon as possible, after enough orders have been received to dispose of a complete car direct from the car, as we do not have storage space available to store phosphate.

Take Care of Pans

With a little attention, kitchen utensils will serve you well for years. But if they're carelessly banged around and neglected, you'll soon be ashamed to use them, declares the Rural Home editor of Capper's Farmer, whose advice on household matters is read by 1,250,000 farm families. In general, put pans in to soak after using them. Run cold water into those used for egg and flour mixtures; hot water will set them, making food particles hard to remove. Greasy or sugary pans should be soaked in hot water.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

January 9 the Nordics defeated Argyle in their first game of the new year. It was a very close and hard fought game. The half score ended with the Nordics leading 19 to 16. The final started with both teams doing much scoring. When the final whistle blew the Nordics had taken a 51 to 41 victory.

The following Friday Newfolden defeated Strandquist 32 to 11. The game was losely played with both teams having hard luck on their shooting.

Tonight the Nordics will encounter the always strong Stephen team on the Newfolden floor.

Brandt Expresses Vaiue OF Local Advertising, Co'op Meets

The importance of farmers taking an active part in the annual meetings of their cooperative creameries and cheese factories was emphasized this week by John Brandt, president of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc.

Brandt also urged aggressive co-ops who desire to acquaint the public with what they are accomplishing and to build themselves locally and nationally, to advertise in their own community newspapers, which he called the "farmers best friend".

He said that there are more annual meetings in the last two weeks of January and in February than in all the rest of the year combined. These occasions, he pointed out, give farmers an opportunity to appreciate the value of their investments through the presentation and analysis of their fiancial statements.

"It would also be valuable at these meetings," Brandt said, "to bring up for discussion the principles of extending cooperation as it exists locally, in the processing and manufacturing stages, into the broader field of merchandising, which requires large supplies and operations to warrant the effective advertising of finished products.

"You can't advertise a branded product unless you have a standardized product to begin with - - and you can't have standardization if creameries and cheese factories are all working separately"

"The value of advertising," Brandt said, is demonstrated every day in our magazines and newspapers. A very important part of the overall advertising plan", he declared, "is advertising in local newspapers, which offer many unequalled opportunities to tell the story of a co-op's service and to sell it's products."

The Upper Midwest, he said, has a large tourist trade, and local advertising helps also to reach these visitors and obtain them as customers. The effectiveness of all advertising is, of course, increased by having standardized methods and brands to advertise, Brandt said.

Exports Out of New York

Fifty years ago, exports out of New York City, in the order of their importance, were cotton, breadstuffs, meat and dairy products and mineral oils. Today, emphasis is on manufactured goods. The export trade has grown tremendously in the last few years despite production difficulties, transportation embargoes and unprecedented port congestion, both in this country and abroad.

Submarine Development

Simon Lake invented the even keel submersible submarine. The "Argonaut," built in 1897, was the first craft of its kind to navigate the open sea successfully, the first to salvage sunken treasures. He also invented submarine apparatus for locating and recovering sunken vessels and their cargoes, and a heavy-oil internal combustion engine for marine use.

Strides in Floriculture

The chrysanthemum, which began life as a wild, yellow, single-petaled flower in the mountains of China, now has many colors, varieties and sizes. Among the varieties are the large, globular species, fantastic Japanese kinds, spidery types like the Fuji, anemone and daisy varieties, pompons and button mums.

Tell Teacher This

If a person has a black eye, it may be said that he suffers from a contusion of the periorbital integument, subcutaneous hemorrhage, ecchymosis of the conjunctive and the periobital cuticular tissue, discoloration, tumefaction and abrasion of the supramalar epidermis.

Jamborado Language

Jamborado is the name the Boy Scouts gave the new language born at the World Jamboree of Peace at Moisson, France. The language consists of one part English, one part French, one part each of arm and leg motions.

Regulating Sunlight

New patented idea in fluorescent illumination is a device using cold cathode tubes behind a steel venetian blind. Desired amount of light can be obtained by merely adjusting blind openings. Unit fits flat against the wall.

Turtles are Deaf

Scientists believe turtles to be totally deaf. To compensate for the lack of this sense, however, they are especially sensitive to vibrations which they receive through their shells.

First Juvenile Courts

First juvenile courts in the United States were not established until 1900. The hearings are private and informal. Most other countries have maintained juvenile courts since the early 20th century.

Beneficial Snakes

The house snake, erroneously believed by some to milk cows, is a king snake, a species which eats its poisonous relatives. It is immune to the venom of rattlesnakes and copperheads.

Christmas Plant

The poinsettia plant, now a traditional accompaniment of the Christmas season, is sturdier and more streamlined than its ancestor — a huge bush in Mexico.

Protection for Tenant

In 1469 the tenant farmer in England was first protected from having his property seized for the landlord's debts, beyond the amount of rent due.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Asks Tax Cut in Message, Arouses Strong GOP Opposition; Brazil Moves to Oust Communists

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MESSAGE:
Tax Issue

Whether President Harry Truman's state of the union message to congress was "socialistic," as Republican partisans dubbed it, or "forthright and courageous," as in the eyes of loyal Democrats, remained a matter of opinion, but it was fairly obvious that in making it the President had cast a loving glance toward next November's election day.

He proposed a combination tax-cutting-and-raising device that manifestly has no chance of passage in the Republican dominated congress but one that sounds good to a lot of voters.

His plan, embodying tax-relief to the "little man," would give each individual taxpayer an immediate $40 tax cut for himself and for each dependent. To offset that reduction in federal income he proposed that corporation taxes be raised by 3.2 billion dollars.

Mr. Truman presented the scheme as a "cost of living" credit designed primarily to relieve the small taxpayer.

In a phrase certain to be quoted with relish by Democratic orators during the coming campaign, the President said he wants to keep revenue collections where they are and still help those who need relief to "buy the necessities of life."

Supplementing the tax proposals he called for a 75-cent-per-hour minimum wage, representing a 35-cent increase over the present 40-cent minimum. Although in the past he has favored raising the national minimum wage, the 75-cent figure was the highest flat demand he has made.

General tone of the President's message to the joint session led most observers to believe that he was swinging his administration back to "a little left of center," a point which generally is identified with New Deal philosophies.

Some saw in the speech a perceptible bid for the left-wing and liberal vote that Henry Wallace's third party is threatening to take away from the Democrats.

Republican reaction to Mr. Truman's speech was bitter and intense and the G.O.P. went ahead more determinedly with its own tax-reduction bill.

AND FURTHERMORE . . .

Taxes were not the only controversial issue touched upon by Mr. Truman in his message to congress. He also asked for:

1. The once-rejected 10-point anti-inflation program with power to impose wage and price controls and rationing.
2. Universal military training.
3. Authorization of the four-year Marshall plan.
4. Stronger and extended rent controls.
5. Public housing for low-income families and government action to cut building costs.
6. Modernization of farm price supports and broader crop insurance.
7. Extension of unemployment compensation, old age and survivors' benefits, a national health plan and federal financial aid for education.
8. Admission of European refugees into the U. S.
9. Statehood for Alaska and Hawaii.

SURPRISE:
Back Again

Don't look now or you might see another one of those flying saucers. It seems as though they're back again.

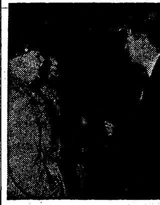
Col. Guy F. Hix, commander of Godman field, Fort Knox, Ky., spotted one from the airport's observation tower and had it chased by national guard planes and followed from the ground by state highway patrolmen.

The "saucer," said Colonel Hix, was "very white and looked like an umbrella."

Pilots of the planes which pursued the object reported they had climbed to 20,000 feet and the disk was still above them. They estimated its speed at about 180 miles an hour.

Further evidence was provided by highway patrol headquarters at Elizabethtown, Ky., which reported receiving calls from cruisers whose occupants said the saucer resembled an "ice cream cone with a little fire at the bottom."

Still Circulating



Publicity-shy as ever, Charles A. Lindbergh turned up in the news again when he arrived at Haneda airfield at Tokyo. Presumably he went to Japan to make an inspection tour of facilities of Pan-American Airways there, but all Lindbergh said was that he had nothing to say.

KNOCKOUT:
Brazil

Brazil, which severed diplomatic relations with Russia in a huff last October, now has administered what looks like the coup de grace to Red activity within its own borders.

It came in the form of a law, signed amid great furor by President Enrico Dutra, virtually abolishing every vestige of Communist action in Brazil by removing all Communists from elective posts throughout the nation, including congressmen.

The process of outlawing the Reds was far from a calm one, marked at times by dramatic displays of Latin-American verve and temper.

Fist-fights broke out frequently on the floor of the chamber of deputies, and at one point during the debate the session was suspended temporarily when three deputies pulled guns from their pockets and waved them at three Communist members. No shots were fired.

Outside the building private citizens argued vociferously and exchanged blows. Leftist crowds shouted vengeance on the deputies and police sirens screamed through downtown Rio de Janeiro.

It was, by and large, the most turbulent legislative session ever held in Brazil.

Other nations could take an object lesson from Brazil's achievement. Communists can be frozen out of government activity even though the process may be noisy and painful.

EITHER, OR:
Marshall

"Either undertake to meet the requirements of the problem or don't undertake it at all."

In that blunt fashion, Secretary of State George Marshall made a preliminary plea to the 80th congress for passage of his European recovery plan. It was apparent that he believed the "requirements of the situation" were exactly as he and the administration had outlined them to the public.

Marshall rejected the Republican-backed proposal to create a new government corporation to administer the aid program, and he asked for a single administrator responsible to the President and working in conjunction with the secretary of state.

There is neither time nor justifiable opportunity for congressional paring of the Marshall plan, he intimated. The 6.8 billion dollars which President Truman has asked for the first 15 months of the plan is a precisely calculated figure, the secretary said, which "does not represent a generous estimate of requirements."

At the same time responsible Republican leaders were predicting that congress would approve a modified European relief program which would be kept under a 5-billion-dollar cost during its initial period.

Marshall repeated earlier estimates that the total cost might range between 15.1 and 17.8 billion dollars. And, he said, the first appropriation should be enough to get the program under way "on a broad, sound basis and not in a piecemeal manner."

But that now was up to congress, which would be hearing more administration testimony on behalf of the Marshall plan before it got to work on the measure.

MOTORING PUBLIC

There'll Be More New Cars This Year

Thousands of would-be car owners were bitterly disappointed last year because they couldn't get the buggy they wanted so much.

But this year things will be different—maybe. Because a lot more passenger automobiles are expected to come off the assembly lines some of the industry's seers are predicting that cars will be easier to get by the end of 1948.

Against that viewpoint, however, is the fact that 1949 models will begin to appear during the latter months of the year and thus bring a new flood of orders, many of them from owners of 1946 and 1947 vehicles. Also, the word is that 1949 models will be so radically different as to bring back into the market those who may have been "scared" out by price advances."

Household Hints

Casters that are oiled periodically make furniture easier to move while cleaning.

If a dress pattern calls for ruffles or flounces, choose crisp material for them.

The suction attachment of an electric vacuum cleaner may be used for cleaning hot air registers.

To store a loaf of bread that has been cut, wrap it in waxed paper. A cloth absorbs moisture and may give the bread an "off" flavor.

Don't be disturbed if your baby does not grow as rapidly during his second year as he did during his first. A slowing down of baby's development during his second year is perfectly natural.

When sewing sheer materials on the machine, put a layer of tissue under the seam. Tissue prevents puckering and can be torn off.

To keep order in the bathroom and prevent squabbles, assign wash cloths and towels of a certain color to each member of the family. Never change the color scheme, though.

If buttonholes are worn or torn, or if the material around them is beginning to unravel, you may replace the worn section with a band of ribbon. Work new buttonholes. For more interest, you may make cuffs for your dress with the same kind of ribbon.

Kidneys Must Work Well—
For You To Feel Well
24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at nights, swelling.
Why not try Doan's Pills? You will be using a medicine recommended the country over. Doan's stimulate the function of the kidneys and help them to flush out poisonous waste from the blood. They contain nothing harmful. Get Doan's today. Use with confidence. At all drug stores.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Communists Are Enemies of U. S.

ONE great difference sets apart the Communists from all other groups which have attachments to other lands, and brands the Communists unmistakably as enemies of the United States.

The favorite political protege of the Communist propaganda is the Alien "minority." If you damn the Communist as pro-Russian you are a bigoted 200-per center. You hate all immigrants and all who maintain an affection for Ireland, for example.

There is no parallel here. Most of the Irish immigrants and many of their progeny were ferocious against England for her oppression of Ireland. But there was no question of their devotion to the United States.

During World War I, some German immigrants and their children were suspected of disloyalty to this nation because they applied their intelligence to the issues between Germany and France. Very few were pro-German to the extent that they were anti-American.

To get our perspective, we must understand first that Russia is our enemy and that all Communists are adherents of that enemy. On treason, the Constitution says it consists of levying war against the United States or adhering to our enemies, giving them aid and comfort.

It's All Done by Mirrors

America's football coaches have voted two to one to keep the rule permitting unlimited substitutions during a game. This accomplished the lifelong aim of coaches and rules-makers to get the game to a point where no spectator, however keen, could follow it. A fan no longer knows the varsity. He can't even follow the substitutes.

What has been accomplished is night football without lights. You get the same feeling watching a football classic that you get following a pinball or quarter machine. When anybody today points to somebody at a party and says, "He was a great Yale or Harvard fullback" the natural query is "How many minutes?"

Anybody who calls a football team today "an eleven" just can't count.

Notes Off the News Ticker

In case he has to exit (or death claims him), Josef Stalin has arranged to have four men succeed him. They are Molotov of the government, Zhdanov of the Communist party, Beria of the Russian secret police and Bulganin of the Red army. Comrade Malenkov, incidentally, is trying to oust Zhdanov and put himself in as one of the quartet.

Sudden thawt! The Communists aren't trying to get into the capitalists' hair. They are trying to get into their shoes.

If Stalin nixes approval for the marriage of Romania's abdicated King Michael, the Vatican will give it the Go-Light, according to top local holy men.

Doris Duke just bought a converted B-29 (as a new toy) for her new bridegroom. (nice work, et cetera). . . . One nearby night club put on its late show for exactly one couple the other a. m. . . . One of the bigtimes' top favorites (he played the Palace often) is mooching nickels and dimes on the 49th street beat.

Members of the American Veterans' committee (who picketed Flagstad's appearance at Carnegie hall) were belittled by some of the press. They reported the Moddom's yodeling was applauded by the spectators, anyhow. . . . The ones who really deserved the clapping of patriotic Americans were those war vets, who still are fighting what their buddies died for—by opposing all friends of former enemies.

Co-ops Are Typically American

FARM cooperatives are just as typically American in our way of life as harvest rings, quilting bees and barn raisings. As a matter of fact, these community gatherings of farm folk, which sought to do for the individual what he could not do for himself, were the first farm cooperatives.

The same principle obtains to this day in the modern farm cooperatives in both the producing and selling end of agriculture. One farmer could do little to beat down the price he pays or gets for commodities but 50 farmers together can get a better deal both ways. That's what a cooperative is and the money saved by this community action is returned to each member in what is known as "patronage refunds."

Now some folks in congress declare this gathering together or communal action is communistic and un-American. Others say the co-ops are driving small business to bankruptcy because of unfair tax consideration.

To prove they are in dead earnest, there are approximately 30 paid lobbyists now in Washington directing a drive to legislate cooperatives out of business by seeking to tax these refunds on the theory they are profits.

Spearhead of this drive is the National Tax Equality association. Many small businessmen have been propagandized into putting up money to keep NTEA going. These small businessmen, to my way of thinking, are merely being exploited, for the real backers of NTEA are not small businessmen but powerful big business groups.

Sales Totals Are Deceptive

IN 1929 we boasted of our prosperity. In that year retail sales throughout the nation amounted to more than 48 billion dollars, up to that time an all-time record. The past year, 1947, retail sales were more than twice the 1929 figure, a staggering total of 109 billion dollars. The greater part of the difference was represented by the changed purchasing power of the dollar. In 1929 a dollar bought 100 cents worth of commodities; in 1947 each dollar bought only about 40 cents worth of commodities. That difference represents the extent of the inflation from which we are suffering. It was not that we bought more commodities in 1947 than in 1929, but we paid twice as much.

HOW TO SIGNAL A CAR FOR HELP AT NIGHT
IT'S MIDNIGHT. It's an emergency. How to "flag down" a passing motorist? Your flashlight is your best bet. Swing your flashlight across the road . . . with the beam down! Be sure it's powered with "Eveready" batteries . . . powerful, dependable, they outlast all other brands!*
KEEP YOUR LIGHT MOVING, says the AAA. Standing about 50 feet to the rear of your car, wave the flashlight across the road . . . with the beam down! DON'T throw the beam into the eyes of the oncoming motorist! A light in a driver's eyes can cause a serious accident!
KEEP A "DANGER SIGNAL" HANDY! Red means "danger." So here's what you can do to turn a flashlight into a danger signal. Roll a sheet of red cellophane around the head of the light. Hold it in place with a rubber band. Twist the ends of cellophane to resemble a flare. Keep an "Eveready" flashlight handy.

LOOKING AHEAD

Government and Railroads

The American railroads are being put increasingly on the spot. They had tough times during the depression years of the Thirties. Some of them went bankrupt and remain that way, despite the tremendous volume of wartime business. Times are good on the railroads now, too. They are hauling all the freight they can haul. Well, then, asks the public, if business is so good, why can't the railroads keep on granting wage increases?

Folks coming to our town ride the Missouri Pacific. Although it went bankrupt in 1933, this railroad now has on order $35 million worth of new cars and locomotives. That's an example of how a bankrupt railroad has to pay out money. And that's not all. Its gross revenues were up 54 per cent in 1947 as compared with 1929, and net income was up 40 per cent. But here's the catch. Its taxes have gone up 173 per cent!

Government Trouble

As a matter of fact, payrolls and payroll taxes took more than half the gross revenues of the railroads in 1946. At the same time, the rate of return for stockholders, based on property valuation, has dwindled to around 3 per cent. Not more than 3½ per cent is the estimate by the Interstate Commerce Commission for 1947, and this does not include wage increases. That's mighty poor investment!

Everybody seems to be unhappy about the railroads. The various unions are usually ready to complain about wages. Yet management finds wage increases coming, with no profits to absorb them. And sometimes the public gets sore. Pretty soon somebody gets the bright idea. We'll just let the government take the railroads over, and that'll settle everything. They just think it will. That's what the trouble is now. Government trouble.

Some On The Rocks

In my opinion, the extensive government regulations are fundamentally to blame for the railroads' failure to make ends meet despite the greatest volume of business they ever had in peace time. American railroads are probably regulated by government more than any other major industry. In years when railroads see that profits are too small, or even non-existent as in 1946, they may petition the government for rate increases.

These may be granted or they may not. Some relief was granted the railroads early this year. But these prospects were at once swallowed in wage increases, and additional increases are being asked even though many railroads are already on the rocks. If things go on for another decade in this manner, we shall see a great and important industry fold up completely.

The future of our industry depends much upon the future of our railroads. Yet, unless railroad credit can be restored, unless the lines are permitted to earn enough money to pay fair dividends and attract new investment, to keep equipment and properties in good condition, then it will not be possible to keep paying good wages to employees. In this critical period, wage increases may be the burden that breaks the railroads. If the railroads are crippled, or if government ownership comes, the public will pay and pay and pay.

Make Own Pipes

Afghan tribesmen like long-stemmed tobacco pipes, but seldom carry them on journeys. Instead, they mould a new pipe for each smoke from the mud at their feet. They shape the bowl with their thumbs and ream the stem with a stiff straw in about the time it takes an American to roll a cigarette.

Men Wear Mantillas

It's the men who wear mantillas in Guatemala! Tourists to this colorful country marvel at the Indian's native tribal costumes which consist of brilliantly colored jackets, knee pants and an unusual headdress which looks like a woman's mantilla. They wear bright beads around their necks and arms, too.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Who Are We, Anyway?

Subject came up at Bill Webster's, the other day, as we were chatting over beer and pretzels. Just who are the folks who make up our town? Where'd they come from?

Well, Doc Hollister's Scotch-English ancestry; Will Dudley's folks were mining stock from Pennsylvania; Skip Powell's family were brewers back in Holland.

Guess our bloodstream's got a bit of every country of the globe—and every section of America. We've still got differences in taste and background—whether they apply to music, history, or beer. Only those differences don't matter—because we're self-respecting people, in a free, united land.

And from where I sit, that's what makes our towns and cities—our America—so strong, progressive, tolerant. Our championship of individual liberties has brought us people from all faiths, all lands—to prove that respect for one another's rights is the greatest bond humanity can know!

Tax Rates Climb to New High

Tax rates in Marshall county for 1947 on which basis taxes will be paid this year will show a marked increase in general over the 1946 rates, a comparison of the rate tabulations prepared in in the office of P. E. Kvikstad, county tresurer, reveals, says the Warren Sheaf.

Practically all school district rates in the county increased during the year, due to some extent to the new high school tuition tax which was levied on all farm lands outside of organized high school districts and the general transportation tax which is levied against all property in the county The tuition rate in the country schools is 7.44 mills.

The county tax rate as a whole is 5.31 higher, going up from 51.79 mills in 1946 to 57.1 mills in 1947. The new rate break-down includes: county revenue, 12.49 mills; road and bridge, 14.07 mills; T. B. Sanitorium, 3.00 mills; Bonds and Interest, 7.7 mills; Welfare, 17.29 mills and H. S. Transportation tax, 1.92 mills.

The state tax on Non-homesteads and personal property decreased from 8 05 mills in 1946 to 7.09 mills in 1947 while the state rate on homesteads increased from 1.45 mills in 1946 to 3 02 mills in 1947, the comparison reveals.

Only seven townships and four villages in the county have lower rates in 1947 than did in 1946. These include: East Valley, Fork, Rollis, Viking, Wanger, West Valley and Whiteford townships and Argyle, Holt, Middle River and Oslo villages. Alvarado and Grygla will have the same village rates.

Objective WHEAT

When the objectives were Normandy and Burma and Rome, we expected our sons to get in there and fight. They did. We expected to stand in line for meat and cigarettes . . . to piece out sugar and meat and canned goods. We did it.

Now — there's just as urgent an objective with us . . . to save the peace.

The objective is wheat.

We must avoid wasting food . . . religiously. We must check ourselves on every meatless and eggless day . . . because steers and chickens eat more grain than we do. One egg requires a half pound of precious grain to produce!

The Citizens Food Committee assures success of this program if we all help now. The objective is wheat—and peace.

Save wheat—save meat—save the peace!

Red Lake River Work to Begin

Fifteen years of planning by the Red Lake River Development association will be rewarded soon with start of the Red Lake-Clearwater flood control project.

Contract for the first stage of work was let to the L. Johnson Construction Co. of Minneapolis on a bid of $307,466.

Cost of the completed project is estimated at $2,300,000.

In the first phase of the work, the Red Lake River is to be deepened an average of two feet. River banks will also be raised. The contractor plans to begin brushing immediately. As soon as frost conditions allow, dredging will be started. Mpls. Star

Freight Train Had Wreck

The regular southbound freight train met with an accident on Saturday when a journal box burned out resulting in a wheel coming off and derailing three gondolas of pulp and tipping three box cars. The wreck occured six miles south of Holt. The wrecker and crew from Grand Forks and section crews cleared up the wreck and trains began moving Sunday afternoon.

On Wednesday we had a chance to thaw out after the below zero weather we have had for the past two weeks, when the temperature went down to almost 40 below. However, no one here suffered and everyone enjoyed the mild days so much more than ever.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

January 29 the Nordics were defeated by a powerful Roseau five. Roseau took the lead early in the game and was never headed. The final score ended with Roseau leading 52 to 39.

The following Friday Newfolden defeated their tournament rivials from Stephen. It was a very exciting game with both teams playing very hard. The Nordics took an early lead and were ahead 22 to 18 at half time. A final half rally by Stephen put them ahead 27 to 28. A field goal by Cook of of the Nordics gave Newfolden a one point lead with seconds remaining. Just before the final whistle Stephen droped in a free throw and tied the count at 29-29. A three minute overtime was played in which neither team was able to score. Another overtime period was played in which either team needed but a two point lead to win. A field gcal by Green of Newfolden gave the Nordics a 31 to 29 victory.

Friday January 30 the Nordics will meet Badger at Newfolden. It has the makings of a close game, for eariler this season Badger edged out a victory in a thrilling overtime period.

Rebuild Soil Now While Income Is High, Farmers Told

CHICAGO—Now is the time to build up the soil, while dollars are cheap and farm income is high, according to a statement issued here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Dollars invested in soil replenishing practices such as commercial fertilizers," says the statement, "have greater purchasing power than if they are spent for building or other commodities.

"Prices of mixed fertilizers are 20 per cent below what they might otherwise be, had they increased in proportion to the prices of numerous other commodities analyzed in a study by Iowa State College agricultural economists based on U. S. Department of Commerce figures."

Are You "Hobby Happy?"

Funny thing about hobbies . . . When Ed Carey started making a model of the "Flying Cloud," it was only to rest his eyes from reading. But now he spends every spare moment ship modelling!

Some wives might have resented a husband suddenly shutting himself in the attic every night. But not Ed's Prudence. When she found him working late, she brought him up some beer and crackers . . . showed a real interest in his hobby . . . until finally Ed had her helping with the rigging.

Wasn't long before they were working side by side on Ed's bench, sharing a common interest. Instead of keeping them apart, Ed's hobby brought them more together.

From where I sit, a husband's hobby can often be a wife's as well. In fact, I've got the missus interested in tying trout flies—and, along with that mellow glass of beer, it makes the evenings go by mighty pleasantly.

Why Ships Sink

Steel ships will go to the bottom, since density of iron is greater than water. Pressure in a given region makes iron denser in the same ratio as that of the water, so no matter how deep the water the ship will sink to the bottom.

An Honored Profession

Shoemaking was an honored profession in ancient Egypt. A stone carving 4,000 years old shows an Egyptian shoe factory in operation, with a workman cutting leather soles out of tanned hide.

Present Steel Capacity

Today the capacity of the steel industry is more than 91 million tons of ingots and steel for castings per year. Those are the forms of basic steel from which all steel products must be made.

Move Without Wind

In the poplar, and the "popple" or quaking aspen, the stems are flat and at right angles to the broad leaf, so that a wind that is barely perceptible is enough to move them back and forth.

Protect the Garage

Adequate insulation with a naturally fireproof material is imperative for the garage, particularly if it is attached to the house, most architects agree.

Dark and Bloody Ground

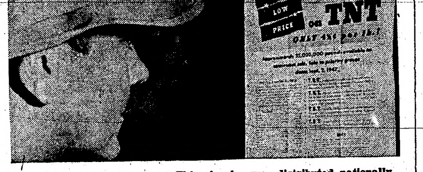
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Warns of Economic Slump, Renews Plea for Control Powers; Nation's Air Power Held Deficient

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



NEW LOW PRICE on TNT

EXPLOSIVE ISSUE . . . This circular was distributed nationally by war assets administration to advertise the sale, "at a new low price," of TNT to any and all buyers, no questions asked. Copies of the circular were brought before Sen. Homer Ferguson's surplus property investigating committee which pointed out that the recently discovered shipments of explosives to Palestine was but a small part of the 11 million pounds sold throughout the country.

ALARUMS:
Boom-Bust

In this season of presidential reports to the nation the alarm bells were jangling for everything from the state of the entire world to the frayed condition of John Doe's back pocket.

And through his "Semi-Annual Economic Report of the President," Mr. Truman sounded the gong ominously on a new note: The impending peril of economic disaster in the U. S.

The nation's economy, he said, is operating on borrowed time and inflation-ridden Americans are operating on borrowed money in a situation flirting with depression.

Millions of persons in the low-income groups, his report pointed out, now are keeping the inflation carousel whirling by liquidating their savings, reducing their current savings and by extensive use of consumer credit.

"Such use of savings for current living expenses is an ominous sign for the economy as a whole."

Without stopping to consider any possible political aspects of the President's economic report, Americans could take it as a sober, realistic picture of what lies beneath the relative luxury in which many of them are existing now.

Exhaustive and complete, the economic survey presented figures notable in that they:

1. Showed for the first time that "real purchasing power" of the American masses—basic factor supporting U. S. economy—has declined 8 per cent since the first quarter of 1946, and that
2. Millions of Americans are living on their savings accounts and borrowing money. Almost one-quarter of all families and more than one-half of families earning less than $2,000 yearly "held no liquid assets in 1947."

Then Mr. Truman tied in these facts with his administration's proposed policy to beat the inflation rap. If inflation, he said, is "permitted to run its own course, it will break with destructive force."

And in order not to let it run its own course the President again urged adoption of his anti-inflation program—limited price and ration controls.

That way, he indicated, lies a new, greater economic era for the U. S. embodying maximum employment and solid and lasting prosperity.

AIR STRENGTH:
'A-Day' 1953

How important is it that the U. S. have a potent, efficient air force? Virtually a matter of life or death, thinks the President's air policy commission which recently reported on the status of the nation's air strength.

Immediate and substantial enlargement of the air force for "survival in the air age" was urged by the commission; and January 1, 1953, was set as "A-day," or the ultimate date when the U. S. might consider itself relatively secure against atomic attack.

After "A-day," the commission intimated, it will be anybody's ball game as far as airborne atom bombs are concerned. "The air force is hopelessly wanting in respect of the future . . . when a serious danger of atomic attack will exist."

On that premise the group recommended that the government start now to spend on the air force in 1948 1.3 billion dollars more than the 2.85 billion currently scheduled for this calendar year, and that in 1949 the total be raised still another 1.3 billion dollars.

For actual air strength the commission said that by 1942 the U. S. should command a total of 12,000 first-line planes, plus more than 8,000 held in reserve.

Although it was extremely unlikely that the air policy commission's recommendations would be adopted in toto by this or any other peacetime congress, the report put realistic emphasis where emphasis belonged. Everyone has been aware that air power is mandatory if the U. S. is to have any degree of national security in an era of feverish atomic-bomb production, and the commission has succeeded in putting that awareness on as factual a basis as is possible now.

OPEN CITY:
Jerusalem

Since apparently nothing can stop the quasi-civil war between Arabs and Jews in Palestine, that country's harrassed government has done the next best thing and requested both factions to spare the holy places of Jerusalem from any depredations they might carry out.

The Palestine government asked the Christian, Moslem and Jewish religious communities to declare Jerusalem's ancient walled area an "open city."

That plea couldn't stop the bloodshed but it could preserve the religious relics sacred to all three of the world's main religions.

Meanwhile, transportation was being made available to evacuate any of the 1,500 Jews still living under Arab siege inside the walls. They are the remnants of 4,000 normal residents of the area.

The walled city contains such holy places as the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, reputed to be the sight of the tomb where the body of Christ was brought for burial; the Via Dolorosa, the route along which Christ bore His cross; the site of Solomon's temple, and the Mosque of Omar, most famous of Moslem holy places.

GASOLINE:
3,000 Years

To the oil industry and the man in the automobile alike the idea of an inexpensive, efficient synthetic gasoline long has been a kind of shining goal somewhere in the distance.

But, according to E. V. Murphree, president of Standard Oil Development company, that ideal now may not be so far off. He has predicted that a synthetic gasoline, produced by a revolutionary fluid catalytic process developed during the war, may power the nation when its gasoline reserve has run out.

Enough gas could be extracted from known coal reserves in the U. S. to drive the nation's cars and airplanes for 3,000 years. Known deposits of common shale, subjected to the catalytic process, will yield 75 billion barrels of oil, Murphree said.

The catalyst, a substance which produces or hastens a chemical reaction, used in the process looks like sand, scientists explained. It is so fine that it flows like water, seeks its own level and thus can be used over and over again.

Refineries producing 1.2 million barrels of fuel daily now employ the process which gives a high yield of high-octane gas. "The importance of such a development may be seen readily when the apparent extent of our crude oil resources is considered in terms of possible future demand," Murphree commented.

SLAUGHTER:
Cattle

Cattle and calves slaughtered at federally inspected plants in the U. S. last year reached new all-time high records, and the number of hogs butchered was the largest since 1944, according to figures made public by the agriculture department.

In 1947 cattle slaughtered totaled 15,523,959, compared with 11,413,325 in 1946. Calves increased to 7,933,437 from 5,842,217, and hogs amounted to 49,115,511.

Wages Up Again

Factory workers earned an average of $50.98 for a 40.5-hour week in October, representing an increase in average hourly earnings from $1.249 in September to $1.257 the following month.

Bureau of labor statistics reported also that the durable goods industries led the way in earnings, advancing to a new record high of $54.66 a week and $1.337 an hour in a work week of 40.9 hours.

Women Squelch Gripers; Put 'Em on Committees

Griping doesn't go in Noel, Mo., and it's a women's organization—of all things—that's putting a stop to it.

"Every time someone growls about a situation," its leader says, "we put them on a committee to straighten it out." "Straightening it out" so far has meant turning the city dump into a public park, providing equipment for city tennis courts, instituting a sanitation and clean-up program, and installing several public drinking fountains.

8 Million Heard Lecture; Paid Some $5,000,000

The most widely heard speech of all time was "Acres of Diamonds," a version of the idea that there are riches in your own back yard, written by the American educator and clergyman, Dr. Russell H. Conwell (1843-1925) says Collier's.

During the last fifty years of his life, Dr. Conwell gave this inspirational lecture in person 6,000 times before 8,000,000 people who paid some $5,000,000 to hear it.

In Fighting Mood

THE echoes and re-echoes of "pure politics," of "political demagogery" and of "out - Wallacing Wallace" which have come from the halls of congress in response to President Truman's state of the union message were to be expected in this year A. D. 1948. For it is an election year.

But with exception of his reference to the Marshall plan and his tax reduction program, every single recommendation in the President's message was contained in his state of the union message in 1946 and again in 1947.

The difference was that this year President Truman was in a fighting mood. Even his voice, if you heard it over the radio, was a challenge to the hostile, silent faces before him in the well of the house of representatives. He was talking, not to those men sitting stolidly in semi-circular rows before him, but over their heads to the people of the nation.

Certainly, it was a political speech. Factually it was his party platform, put forward and nailed on the wall for the Republicans and many hostile Democrats to shoot at six months prior to the party convention in July. President Truman is an experienced politician and he is not so naive as to expect many of his recommendations to pass.

* * *

In early December your Home Town Reporter wrote in this column concerning the President's message, "his message to congress will make a play for the tremendous independent and liberal vote. The dope is his message may include recommendations . . . for legislation in the flavor of the Rooseveltian era." Since then our mail has contained many letters critical of that prediction. In answer we can only point to the President's message itself. Fact is the President had made up his mind on the liberal tenor of his message and our prediction was made long before Henry Wallace became a candidate for the presidency.

* * *

Among the President's major recommendations were extension of social security benefits and coverage, continued farm price supports, more crop insurance, higher minimum wages, strengthening of anti-trust and monopoly laws, and extension of other social and economic reforms originally enacted by the Roosevelt administration.

* * *

Farm Income Gains

The plea for support in agricultural areas will stem mainly from the wholesale prosperity which farmers now are enjoying. Evidence of this prosperity is contained in official figures tabulating gross farm income.

In 1920, generally conceded a prosperous year after World War I, gross farm income totaled $15,908,000,000. In the golden year of 1929 it was $13,824,000,000. Hard hit by the depression, farmers had a gross income of only $7,055,000,000 in 1933. Figures for recent years show gross farm income of $28,133,000,000 in 1946 and $34,000,000,000 in 1947.

Administration adherents, of course attribute this phenomenal gain to the triple A act, the commodity credit corporation act, crop insurance and the principle of parity prices and price supports.

* * *

Campaign Topics

Other social and economic reforms, instigated by the Roosevelt administration, which undoubtedly will be used as political tinder in the coming campaign include: Unemployment insurance, under which 75,300,000 living workers are protected and under which, in 1946, 5,263,000 people drew $1,091,369,000; old age and survivors insurance, under which 1,502,085 retired workers, widows, children and aged drew $338,529,600 in 1946, or an aggregate of $1,039,996,000 since enactment; federal deposit insurance act, protecting deposits of millions of people totaling $156,000,000,000 in about 14,000 banks; federal housing administration, insuring six million homes for a total of nine billion dollars; old age assistance, and numerous other kindred laws.

* * *

Recalling the advertising in newspapers by the National Association of Manufacturers last summer saying that increased production and the throwing off of OPA controls would bring prices down, there is little faith in the same propaganda currently being run by NAM giving 12 points for recovery — one of which would be anti-trust exemptions, which they particularly would like.

* * *

Honorable Discharge

Known from every tiny hamlet in this country to every foreign shore where U. S. troops fought, the United Service organizations (USO) has closed its tour of duty with a resounding "Well done." President Truman awarded an "honorable discharge" to the organization which for seven years provided entertainment and comfort for U. S. armed forces and their allies. "It discharged its wartime responsibility with signal distinction," he said.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To sew a smooth bias seam, baste a piece of paper between the two edges.

Aluminum paint makes an excellent sealer. It will seal in most of the stains and chemicals. Finish later with two coats of good oil paint.

Set your mixing bowl on a damp dish cloth when in use to keep it from slipping.

Use unbleached muslin of heavy quality for pressing cloths. Edges may be left unfinished if desired. To be sure the cloth is lint free, boil the muslin cloth and rinse thoroughly.

Mix whiting and a little lemon juice into a clear paste. Use this as a cleaner for ivory or bone cutlery and you'll be amazed with the results. Leave the mixture on a few moments, then rinse, and polish.

If there's no room in the hem of your skirt for lengthening, try adding a width of ribbon around the waistline. Use a contrasting ribbon. Some of the newer dresses have contrasting waist interest, so you'll be right in style.

Buy your clothes to fit the largest part of your figure. It is much easier to take in a dress than it is to let out the seams.

That murky appearance that comes overnight on mirrors during warm weather can be wiped off with a cloth dampened with ammonia. Then rub dry with a clean cloth.

Why Ships Sink

Steel ships will go to the bottom, since density of iron is greater than water. Pressure in a given region makes iron denser in the same ratio as that of the water, so no matter how deep the water the ship will sink to the bottom.

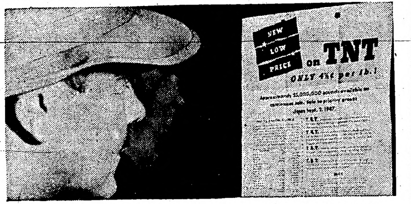
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Warns of Economic Slump, Renews Plea for Control Powers; Nation's Air Power Held Deficient

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



NEW LOW PRICE on TNT
ONLY 4½¢ per lb.!

EXPLOSIVE ISSUE . . . This circular was distributed nationally by war assets administration to advertise the sale, "at a new low price," of TNT to any and all buyers, no questions asked. Copies of the circular were brought before Sen. Homer Ferguson's surplus property investigating committee which pointed out that the recently discovered shipments of explosives to Palestine was but a small part of the 11 million pounds sold throughout the country.

ALARUMS:
Boom-Bust

In this season of presidential reports to the nation the alarm bells were jangling for everything from the state of the entire world to the frayed condition of John Doe's back pocket.

And through his "Semi-Annual Economic Report of the President," Mr. Truman sounded the gong ominously on a new note: The impending peril of economic disaster in the U. S.

The nation's economy, he said, is operating on borrowed time and inflation-ridden Americans are operating on borrowed money in a situation flirting with depression.

Millions of persons in the low-income groups, his report pointed out, now are keeping the inflation carousel whirling by liquidating their savings, reducing their current savings and by extensive use of consumer credit.

"Such use of savings for current living expenses is an ominous sign for the economy as a whole."

Without stopping to consider any possible political aspects of the President's economic report, Americans could take it as a sober, realistic picture of what lies beneath the relative luxury in which many of them are existing now.

Exhaustive and complete, the economic survey presented figures notable in that they:

1. Showed for the first time that "real purchasing power" of the American masses—basic factor supporting U. S. economy—has declined 8 per cent since the first quarter of 1946, and that
2. Millions of Americans are living on their savings accounts and borrowing money. Almost one-quarter of all families and more than one-half of families earning less than $2,000 yearly "held no liquid assets in 1947."

Then Mr. Truman tied in these facts with his administration's proposed policy to beat the inflation rap. If inflation, he said, is "permitted to run its own course, it will break with destructive force."

And in order not to let it run its own course the President again urged adoption of his anti-inflation program—limited price and ration controls.

That way, he indicated, lies a new, greater economic era for the U. S. embodying maximum employment and solid and lasting prosperity.

AIR STRENGTH:
'A-Day' 1953

How important is it that the U. S. have a potent, efficient air force? Virtually a matter of life or death, thinks the President's air policy commission which recently reported on the status of the nation's air strength.

Immediate and substantial enlargement of the air force for "survival in the air age" was urged by the commission; and January 1, 1953, was set as "A-day," or the ultimate date when the U. S. might consider itself relatively secure against atomic attack.

After "A-day," the commission intimated, it will be anybody's ball game as far as airborne atom bombs are concerned. "The air force is hopelessly wanting in respect of the future . . . when a serious danger of atomic attack will exist."

On that premise the group recommended that the government start now to spend on the air force in 1948 1.3 billion dollars more than the 2.85 billion currently scheduled for this calendar year, and that in 1949 the total be raised still another 1.3 billion dollars.

For actual air strength the commission said that by 1942 the U. S. should command a total of 12,000 first-line planes, plus more than 8,000 held in reserve.

Although it was extremely unlikely that the air policy commission's recommendations would be adopted in toto by this or any other peacetime congress, the report put realistic emphasis where emphasis belonged. Everyone has been aware that air power is mandatory if the U. S. is to have any degree of national security in an era of feverish atomic-bomb production, and the commission has succeeded in putting that awareness on as factual a basis as is possible now.

OPEN CITY:
Jerusalem

Since apparently nothing can stop the quasi-civil war between Arabs and Jews in Palestine, that country's harrassed government has done the next best thing and requested both factions to spare the holy places of Jerusalem from any depredations they might carry out.

The Palestine government asked the Christian, Moslem and Jewish religious communities to declare Jerusalem's ancient walled area an "open city."

That plea couldn't stop the bloodshed but it could preserve the religious relics sacred to all three of the world's main religions.

Meanwhile, transportation was being made available to evacuate any of the 1,500 Jews still living under Arab siege inside the walls. They are the remnants of 4,000 normal residents of the area.

The walled city contains such holy places as the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, reputed to be the sight of the tomb where the body of Christ was brought for burial; the Via Dolorosa, the route along which Christ bore His cross; the site of Solomon's temple, and the Mosque of Omar, most famous of Moslem holy places.

GASOLINE:
3,000 Years

To the oil industry and the man in the automobile alike the idea of an inexpensive, efficient synthetic gasoline long has been a kind of shining goal somewhere in the distance.

But, according to E. V. Murphree, president of Standard Oil Development company, that ideal now may not be so far off. He has predicted that a synthetic gasoline, produced by a revolutionary fluid catalytic process developed during the war, may power the nation when its gasoline reserve has run out.

Enough gas could be extracted from known coal reserves in the U. S. to drive the nation's cars and airplanes for 3,000 years. Known deposits of common shale, subjected to the catalytic process, will yield 75 billion barrels of oil, Murphree said.

The catalyst, a substance which produces or hastens a chemical reaction, used in the process looks like sand, scientists explained. It is so fine that it flows like water, seeks its own level and thus can be used over and over again.

Refineries producing 1.2 million barrels of fuel daily now employ the process which gives a high yield of high-octane gas. "The importance of such a development may be seen readily when the apparent extent of our crude oil resources is considered in terms of possible future demand," Murphree commented.

SLAUGHTER:
Cattle

Cattle and calves slaughtered at federally inspected plants in the U. S. last year reached new all-time high records, and the number of hogs butchered was the largest since 1944, according to figures made public by the agriculture department.

In 1947 cattle slaughtered totaled 15,523,959, compared with 11,413,325 in 1946. Calves increased to 7,933,437 from 5,842,217, and hogs amounted to 49,115,511.

Wages Up Again

Factory workers earned an average of $50.98 for a 40.5-hour week in October, representing an increase in average hourly earnings from $1.249 in September to $1.257 the following month.

Bureau of labor statistics reported also that the durable goods industries led the way in earnings, advancing to a new record high of $54.66 a week and $1.337 an hour in a work week of 40.9 hours.

Women Squelch Gripers; Put 'Em on Committees

Griping doesn't go in Noel, Mo., and it's a women's organization—of all things—that's putting a stop to it.

"Every time someone growls about a situation," its leader says, "we put them on a committee to straighten it out." "Straightening it out" so far has meant turning the city dump into a public park, providing equipment for city tennis courts, instituting a sanitation and clean-up program, and installing several public drinking fountains.

8 Million Heard Lecture; Paid Some $5,000,000

The most widely heard speech of all time was "Acres of Diamonds," a version of the idea that there are riches in your own back yard, written by the American educator and clergyman, Dr. Russell H. Conwell (1843-1925) says Collier's.

During the last fifty years of his life, Dr. Conwell gave this inspirational lecture in person 6,000 times before 8,000,000 people who paid some $5,000,000 to hear it.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON

WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

In Fighting Mood

THE echoes and re-echoes of "pure politics," of "political demagogery" and of "out-Wallacing Wallace" which have come from the halls of congress in response to President Truman's state of the union message were to be expected in this year A. D. 1948. For it is an election year.

But with exception of his reference to the Marshall plan and his tax reduction program, every single recommendation in the President's message was contained in his state of the union message in 1946 and again in 1947.

The difference was that this year President Truman was in a fighting mood. Even his voice, if you heard it over the radio, was a challenge to the hostile, silent faces before him in the well of the house of representatives. He was talking, not to those men sitting stolidly in semi-circular rows before him, but over their heads to the people of the nation.

Certainly, it was a political speech. Factually it was his party platform, put forward and nailed on the wall for the Republicans and many hostile Democrats to shoot at six months prior to the party convention in July. President Truman is an experienced politician and he is not so naive as to expect many of his recommendations to pass.

* * *

In early December your Home Town Reporter wrote in this column concerning the President's message, "his message to congress will make a play for the tremendous independent and liberal vote. The dope is his message may include recommendations . . . for legislation in the flavor of the Rooseveltian era." Since then our mail has contained many letters critical of that prediction. In answer we can only point to the President's message itself. Fact is the President had made up his mind on the liberal tenor of his message and our prediction was made long before Henry Wallace became a candidate for the presidency.

* * *

Among the President's major recommendations were extension of social security benefits and coverage, continued farm price supports, more crop insurance, higher minimum wages, strengthening of anti-trust and monopoly laws, and extension of other social and economic reforms originally enacted by the Roosevelt administration.

* * *

Farm Income Gains

The plea for support in agricultural areas will stem mainly from the wholesale prosperity which farmers now are enjoying. Evidence of this prosperity is contained in official figures tabulating gross farm income.

In 1920, generally conceded a prosperous year after World War I, gross farm income totaled $15,908,000,000. In the golden year of 1929 it was $13,824,000,000. Hard hit by the depression, farmers had a gross income of only $7,055,000,000 in 1933. Figures for recent years show gross farm income of $28,133,000,000 in 1946 and $34,000,000,000 in 1947.

Administration adherents, of course attribute this phenomenal gain to the triple A act, the commodity credit corporation act, crop insurance and the principle of parity prices and price supports.

* * *

Campaign Topics

Other social and economic reforms, instigated by the Roosevelt administration, which undoubtedly will be used as political tinder in the coming campaign include: Unemployment insurance, under which 75,300,000 living workers are protected and under which, in 1946, 5,263,000 people drew $1,091,369,000; old age and survivors insurance, under which 1,502,035 retired workers, widows, children and aged drew $338,529,600 in 1946, or an aggregate of $1,039,996,000 since enactment; federal deposit insurance act, protecting deposits of millions of people totaling $156,000,000,000 in about 14,000 banks; federal housing administration, insuring six million homes for a total of nine billion dollars; old age assistance, and numerous other kindred laws.

* * *

Recalling the advertising in newspapers by the National Association of Manufacturers last summer saying that increased production and the throwing off of OPA controls would bring prices down, there is little faith in the same propaganda currently being run by NAM giving 12 points for recovery — one of which would be anti-trust exemptions, which they particularly would like.

* * *

Honorable Discharge

Known from every tiny hamlet in this country to every foreign shore where U. S. troops fought, the United Service organizations (USO) has closed its tour of duty with a resounding "Well done." President Truman awarded an "honorable discharge" to the organization which for seven years provided entertainment and comfort for U. S. armed forces and their allies. "It discharged its wartime responsibility with signal distinction," he said.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To sew a smooth bias seam, baste a piece of paper between the two edges.

Aluminum paint makes an excellent sealer. It will seal in most of the stains and chemicals. Finish later with two coats of good oil paint.

Set your mixing bowl on a damp dish cloth when in use to keep it from slipping.

Use unbleached muslin of heavy quality for pressing cloths. Edges may be left unfinished if desired. To be sure the cloth is lint free, boil the muslin cloth and rinse thoroughly.

Mix whiting and a little lemon juice into a clear paste. Use this as a cleaner for ivory or bone cutlery and you'll be amazed with the results. Leave the mixture on a few moments, then rinse, and polish.

If there's no room in the hem of your skirt for lengthening, try adding a width of ribbon around the waistline. Use a contrasting ribbon. Some of the newer dresses have contrasting waist interest, so you'll be right in style.

Buy your clothes to fit the largest part of your figure. It is much easier to take in a dress than it is to let out the seams.

That murky appearance that comes overnight on mirrors during warm weather can be wiped off with a cloth dampened with ammonia. Then rub dry with a clean cloth.

Public Opinion Column

The young people of Holt and surrounding territory are badly in need of a place of recreation. Several promises have been made concerning a teen-age entertainment center but so far nothing has been done. It is fine for the men and women of the community to have a place to shoot pool, play cards etc., but they neglect their children and then wonder why they walk the streets.

The 4-H club lacks the support and leadership necessary to make the club function properly. Excuses are handed us by our parents and other people of our community as to why they can't come to 4-H club.

We've heard talk of making the old hall, into a teen-center but it seems it cost too much money but wouldn't it cost more to have a group of juvenile delinquents on your hands? So if you expect to your children to have any faith in you act instead talk!

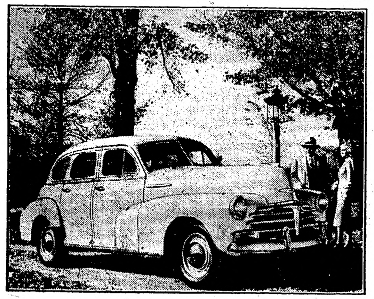
1948 Chevrolet is Massive



The over-all simplicity and massiveness of the new, 1948 Chevrolet is well shown in this three-quarter view of the Fleetmaster Sport Sedan. Fenders, hood, body and door panels all blend; and the crease moulding, below the windows, is wider than that used in previous models. Note the new T-shaped chrome center bar on the radiator grille.

Claim Antarctic

Maps listing Antarctic explorations show no less than nine nations with claims to parts of the vast frozen area. They range from Amundsen's 1911 claim in behalf of Norway for an area with a radius of 110 miles from the South Pole itself to a pinpoint on the Ross Ice Shelf claimed by Shirase for Japan in 1912. The other interested nations, besides the United States and Great Britain, are Australia, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia.

Refinishing Gilt Frames

To refinish a gilt frame, first sand with very fine sandpaper, then apply a high-grade gold size. When the size has partially dried, but is still tacky, apply the best quality dry gold bronze. Dust it on and wipe off the surplus with a soft cotton wad. After allowing this to dry for several days, finish with a thin coat of pure. white shellac greatly reduced with denatured alcohol. This should keep the bronze from tarnishing for many years.

SUPPLEMENT TO HOLT WEEKLY NEWS, HOLT MINN., Friday, Jan. 30, 1948

Proceedings of the County Board, Marshall County

Annual Meeting held January 6th and 7th, 1948.

Meeting was called to order by the County Auditor at 10 o'clock A. M. on Tuesday, January 6th, 1948, and all members of the board were present.

Meeting was adjourned to Wednesday, January 7th.

Meeting re-convened Wednesday, January 7th at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Commissioners selected names from the list of qualified voters of the county to serve as Petit Jurors in the District Court in and for the County of Marshall.

Pursuant to notice hearing was held in the matter of Repair of County Ditch No. 23.

This matter having come regularly before the county board of Marshall County on January 7th, 1948 at its office in the court house in the city of Warren, said county, at one o'clock in the afternoon, the matter being a hearing on the petition for the repair of said ditch and a hearing on the engineer's report, duly filed herein; and the board having duly considered said matter and heard all of the testimony in reference thereto, finds as follows:

1. That said ditch is out of repair and is badly in need of repair.
2. That said ditch does not now function and does not now serve the purpose for which it was originally constructed.
3. That the owners of more than 26 per cent of the area of the property affected by said ditch and which was assessed for the original construction thereof signed the petition for the repair of said ditch, which is on file.

Upon due consideration it is ordered that the petition be granted and that said ditch be repaired, and that the engineer's report filed herein be and the same is hereby confirmed and adopted, and that all such repairs be made in accordance with and pursuant to said engineer's report, and that the proper legal authorities forthwith proceed to let a contract for the repair of said ditch in accordance with said engineer's report, and that all proceedings herein be had pursuant to law.

Dated January 7, 1948.

Wifey—You know, dear, I speak as I think.

Hubby—Yes, my sweet, only a little oftener.

Dry Cleaned?

Junior — How long have you had your baby, Mrs. Jones?

Proud Mother—Three months.

Junior — You certainly have kept her nice. She looks just like new.

Worse Luck

Wife—I'll have you know that my mother came from a very fine family.

Hubby—That's all right except she brought it with her.

Star Boarder

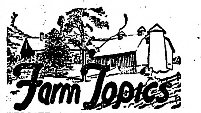
New Tenant—I'll have you know I pay as I go.

Landlord — Not here you don't. You'll pay as you come in.

Just Tighter

Tit — What's the difference between a dress tie and a noose?

Tat—The noose is worn without a collar.



Erosion Prevented By Sound Practice

Growing Crops Help In Saving the Soil

By W. J. DRYDEN

The late spring floods and heavy rains made many farmers realize that losses from water erosion can be serious. Michigan State college specialists list four rules to reduce water erosion on farm land.

1. Never leave the ground bare longer than necessary. Vegetation is important over the winter.
2. As the slope of the land increases, use more crops of grass and small grains and fewer cultivated crops.
3. If medium sloping land is cultivated, practice strip cropping, cross slope seeding and tilling, and use sod waterways and terraces.
4. Keep the soil in as high a state of fertility as possible. Add lime where necessary, use commercial fertilizers and add humus through natural manures, green manures or crop residues.

Soil Building

The difference between soil building and soil mining is shown in the chart below. Soil building means increasing the soil's organic matter and plant food supply and maintaining high crop yields. It means feeding the soil and letting the soil feed the crops, rather than trying to feed each individual crop.

The comparative results shown here were obtained at the Ewing soil experiment field in Illinois. One plot has had no soil treatment since the field was established in 1910. The other plot has had large amounts of lime, phosphate and potash to get heavy stands of deep-rooted legumes. Corn stalks have been returned to this plot. The rotation on both plots has been corn, oats, clover and wheat.

Crop yields covering a four-year rotation tell the story. Corn production on the fertilized plot was four times greater than on the untreated field; oats nearly four times and wheat about eight times greater. Clover yield on the fertilized plot was 1.9 tons per acre; the untreated plot is too acid to grow legumes.

Despite the greater amounts of nitrogen and organic matter used in producing the higher yields, the fertilized plot still contains 4½ tons more organic matter and 460 pounds more nitrogen than the untreated field.

Don't Eat Enough Fruit

Surveys show United States workers don't eat enough fruit. Try dipping pears in a mixture of lemon juice and sugar, then in melted fat. Roll in toasted wheat flakes and bake in moderate oven until tender. Serve with a sweet or sour sauce—or make dessert fruit salads and serve with real mayonnaise. Both are good ways to get more fruit in the diet.

Flax Good Cash Crop

Flax again maintained its position as the Northwest's number one cash crop, according to the final 1947 Government crop report.

Not only did it demonstrate its superiority over other cash crops, but in North Dakota, South Dakota and Iowa flax even surpassed corn in value per acre. Closest competition from small grains came from wheat and barley.

Unfavorable weather conditions in many areas caused most crop yields to decline somewhat from 1946. This, however, had little effect upon the nation's flax production. New varieties and improved farming methods are given credit for boosting the average flax yield to 9.9 bushels per acre. This is the highest yield in more than 30 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Toivo Turra visited at the Rude Christenson home Wednesday evening.

The following helped Gary Dean Lillevold celebrate his 4th birthday on Wednesday: Jacky, Joan, Diana and Carol Reed and Leon, Bonnie and Mary Ann Horien.

Mrs. V. E. Johnson visited friends at Grand Forks last week.

Strengthen Edges

Lock-stitched edges on terry cloth towels and other loosely woven textiles should be strengthened with a row or two of machine stitching.

Estimating Board Feet

You can estimate the number of board feet in a 16-foot log quite closely by subtracting four from the diameter at the top end of the log and squaring the number obtained. For instance, take a 16 foot log measuring 24 inches. After subtracting 4, the remainder 20 is squared and the answer is 400, whch is the number of board feet in the log. Other lengths are judged proportionately. An 8 foot log would contain half as many board feet as a 16 foot log, and a 12 foot would contain three-fourths as many.

Moved by Larson and seconded by Ness that the Annual Reports of the Village Clerk and Village Treasurer be accepted and that the Village Clerk's report be published in the Holt Weekly News.

Motion carried.

Moved by Fricker and seconded by Larson that the License fees for the year of 1948 be set as follows, On Sale 3.2 Beer $100.00 per year payable semi-annually.

Off Sale 3.2 Beer $5.00 per year.

Cigarette License $12.00 per year or $1.00 per month. Motion carried.

Moved by Fricker and seconded by Larson that the following license applications be approved -

On Sale 3.2 Beer - Wm. Kawski.
Off Sale 3.2 Beer:
Wm. Kawski
Johnson Bros.
Cigarette:
Wm. Kawski
Johnson Bros.
Glenn Bernstein
Albert Bennes

Motion carried.

The report of the Holt Sportsmen's Club covering material and labor spent on the Village Hall was read and filed.

Moved by Fricker and seconded by Larson that the report be accepted and that the Holt Sportsmen's Club be given credit on the amount of $300.00 for material and labor spent towards rent to be paid for the use of Village Hall. Said report to include items to 1-1-48.

Motion carried.

There being no further business a motion was made and carried to adjourn.

Geo. Fricker, Village Clerk.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

Friday January 30 the Nordics defeated Badger on the Newfolden floor. Badger took an early lead but was soon overtaken and never threatend tne Nordics again. Badger found tne basket for two field goals before the Nordics could get going. In the second quater the Nordics began to go and jumped off with a halftime margin of 22 to 11. The third and forth quaters were also in favor of the Nordics. The final score ended with the Nordics taking a 39 to 22 victory.

Tuesday Feb. 3 the Nordics won when they defeated Lake Bronson 65 to 32 having their best shooting night of the season Nordtcs jumped off with a half time lead of 23 to 6. The third quarter was more loosely played but in the third quarter the Nordics raked up 36 points to Lake Bronson's 5.

Tuesday Feb. 10 the Nordics will play a strong Karlstad team on the Newfolden floor.

Mrs. Sam Lorentson left last week for Portland, Oregon to visit relatives.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Publishes German Documents As Anti-Russian Propaganda Blow; Hoover Proposes Foreign Aid Cut

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

COLD WAR
New Propaganda

The celebrated "cold war" has been enriched by another U. S. propaganda strike, probably the heaviest yet, against Russia.

It took the form of official state department publication of captured German foreign office records revealing the extent and nature of Nazi-Soviet relations from 1939 to 1941, the period covered by the non-aggression pact between the two nations which ended when Hitler attacked Russia on June 22, 1941.

In the light of the U. S.-Russian wartime alliance, the Nazi documents, published in book form, tell a sordid story of secret agreements, global gambling with nations for stakes and the feverish fetish of political expediency which gripped the minds of German and Russian leaders before and during the war.

High point of the hitherto secret dossier was the revelation that in 1940 Adolf Hitler and V. M. Molotov of Russia agreed that Britain and the U. S. must be excluded from Europe, Asia and Africa.

The book told also how, in 1940, Stalin had offered to join the German-Italian-Japanese axis if Hitler would give Russia a free hand in Finland, a military base near the Dardanelles and a dominant voice in the oil-rich Middle East. Then the documents show how Hitler, disdaining even to answer Stalin's proposition, ordered his armies to prepare "to crush Soviet Russia in a quick campaign."

One of the major factors which precipitated the German attack on Russia was the Soviet demand for dominant control of the Balkans. Hitler, who was as aware as any man of the political, economic and strategic value of the pivotal Balkan area, turned thumbs down on that Russian desire also.

Sum and substance of the state department's spectacular publication of the Nazi documents was little more than an emphatic indication of an already well-known fact: That Russia, with aggressive consistency, has been hungering for years for leadership in the Balkans, for new pre-eminence in the Dardanelles, for expansion in Central Asia and for a free hand in Finland and Poland.

Value of the publication of these documents at this time is questionable, despite the flagrantly apparent anti-Russian propaganda they can and will inspire. State department's action obviously was aimed at rallying public support behind the Marshall plan, soon to come up for congressional action, but it also would serve to aggravate and inflame the already dangerously touchy "cold war."

DOLLARS:
Lordly

Just about the only record that Britons are interested in having broken when the revived Olympic games take place this summer is the one for the number of American dollars spent in England.

While Great Britain's campaign to earn dollars in large quantities covers virtually every field from racing dogs to Rolls Royces, it is the American tourist who is getting the lion's share of attention at the moment.

Harold Wilson, president of the British board of trade, minced no words when he said with quiet desperation:

"Quite frankly, we are going to discriminate between tourists who are bringing in dollars and those who are not."

There will be special concessions made for the people with dollars in their pockets. Certain hotels, Wilson implied, will be favored with special food supplies, fuel and labor for the purpose of catering to American tourists.

Opposition to this plan is being expressed, with some fury, as a combination of the inherent British love of fair play plus a general criticism of the Labor government's policies.

Editorialized the London Daily Mail: "As a bald exposition of the art of exploitation, this (Wilson's) statement would be hard to beat. Here is the profit motive in all its blatancy, expounded by a minister whose party exists to repudiate it.

"What about visitors from other countries—including the dominions? Are we to cold-shoulder their francs, lire, guilders or pounds while we rush forward in obsequious welcome to the lordly dollar?"

POLAR DATA:
The Race

Congressional sources have reported that Russian and American military planes have been competing at the top of the world for vital weather information with regular flights over the North pole.

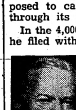
The Soviet flights apparently are made from Siberia, while U. S. planes operate from Ladd Field, Fairbanks, Alaska. Russian planes also were said to be carrying out weather data flights over Alaska.

Balancing Act

Perplexed in the extreme was Rene Mayer, French minister of finance, who was caught in this pose as he explained to French newsmen the new fiscal measures adopted by the government and the method he will use in an attempt to balance France's 1948 budget.

FOREIGN AID:
Hoover Plan

Herbert Hoover, former U. S. president, has urged congress not to commit this nation—even "morally"—to a four-year European recovery program, and advised a reduction of the 6.8-billion-dollar outlay proposed to carry the Marshall plan through its first 15 months.



Hoover

In the 4,000-word statement which he filed with the senate foreign relations committee Hoover expressed his opposition views to the administration's foreign aid plans.

Of greater significance, however, was the fact that Hoover's own opinions amounted to a documentary of the entire right-wing, conservative element of thinking which rejects an "internationalist" foreign policy on the grounds that U. S. resources should be concentrated at home.

Decrying even a "moral commitment" for the four-year period contemplated in the state department's proposals, he asserted the U. S. should keep itself entirely free "to end our efforts without recrimination."

He expressed, too, the fear that a lavish outpouring of aid would weaken the American economy to the extent that all world recovery would be defeated.

The volume of exports and funds proposed in the Marshall plan, he opined, might aggravate the already serious inflation, draining our national resources and continuing high tax rates, "all of which might bring depression and thus destroy the strength of the one remaining source of aid to a world of chaos."

Hoover recommended further that the Marshall plan, if it is adopted, be run by a bipartisan commission, and suggested that up to three billion dollars in food, coal, fertilizers and cotton be labeled frankly as "gifts" because unsecured loans "will not and cannot be repaid."

REFUSAL:
Prediction

About all the average U. S. citizen knows about Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is that he either will or will not get into the campaign for the Republican presidential nomination this year.

But Roy A. Roberts, president of the Kansas City Star and leading promoter of pro-Eisenhower sentiment, now says he definitely will not.

Roberts' prediction was that the general soon would remove himself from all consideration along those lines. Said Roberts:

"I'll venture a guess that before June the general may take himself completely out of the political picture. I am sure the message will come when he lays aside his military uniform February 15."

He emphasized, though, that he was not speaking for Eisenhower.

With Alf Landon, 1936 Republican presidential nominee, Roberts had been doing most of the political drum-beating for Eisenhower.

Rubber Bill

Legislation to establish a permanent, government-regulated American rubber industry with a 675,000-ton annual capacity and a required annual production of at least 225,000 tons a year has been introduced by Rep. Paul Shafer (Rep., Mich.).

The bill refers throughout to the product in question as "American-made rubber." The word "synthetic," as the term for factory made rubber, is not mentioned.

Principality of Atlantis Out to Prove Island Real

The world's oldest controversy concerns Atlantis, a legendary island in the west, beyond the Pillars of Hercules, mentioned by Plato, Pliny and other ancient writers, and said to ha vebnedeen stroyed by an earthquake 11,000 years ago, says Colliers'.

As the story was unheard of until 600 B. C., most people have considered it a myth. But others have believed it; and the issue is still alive after 25 centuries. The latest attempt to prove this island existed was undertaken by a society formed in Denmark in 1933. Calling itself the Principality of Atlantis the organization soon had a monarch, a flag, currency, postage stamps and 25,000 members.

King, Though Absolute Monarch, Up for Trial

Although King Ibn-Saud of Saudi Arabia is an absolute monarch, any of his subjects may have him brought to court. In one such recent trial, he was accused of breaking a Koranic law by leasing oil lands to infidels. The king appeared and won the case by claiming he was obeying the will of the Prophet by making his country prosperous. In the past 10 years, it is estimated, royalties resulting from these leases have totaled more than $200,000,000.

FIVE-STAR WINNER . . . The five-point program of the Tupelo, Miss., Rural Community Development council forms the theme of this community booth, which won first place over 18 entries at the 1947 Mississippi-Alabama fair. Dairying, cotton, truck farming, poultry and forestry are the points emphasized by the council in its plea for diversified farming.

SMALL TOWNS, U.S.A.

Mississippi Project Sets Pattern in Rural Planning

By EARLE HITCH
Released by WNU Features.

Country life must be made hopeful, healthy and happy if rural regions are to continue as the main source of our national strength. One of the major phases in the revamping of that rural pattern of living is the expansion of rural occupations. For the first time since the factory system put an end to handicrafts in the home and village shops, economic development is taking a turn favorable to the rural environment.

Rural America At Stake
No. 5
In a Series

For more than a century it has been otherwise. Rural enterprise, limited to farming and a dwindling retail trade, followed the path of non-resistance. Outside of the fertile farm belts and the mill towns of the upper South, country income has been declining as the land wore out and the people left for jobs in the city. Now, there are reasons to believe, that trend can be halted. Invention and discovery offer the earning opportunities for which the country has been waiting.

Spinning and churning are gone; likewise, old-fashioned tanning and butchering, milling and hoeing. But those lost occupations, sorely missed in the small farm communities, can be replaced. There is new and better work to be done, both on the land and in the local mills and plants. The community which wishes to increase the earning capacities of its population can do so.

New Pattern Evolves.

Wasted land can be restored and used for new kinds of small-farm tillage. New production systems, plus the extension of rural power lines, give country manufacture an edge it never has had before. These things, of course, cannot be brought about on a community-wide scale without careful planning and determined leadership. They are most effective when they are undertaken with a long range program for community development.

Rural economic problems are still too much neglected. Only a few intelligent and patient attempts have been made to find durable solutions. Consequently the plans that are succeeding are important not only as local programs, but also as patterns for other places, for there are vast areas of rural America which need some kind of economic rescue.

The most successful plans have to be adapted to particular conditions. Consumer tastes, market locations and the job of organizing public support have to be taken into consideration along with restoring the land and finding out what can be produced by the farmers and the other labor supply. This will take business backing and business management. It never has been sufficient to make a plan and count on it to work by popular voluntary support.

Ambitious Tupelo Project.

Tupelo, Miss., has one of the most energetic and far-reaching plans in the country. It is a plan not for Tupelo primarily, but for the large rural area of which Tupelo is the center. The project is especially valuable from the fact that it is not limited to dealing with present rural problems, but also is looking ahead to problems that probably must be faced in the future.

The Tupelo program is no sudden outburst of enthusiasm. It has been several years in maturing, and it is the more effective now for having made progress with caution. It has not started to go anywhere until its supporters believe it is in their power to help it get there.

Chief aims are to encourage new types of farming, especially types that will aid in soil enrichment and at the same time yield better income to the small hill farmers. Poultry and fruit growing are being emphasized, and dairying has been backed for a number of years. To aid in getting this work started and to keep it going, several specialists have been hired with funds contributed by the program's backers.

Chief factor in success of the Tupelo plan is the kind of sponsorship it has. The leadership and the full influence of the Tupelo Daily Journal and its publisher, George McLean, are supporting the project. The Daily Journal has guaranteed the funds necessary for the first three years' activities. The Chamber of Commerce, of which McLean now is president, is doing its part by financing a special program in horticulture, which is allied with the plan in general.

Community Backing.

In previous years banks and business men have helped introduce dairying and better dairy breeds. Tupelo business men realize that business will thrive and their town will grow to the extent that the entire community prospers. They are convinced that there should be more earning opportunities on the farms and in the rural neighborhoods. They are helping not only to build up a better farming industry, but also to promote new town industries that will make assured markets for things produced on the better farms.

The plan that has been developed covers five counties and is the biggest rural community development plan in the United States, in the number of people it affects and the extent of its program. It already is demonstrating how small farming resources can be improved when energy and imagination are applied.

The next article will give details that were followed in establishing the Tupelo plan.

Women Uphold Law On Idaho's Frontier

BURLEY, IDA.—Women still uphold the law in Idaho. When the only woman deputy sheriff in the state resigned to get married, Sheriff Saul Clark promptly appointed another woman to take her place.

Marjorie Philbrook resigned as deputy sheriff to marry Cleve Johnson, state highway patrolman, so the sheriff gave her job to Mrs. Barbara Lindsay.

Seedy Party

SHENANDOAH, IOWA.—When a local seed company provided its employes with a watermelon treat, it was strictly a matter of business. The company wanted the seeds.

Chapel to Mark Bravery of Chaplains

PHILADELPHIA. — The bravery of four wartime chaplains, two Protestants, a Roman Catholic and a Jew, who gave up their lifebelts on a sinking troopship and were last seen standing together, arm in arm, their heads bowed in prayer, will be commemorated in a chapel being built here under sponsorship of the Philadelphia interfaith sponsoring committee.

The shrine, which will be known as the "Chapel of the Four Chaplains," will be open 24 hours a day and will provide facilities for the worship of Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic faiths. Approximately $150,000 has been raised for the chapel.

The chaplains were among 1,100 troops aboard the Dorchester, a troopship en route to Europe, when it was torpedoed and sunk in the North Atlantic on February 3, 1943.

AGRICULTURAL WEED-NO-MORE
TRADE MARK
A Proven Ester Formulation of 2,4-D

The new miracle chemical 2,4-D in Agricultural Weed-No-More, brings you the practical, low-cost way to kill weeds in growing small grains.

Spraying Agricultural Weed-No-More on young corn is faster than cultivating, kills weeds right up to the corn plants, makes row-planting practical.

On pastures, fence rows, ditch banks, and grassed waterways, Agricultural Weed-No-More kills many weeds, roots and all.

Agricultural Weed-No-More goes on fast—covers 7 to 15 acres per hour. It goes far, too—¼ pint to 2 pints in only 5 gallons of water treats 1 acre! Apply it by the new low-gallonage method developed and proved by Sherwin-Williams Research. Use a simple, low-cost rig that you or any local shop can quickly assemble.

AGRICULTURAL WEED-NO-MORE
Costs less per acre because it controls weeds more effectively!
Agricultural authorities have found that the ester forms of 2,4-D used in Agricultural Weed-No-More penetrate weed leaves within 5 minutes, do not wash off, mix easily with water, won't clog or corrode spray equipment, and are harmless to stock. Agricultural Weed-No-More has been proved on more than 500,000 acres.

SEE WEED-NO-MORE AT WORK IN NEW SOUND MOVIE
Ask your county agent, vo-ag teacher or farm supply dealer to arrange for you and your neighbors to see "Agriculture's New Conquest." It will show you how you can boost yields and profits with 2,4-D.

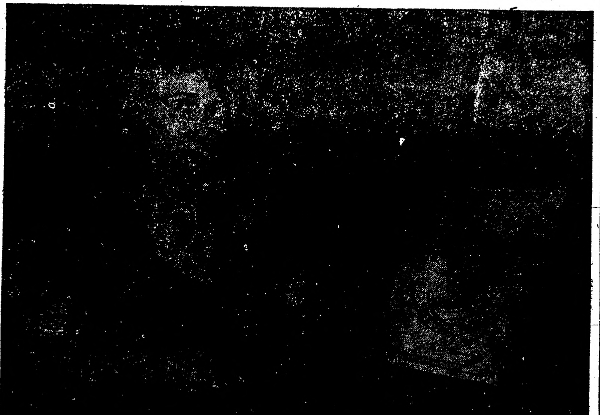
Nation's First Lady Pledges White House to Save Food



Millions of American homemakers are emulating the example of Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the President, in observing meatless Tuesday and eggless Thursday at America's First Home. Here the First Lady is shown at the White House after she signed the pledge to "save wheat, save meat and save the peace." Under Mrs. Truman's supervision, the White House is doing its part as an American home dedicated toward helping to provide food for the undernourished families of Western Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carlson called at the Oscar Christenson home Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ness and family visited at the Oliver Grondahl home Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Grondahl and family were visitors at the Hilmer Davidson home Sunday.

Crooked Stitching

Rip out and restitch any broken, knotty, drawn or crooked stitching.

Seams: Narrow seams may need to be stitched deeper to make them hold. If the material isn't frayed too badly, a simple overcasting of the raw edges may make a seam secure. If it frays readily, however, it's better to run a row of stitching near the outside edge.

Deviled Egg-Noodles Casserole Tasty Dish

"Folks will be asking for the recipe after they've tasted this deviled egg and noodle casserole," says Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of Capper's Farmer, one of the leading farm magazines.

"You'll tell them there's no trick to making it," she writes in the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families.

DEVILED EGGS AND NOODLES

2 c. uncooked noodles
6 hard-cooked eggs
2 tbsp. mayonnaise
1 tsp. vinegar
¼ tsp. paprika
¼ tsp. dry mustard
Salt and pepper
4 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
1 tsp. salt
2 c. milk
1 c. cheese cracker crumbs
2 tbsp. melted butter

Drop noodles into boiling salted water and cook until tender. Drain in strainer and rinse with cold water. Place in buttered casserole or six individual baking dishes. Cut eggs in half. Remove and mash yolks, mix in mayonnaise, vinegar, paprika, mustard, salt and pepper. Fill egg whites and place on top of noodles. To make white sauce, melt butter, blend in flour and salt. Add milk and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour sauce over eggs and noodles. Top with crumbs mixed with melted butter. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) 20 minutes. Six servings.

Mrs. Lawrence Christenson and Laurel Lee left by airplane for Anchorage, Alaska after spending several months here.

Rule Book for Civilization

Like thousands of other Americans in 1941 I bought a new car. I got an Oldsmobile. I am still using the car and getting good service out of it, and I believe I know why. A book of instructions came with it, and because I believed the people who made the car could tell me a great deal about how to run it, I studied that book carefully. I got excellent service from the automobile throughout the entire war, and am still using it.

I believe that happened because I followed the instructions of those who made the Oldsmobile. Doing that, I could expect to get good service. The whole idea seemed like good logic to me. May I submit an application for this homemade parable? If this principle works with automobiles, it should have some merit when applied to things larger and more important. Will you follow me in this application?

Handbook for Mortals

The Bible is the book of instructions from the Creator who made the world and the fullness thereof. It is the book containing the laws, rules, and advice that we mortals should read and study in order that we may know how to proceed. It is the instruction book on how to operate that part of the Creator's handiwork with which we are involved. Careful study of this instruction book will bring great dividends.

I am glad to live in a land where a National Bible Week finds enthusiastic support. This year October 20 to 26 has been so designated. Did you know that twelve of the thirteen little colonies planted along the Atlantic seaboard were founded by people who came to America seeking religious freedom? Their lives were guided and dominated by the Bible. But perhaps even they did not visualize the kind of America to come—the America to come because of what they did.

Bill of Freedoms

Later, when our Constitution was framed, the men who wrote it were men who believed the Bible and who looked upon it as God's "instruction book." These men desired to maintain for their descendants, and for posterity, the kind of individual freedom which they believed the Creator had decreed for every individual. To them, that was one of the instruction rules out of the book.

That Constitution, when adopted and amended in 1789, carried with it the greatest bill of individual freedoms that any nation has ever enjoyed. Under these freedoms, America developed the greatest measure of well-being and prosperity that any segment of mankind has ever developed on this earth. It may be said, without any doubt, that the freedoms and liberties which brought our prosperity grew directly from the religious foundation laid by our forefathers.

I am glad to feel that we Americans are so dedicated to the basic concepts of law and practice as they are found in the Bible. If we will look to God's instruction book for guidance at all times in the future, making it our source book for living, then our future is secure. Only in that way may America preserve liberty and freedom — and even civilization, through the coming decades and centuries.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Do You Have Noisy Neighbors?

A lot of the neighbors were suddenly annoyed by Jeb Crowell's hammering at night. Jeb was building himself a new front porch—and the only time that he could give to it was after sundown.

Finally we decided the best thing to do was all pitch in and help—and get the carpentry over with as soon as possible. We did. Finished the porch next evening—and Jeb gratefully treated us to ice cold beer and cider.

From where I sit, that's what being a good neighbor means. Instead of complaining about the other fellow's habits, try to understand and share his interests.

So if my practising on the flute annoys you, come on over, neighbor, with your fiddle or guitar and join me! Maybe it will end up in our knowing and appreciating one another better ... in an evening of good fellowship. And I'll promise to provide the beer that goes with evenings of good fellowship!

Frozen Meat

Busy housewives who do not have time to thaw frozen meat products before cooking are assured by researchers that they do not spoil flavor, reduce juiciness, or increase shrinkage. The only factors to consider are that thawed meats cook quicker than still frozen meats; that unthawed meat is more apt to spatter fat when braised and less likely to hold an egg and crumb mixture in frying. If roasts are cooked in the frozen state, 10 minutes more must be allowed per pound than for thawed roasts. A two-inch frozen steak needs 15 minutes more cooking time than a thawed one of the same thickness.

Our Boys Recieve Honors

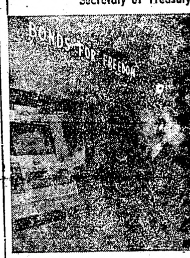
Many Holt people attended the Court of Honor of Boy Scouts held at Thief River Falls on Monday evening. Besides the Troop, parents, committeemen, scout leaders and others of this community helped make the meeting a success. Geo. Fricker was a member of the Court of Honor and served well in that capacity.

Troop No. 112 was presented with President's award for having the highest average of Scout advancement in the Thief River Falls District. This honor alone shows the interest taken by Scoutmaster Peterson and his assistants in the local Scout Troop. All the boys received Merit badges and the following received First Class and Star Awards:

Vernon Engen
Robert Johnson
George Fricker
Donald Larson
Kieth Movick
Harold Ness

The next step for these boys will be Life and Eagle Awards. Let's get behind them so that this may be accomplished.

Bonds for Freedom on Freedom Train Inspire Secretary of Treasury



Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and Mrs. Snyder view the priceless exhibit during the Freedom Train's stay in Washington, D. C., which dramatically reveals the important role United States Government bonds played in the progress of the United States of America from its inception as a nation in 1776.

The American people have always responded to the call to buy freedom bonds. Secretary Snyder is directing a stepped-up campaign to sell more U. S. Savings Bonds as an anti-inflationary measure and to insure continued peace and prosperity.

Shipping Association To Meet

Of interest to people of Holt and community will be the meeting of the members of the Holt Livestock Shipping Association on Friday, February 20, where ideas on the problems of marketing livestock can be discussed. Which is the better way to to ship is a matter worth looking into and it is well worth your time to attend this meeting.

Good Program at Winter Shows

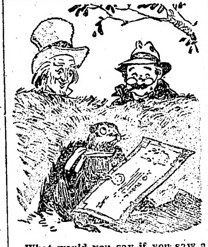
World and national affairs will be the general theme for the evening meetings of the forthcoming Red River Valley Winter Shows at Crookston. National authorities have been secured as speakers for the three evening sessions, which start on Tuesday February 24, and continue thru Thursday, February 26. United States Senator Joseph Ball and Minnesota's governor, Luther W Youngdahl, will head the list of speakers from Minnesota. Senator Ball is scheduled to speak on Wednesday evening. Feb. 25, and will use as his subject "Critical Domestic and Foreign Affairs". Dr. W. E. Peterson, professor in dairy husbandry at the University of Minnesota, who has just returned from a 3 months' study of agricultural conditions in England and the Scandinavian countries, will appear on the Wednesday evening program with Senator Ball.

Minnesota's governor, Luther Youngdahl, will not only discuss the critical problems confronting the citizens of Minnesota, but will give a brief resume of his recent trip to Sweden. Prof. Dmitri Stein, a member of the Electrical Engineering staff of the North Dakota Agricultural College, will appear on the Thursday evening program of Feb. 26, with Governor Luther Youngdahl. Prof. Stein was born in Russia and received his education in Germany. He did not subscribe to the Nazi principles of government, but was retained as a teacher in electrical engineering during the war. Following the war, he was one of the first specialists employed by the allied government in the rehabilitation of the electric generating plants in Berlin. He will speak on the subject "Soviet-American Relations in the Jointly Occupied Zone in Berlin".

The evening programs will be opened on Feb. 24, with Dr. Christopher Norborg. Wash. D. C., as speaker. Dr. Norborg, a former member of the staff of the U. of Minn., served as Chief of Special Studies for the office of Strategic Services in northern Europe during World War 11.

An excellent program of incidental music has been arranged for the evening meetinhs, which include programs by the Crookston Municipal Band, musicians from the Northwest School and the Univ. of North Dakota.

Uncle Sam Says



What would you say if you saw a groundhog emerge from his hole this month with a stock of Savings Bonds in his paws? Millions of my nieces and nephews, who own Savings Bonds and are adding to their bond holdings regularly through the Payroll Savings or the Bond-A-Month Plans, would say that Mr. Groundhog has at last acquired common sense as a prophet of an early spring. There is no better harbinger of a bright, happy future is there than the growing, safe, profit-making financial reserve of United States Savings Bonds.

DOROTHY DIX, noted newspaper columnist and counselor to millions of Americans, says:

"The best advice I have ever given in my long life is the advice I give Americans now; that is, keep buying and holding U. S. Savings Bonds because they will insure your future happiness. Any home with Savings Bonds is certainly a better home than one without Savings Bonds. I can truly write about the merits of Savings Bonds in the family relationship, because bonds are really very personal in their nature. Savings Bonds eventually become the things we hope for, whether it is marriage, a new home, children's education or plain leisure." U. S. Treasury Department

Lights Under the Sea

Undersea lighting poses problems which only the fish solve easily. Because salt water absorbs light, illumination of an underwater target is only 6 per cent of the brightness on the target in clear air. The ultraviolet rays pass through sea water fairly well, but the heat rays are absorbed. The underwater light beam produces such heavy haze that visibility is improved when the beam is removed from the line of sight.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Gandhi's Death Leaves India Bitter; House Prepares Tax Slash Debate, GOP Leaders Confident of Victory;

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DEATH:
Gandhi

Mohandas K. Gandhi, India's champion, peacemaker, patient saint, was dead at the age of 78—a victim of an assassin's bullets.

He died barely two weeks after Hindus, Sikhs and Moslems alike, overjoyed at the possibility of peace that Gandhi's latest fast had procured for their dominions, were shouting "Gandhiji ki jai" (long live Gandhi) in the streets of Delhi.

It was a violent ending for the mahatma who all his life had preached and practised a philosophy based on an abhorrence of violence. A Hindu from Poona approached him during a prayer meeting and fired three shots into his body from close range.

To India and to India's Hindus to whom Gandhi had devoted his life, his death was a bitter experience and a shock that left the already turbulent sub-continent in an even more complete state of turmoil.

After the partition of the country into the dominions of India and Pakistan Gandhi had been the man of strong spirit to whom all three opposing factions, Hindus, Moslems and Sikhs, had looked for guidance.

And in his last fast, of five-day duration, he had given it to them. He had provided the three clashing religious groups with a foundation for peace. His action had tended to narrow the schism between Moslems and Hindus, had lessened the talk of war.

Whether his death would undo the good that the last days of his life had accomplished remained, for the time being, an open question.

TAX SLASH:
Debatable

All signs pointed to an income tax cut of one kind or another this year as the house of representatives clanged the bell for the opening round of crucial, election-year debate on that much-belabored issue.

Joseph Martin (Rep., Mass.), speaker of the house, started things off with the assertion that an income tax slash is in the bag. He conceded, however, that it might not run as high as the 6.5 billion dollars provided in the Knutson bill, now up for debate.

But in the end, he said, the Republican congress would override a presidential veto "of the tax bill we send to the White House."

In order to beat the veto that Mr. Truman might slap on the tax bill, however, the Republicans would have to line up a few Democrats to vote on their side to make the necessary two-thirds majority. And to bring enough Democrats around, it was thought, the senate Republicans would tone down the bill.

Rep. Robert Doughton (Dem., N. C.), ranking Democrat on the tax-fixing ways and means committee, pointed out the obvious fact that Republicans would have to trim the size of the cut to get anywhere. Otherwise, he said, congress will uphold the veto "and we will have no tax reduction at all."

As far as Knutson's 6.5-billion-dollar measure is concerned, GOP congressmen were touting it on the grounds that it would spur business, increase production and relieve the price-pressure on taxpayers in addition to leaving the government enough revenue for an 11-billion-dollar payment on the public debt in the next two years.

Democrats, of course, take the diametrically opposed view, holding that a tax slash that big would force the government to borrow money, threaten national security and hinder the European recovery plan upon which so much of the current phase of U. S. foreign policy is founded.

HEADLINERS

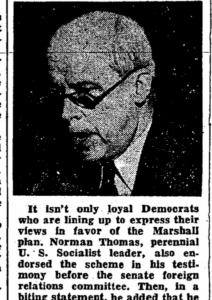
IN LOS ANGELES . . . Film actor Allen Jenkins (above) booked on suspicion of drunken driving, maintained that his cat, Smiley, was doing the driving, stoutly asserted, "I just went along for the ride."

IN MEMPHIS . . . Henry K. Buck, railway terminal superintendent who donated free cinders to the city to neutralize icy streets, was fined $306 for making too much smoke.

IN GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Fla. . . . G. B. Mobley, who sank a 30-foot shaft through the town's main street in search of four million dollars in pirate gold, stopped digging, sifted for gold dust.

IN CLEVELAND . . . Mrs. Adelyn M. Schwetz complained in a divorce petition that her husband, a shoe store proprietor, made her pay cash for her shoes.

He's in Favor



It isn't only loyal Democrats who are lining up to express their views in favor of the Marshall plan. Norman Thomas, perennial U. S. Socialist leader, also endorsed the scheme in his testimony before the senate foreign relations committee. Then, in a biting statement, he added that he did not like: (a) commodity speculators, (b) Herbert Hoover, (c) Henry Wallace and (d) the Truman doctrine.

NO BLOC:
'No Need'

When Moscow's official Communist party newspaper, Pravda, declared editorially that it was opposed to any federation of eastern European states it signalled the disclosure of an interesting development in Russia's relationship with her Balkan satellites.

The idea of such a federation, similar to the union of Western Europe proposed by Britain's Bevin, was put forth by Georgi Dimitrov, Communist premier of Bulgaria and endorsed by Marshall Tito of Yugoslavia.

Dimitrov said that the eastern European nations in the Soviet orbit intend to form a federation of states as allies to Russia when the time is ripe, but first, he added, they would organize a customs union. Prospective members were to be: Bulgaria, Albania, Romania, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Poland, Czechoslovakia "and even Greece."

But Pravda answered with an emphatic "no." And Pravda's rejection of the idea meant that Stalin himself (who founded the paper) was administering a public hand-slapping to Dimitrov for thinking of it.

"The editors of Pravda," the statement said, "consider that these countries stand in need of not a problematical and far-fetched federation or confederation, nor do they stand in need of a customs union. What they need is consolidation and defense of their independence and sovereignty by mobilization and organization of internal popular democratic forces."

That meant simply that Stalin and his politburo did not want the Balkan nations ganging up, even as ostensible Russian allies. The Soviet regime is perfectly content to let the Communist party in each nation control and direct its destinies. With the existence of a federation, the Balkans conceivably might get out of hand.

Pravda's editorial amounted to a reluctant and tacit admission that Russia has found it practicable and worth while to follow Hitler's old formula for international relations: Divide and rule.

ALLOCATIONS:
Steel

Tentative answer to some of the nation's most exasperating shortages came into being when the government's voluntary allocations program moved into low gear with a commerce department request that the steel industry guarantee freight car manufacturers enough steel to build 10,000 cars a month.

How much good this would do was, like steel supplies, an unknown quantity.

Present government plans call for concentrating on freight cars, petroleum equipment, farm machinery and building materials. Steel leaders previously had agreed to cooperate in the voluntary program.

Major emphasis for the time being will be on freight cars, but the commerce department also plans to describe other key programs it believes will require steel allocations within the next month.

Many government transportation experts believe the 10,000-a-month freight car goal is inadequate.

KEY HARVESTS:
For Inflation

Any crop failure this year would endanger greatly the fight on inflation, and the size of the 1948 and subsequent harvests must be looked to as the "key" in arresting inflationary trends, Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the President's council of economic advisers said in a Chicago speech.

If there were better than average crop conditions this year, prices would level off, he said.

Lettuce Not Have Any Of Those Odd Names

Vicar W. A. Gibson of Wimbledon's All Saints Church, just outside of London, has told his parishioners that there will be no more baptizing of children named after Hollywood film stars, race horses, greyhounds and battles.

"Already I have refused to baptize three girls because of such ridiculous names," he said. "One father wanted his child named Lettuce. I persuaded him to accept the good old-fashioned name of Mary.

"The majority of the names I take exception to are those borrowed from American film stars. It is un-English and un-Christian."

He did not name the film stars.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Useful Citizens Remain Idle In Displaced Person Camps

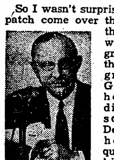
By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—It's a strange thing about us Americans who grew up under a Declaration of Independence which states that we're all born free and equal, and a Constitution which is so scornful of blue blood that it specifically declares that "no title of nobility shall be granted by the United States; and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of congress, accept any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince or foreign state."

In other words, we're supposed to believe "a man's a man for a' that."

Nevertheless, come election eve, somebody always gets very excited about the ancestors of any prospective candidate for the office of president (or the office of dogcatcher, for that matter).

So I wasn't surprised to see a dispatch come over the wires saying that somebody, who says his grandfather was the brother of the grandfather of General Eisenhower, is in a displaced persons' camp in Denmark. Eisenhower, when questioned, says his ancestors came to America before the revolution and he has little or no information about the family in Europe. A good American answer, I'd say.



Baukhage

And it serves to bring up the question of displaced persons in Europe, a matter with which the congress of the United States is mildly concerned at present. Not as much concerned, however, as Rep. William G. Stratton (Rep., Ill.) would like, since he has introduced a bill "to authorize the United States . . . to take its fair share in the resettlement of displaced persons in Germany, Austria and Italy, including relatives of citizens or members of the armed forces, by permitting their admission to the United States in a number equivalent to a part of the total quota numbers unused during the war years."

There are some 11 million persons who were enslaved, captured in war or thrown into concentration camps by the Nazis, who have been sent home, and 850,000 others who, like the alleged relative of General Eisenhower and many who have escaped from under the iron curtain since the war, can never go home for fear of political persecution in Soviet-controlled countries where they would face slavery or death. Fifty per cent of these still in the camps are women and children. One-fifth are Jews.

Many DPs have skills and are only too anxious to use them. And there is room for them — or somebody — to take the place of the manpower which has been drained from the farms in the Middle West into factories.

There are 95,000 DPs who are trained farm workers. Now, instead of producing food for others and easing the terrific strain on the American farms due to the shift in population, these DPs are eating at America's expense. I doubt if any American is hardhearted enough to say: "I am not my brother's keeper. Send 'em all back where they came from . . . to strengthen the sinews of the Communist dictatorship and live out their lives in slavery . . . if they are allowed to live at all."

Breaking down the DP census under the "agriculture" classification made by American officials, we have:

Farmers (all types)	77,270
Agronomists	5,440
Lumbermen	704
Hunters, fishermen	723
Millers	1,191
Other agric. workers	10,099

Many other skills are represented. Need any carpenters? More than 5,000 are in the camps; nearly 2,000 painters; altogether more than 21,000 trained in construction and maintenance. And so on.

No comment is necessary on the items: "Hospital attendants, 1,135; nurses, 4,057; physicians and surgeons, 1,763"; or, from the housewives' point of view . . . "Domestics, 22,066."

It isn't as if we had thousands of unemployed in this country, or that we weren't trying to increase production to feed and house our people.

It costs our army (that means you) $400,000 per day to keep these people semi-prisoners, growing up to be useless citizens by denying them freedom and hope. What does it cost our consciences?

Communists Follow Creed of Destruction

What is Communism, as exemplified by members of the Communist party in the United States? Some say it is a religion. Well, if the whirling dervishes are religious, so are the Communists. They are certainly as fanatically devoted to their creed. If the American people were a little more familiar with that creed, they would understand the Communists better, and it is to be remembered that that creed is more than an "I believe." It is a set of rules, and if you don't obey those rules, your life is in danger. Communists don't believe in punishment in a future life. Their motto is "do it now," and they do it.

My attention has been directed recently to one paragraph in the Communist bible, a resolution passed and accepted and integrated into the internationale. It explains just what you can expect of Communists when they join a club, a union or any international body. Expect no more of them; no less. This is the paragraph:

> "There can be no question of the utilization of bourgeois governmental institutions except for the purpose of their destruction."

Many explanations have been offered as to why a normal, natural-born American should embrace communism. The reasons range all the way up and down the scale, and include everything from a broken heart to some hidden neurosis that makes other people nag their husbands, maltreat their wives, drink, kick the dog or jump into the river. But whatever the urge is, it has some strange effects on the patient.

Take, for instance, that one-time firebrand member of the "Wobblies," Elizabeth Gurley Flynn. Many of you recall the picturesque IWWs, "International Workers of the World," who flourished in the early 1900s. Miss Flynn played a spectacular part in the famous Mesabi range strikes of 1919 — her father was a miner.

She helped organize the Communist party in America in 1920. Now she conducts a column "Life of the Party" in the party organ, the Daily Worker, published in New York, which follows the party line as a fox follows the aniseed bag or a rat follows the smell of cheese.

In a recent column, Miss Flynn described a luncheon in honor of the "First Daytime Women's School" of the Communist party's Kings Highway section. Says she (note how Marxism flavors even the simple arts of the housewife): "The luncheon which the women prepared themselves was so delicious it is evidence they are equally good Marxists and good cooks. How can I reduce under such temptation?"

Some of the comrades, it seems, took care of all the children, and here we see how Marx puts even Lydia Pinkham to shame, for according to Miss Glynn: "Those in charge of the nursery enjoyed the children and remarked: 'Communist mothers really have wonderful children!' "

In another column, Miss Flynn observes in one long breath: "In all modesty, I am convinced there is no group in America who are more single-minded in their devotion to the American people and are a more misrepresented and maligned group than are the Communists . . ."

Perhaps sensing that someone might reach for a grain or two of salt before perusing her observations further, she sounds a somewhat different note in another breath:

"The Communist party of New York affords us not only this wonderful opportunity (attending a big meeting) to meet together to memorialize the noble life of Lenin, but give us inspiration to be guided by his teachings."

And before you take in the next paragraph, quoted from an editorial in the frank and forthright "Daily Worker," please go back and read that paragraph from the resolution in the International Congress quoted at the beginning of these remarks. Now proceed:

> "The third party backing the (Henry) Wallace candidacy remains the sole way in which the progressive movement in the U. S. A. can fight for lower prices, tax reductions, government protection of the sick, the aged, and for a program of world peace and recovery."

Whenever I ponder Communist pronouncements I always think of the parody on the "correction" which the Associated Press used to send out when they discovered a mistake in a dispatch which had already been filed: "For ham, read eggs."

Rail Quiz

How does movement of the armed forces by railways in the United States in this war compare with that in the last conflict?

Between December 7, 1941, and the end of February, this year, 38,500,000 United States troops were carried by rail in organized movements. This doesn't include the millions of others traveling under orders in smaller groups. About 91,000 special trains were operated and more special cars on regular trains. While the United States was in the last war its railways moved 8,715,000 troops in special trains and cars.

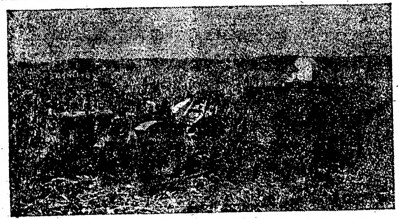
Adding Organic Matter to Soils Cited As 'No. 1' Problem of Midwest Farmers



Plenty of Organic Matter Plus Plant Foods Spells Big Corn Crops.

ADDING organic matter to their soils is the Number 1 problem of many Midwestern farmers, declared Dr. F. C. Bauer, professor of soil fertility of the University of Illinois. This organic matter must come through the return of manure, straw, cornstalks and other crop residues of the soil, and through the use of legumes and grasses in the rotation.

When you put organic matter back into the soil, and especially that derived from deep-rooted legumes, you are also adding nitrogen, considered by many the one element most limiting to crop yields.

Even on some of the best of soils the organic matter supply is running dangerously low. Years of intensive cropping and livestock raising, without the return of crop residues, manures and plant food nutrients, have pulled deeply on the original supply, Dr. Bauer pointed out.

For most of their organic matter supplies, farmers must depend on deep-rooted legumes and grasses grown in the rotation. Here the use of lime according to soil tests, to condition the soil for the growing of legumes and adding plant foods needed for high yields, is essential to a continuing organic matter supply.

Lime, if it is to do its best work, should be put on at least six months ahead of seeding, research at several experiment stations indicates. At the time of seeding, soil building amounts of plant food should be added to the land.

Work at some experiment stations have shown that under some conditions even large amounts of organic matter will not furnish enough nitrogen for maximum corn yields. When extra amounts of nitrogen are put on corn, however, farmers should be certain that the other plant foods, phosphorus and potash, are in the soil in proper proportion.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Will's Proud of His Big Ears

Will Dudley's mighty proud of his big ears! Best crop of corn he's grown since '38. And Will, like so many other farmers, has plenty of reason to be proud of what he raises.

The farmer has always been a keystone in our economic life, and the key to our national well-being. But from where I sit, he's more important now than ever. He's not only feeding America—but friends of America overseas—building good will for this country at a time when friendship for democracy is most important.

And farmers have willingly shouldered that responsibility. Will spends extra hours in his cornfield ... comes home tired to a temperate glass of beer and early bed, to be ready for the next day's work.

From where I sit, America can be mighty grateful for her five million farmers ... for their productivity, hard work, and temperate living—of which Will's moderate glass of beer is proof!

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Free Ride For You— on the Freedom Train!

We had a real thrill in Our Town just the other day—when the Freedom Train stopped by!

You've heard about it, of course —an actual train that's touring the country to remind us again what true Democracy means. It carries such Americana as the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, and other immortal documents that guarantee every citizen his liberty.

A great idea! And from where I sit, we're all riding along with that Freedom Train—right now—by living in a country that protects our individual liberties—whether they apply to our right to vote, to choose our church, to speak our minds, or enjoy a glass of beer with friends.

Only thing is—we've got to prove ourselves worthy of the ride ... by guarding zealously against whatever forces of intolerance encroach upon our American concepts of live-and-let-live, in a free and strong Democracy!

Rare Cactus

Organ pipe cactus, which grows in such profusion south of Ajo, Ariz., that the stand has been set aside as a national monument, is so named because its branches resemble the pipes of the pipe organ. It grows as high as 20 feet tall and is one of the uncommon species of the cactus family.

Good Outlook For Cash Crops

Although Marshall County farmers can look to another favorable year for cash grain and oil crops, other considerations can be kept in mind, says County Agent Forbes.

Most important of these other considerations is maintenance of of soil fertility. Cash crop plans should be made keeping in mind the necessity of a good rotation to conserve soil.

Writing in new Extention Pamphlet 156, "1938 Wheat, Flax and Soybean Outlook," D. C. Dvoracek, extension economist at University Farm, sees continued good demand for all three products during 1948.

Wheat production is still lagging in war-torn conntries and and world population increased 5 to 10 per cent during the war. Although the winter wheat crop will not be as large as in 1947, it will be better than average. However, the needs and demands both at nome and abroa will not be met in 1948. As a result of these factors, Dvoracek suggests an increase in production of spring wheat in suitble areas of Minnesota.

Flax prices are expected to continue as high in 1948 as in 1947. Continued construction of homes will create a large demand for linseed oil. Howsver, production of feed crops in 1948 may offer many farmers a better use of their land. Flax should be grown only on land well adapted to it.

Even though the demand for edible oils is still far from satisfied and the prices of soybeans are expected to stay high, their production for beans should be limited to high-yield areas in the state. Other areas south of Minnetota have a natural advantage in soybean production.

Don't Let Them Invade Your Territory, Holt Girls

The following appeared in the Minneapolis Star-Journal in the column In This Corner by Cedric Adams:

This might start a mass movement toward Viking, Minnesota. On Friday of this week, the Zion Lutheran church of Viking, with its bachelor pastor, Carl T. Thompson, is giving a feed for starving bachelors, men who are starving for both food and affection. This may sound amusing but it isn't. While the 100 bachelors around Viking have been busy amassing their fortunes, outsiders have stepped in to marry all the beautiful Scandinavian girls in the community. Here, however, is where opportunity knocks for you single girls. If you unmarried girls will write The Rev. Carl Thompson, he will furnish you in blocks of two or more the names and addresses of the Viking bachelors. And he'll probably send some of you his own name. W. W. Barr, who srnt the information added a tag line that amused me: "I am not one of the bachelors. I have been happily married for 25 years, which reminds me that I must get the dinner dishes washed and the kitched clean before my wife gets home from club. She gets quite provoked when I slip up on those little details."

Daily Fire Toll

Every day there are 1,000 home fires, 28 deaths by fire, 130 store fires, 100 factory fires, 7 church fires, and 3 hospital fires, according to the National Fire Protection association.

Sportsmen Club Corner

The program committee of the Holt Sportsmen's Club went on a rampage Saturday night in sponsoring a "March of Dimes" program that could match any Hollywood entertainers for enthusiam. With Hartley Peterson as master of ceremonies, they raised a sum of around $100.00 for the Polio fund. That Holt and community had so many talented vocal soloists and musicians was a pleasant surprise to all present.

Offcers elected at the annual business meeting were L. Lubitz L. Sagstuen and Geo. Fricker, re-elected as president, secretary and treasurer. New board members on the Board of Directors are Otto Rupprecht, Hilmer Davidson and Herman Peterson. $10.00 was given to the local Boy Scouts and $5.00 to the Red Cross.

In every respect the March of Dimes auction was a huge success. The audiece was generous and bidding went faster than could be handled. The committee wishes to thank all who helped make it a success.

This getting together is good and laughing together is tops.

Memoriam

In memory of our dear son and brother Ruben who lost his life on the battlefront three years ago February 25.

In our hearts there is a longing
No one knows the silent loss
Only those who have lost can know,
The dark days you must cross,
Before the kindly hand of time,
Can ease the pain of loss.
For God has numbered each sorrowing day
And weary hours of woe and pain
How great the step from here on earth
To Heaven above and yet how close in time of need
His tenderness and love
That only he can give thru faith,
We'll meet our loved ones there.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

Friday the 13 the Nordics lost their last road game of the season. The game was played at Argyle and was a very fast game. The Nordics came from behind to bring the score to 42 to 41 in favor of Argyle. In the last minutes of the game Argyle forged ahead to take a 45 to 41 victory.

Last Tuesday the Nordics defeated Middle River by a score of 46 to 32. This victory gave the Nordics a record of nine wins and seven losses.

Tonight the Nordics will meet Lake Bronson at Newfolden for their last game of the season.

The tournaments will be held at Roseau February 26. 27 and 28.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Solid South Threatens Party Split; Government Eyes Self Ration Plan; Congress Sets Tentative Budget Cut

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CIVIL RIGHTS:
10 Points

President Truman, who seems to run to 10-point programs, tossed another one to congress—concerning the preservation and protection of civil rights—and then stood aside to await the explosion.

It came quickly. Southern Democrats, hopping mad over at least four of the 10 controversial points, began to talk seriously of calling a Dixie convention to split away from Mr. Truman on the civil rights issue.

Focus of the current disunity was a bill, up for approval by the senate labor committee, to create a national commission against job discrimination on grounds of race, creed or color.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender (Dem., La.) predicted that if the bill were approved in its present form the party would erupt into open warfare. Both foes and backers of the measure agreed that it would be a close thing.

The four proposals that most inflamed the southerners were the ones calling for (1) a federal anti-lynching law, (2) a permanent fair employment practice commission, (3) an end to Jim Crow rules in transportation and (4) outlawing of state poll taxes.

Remainder of the points advocated by the President were: A permanent commission on civil rights, a joint congressional committee on civil rights, a civil rights division in the justice department; tightening of civil rights statutes; home rule for the District of Columbia; statehood for Alaska and Hawaii; equalization of naturalization opportunities, and settlement of evacuation claims of Japanese-Americans.

Because 1948 is an election year, and a presidential election year at that, the program, which otherwise might be ignored, was certain to get hot partisan debate.

In answer to Mr. Truman's firm statement that "something must be done" about the civil rights issue, southern Democrats replied that they were thinking of calling an all-southern convention to pick its own presidential candidate.

Some thought that too drastic a step, but at Jackson, Miss., Walter Sillers, speaker of the Mississippi house of representatives, said he flatly favored such a course in order to withhold at least part of the South's electoral votes from Mr. Truman.

Big Dealer

One of the biggest men to come before a congressional investigating committee was Isadore Ginsberg, New York lumber dealer, who refused to tell Rep. Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) of a joint congressional housing committee the names of 98 retailers from whom he purchased gypsum lath. McCarthy angrily called him a "gray marketeer" and cited him for contempt of congress.

SELF RATIONING:
Second Best

Manifestly stymied in its efforts to get congress to pass rationing and price control legislation, the administration tried a new approach in the form of an appeal for nationwide self-rationing.

Greater public support of an intensified drive for voluntary food conservation would have to be developed if living costs are to be curbed, the administration decided.

As an initial step representatives of 18 consumer, producer and distributor groups met with Clinton Anderson, secretary of agriculture, to map details of the nationwide program.

Charles F. Brannan, assistant secretary of agriculture, heads the new food saving setup. Originally started by the citizens' food committee last fall, it has been carried on until now under the direct leadership of the cabinet food committee.

Major emphasis, it was understood, would be placed on meat as the pivotal item in the cost of living merry-go-round; however, other foods also would be covered in the voluntary program. Based on specific recommendations of the food industry and public representatives, it is theoretically designed to meet the twin problem of scarce food supplies and high prices.

Biggest talking point the administration had in its attempts to solicit public support was the department of agriculture's somber prediction that the nation is heading for a serious meat shortage in the spring. And by way of emphasis Brannan added that meat rationing "by price" already is in effect because many people cannot afford to buy.

INFLATION:
Italian Style

Efforts by the Italian government to put new coins into circulation to replace some of the nation's paper money have been abandoned because of the inflation.

Fantastically soaring costs of even the most minor articles, such as newspapers and matches, made the coins virtually valueless even before they were minted. Devaluation set in while tools to make the coins were being prepared.

BUDGETING:
Hesitant

Budget busters in the house and senate were going around and around the issues of budget cutting and tax reduction, making oblique motions in the direction of the central problem—what to cut and how much.

In terms of actual accomplishment they managed to agree tentatively on a cut of 2.5 billion dollars in President Truman's 1949 budget.

That would leave a potential surplus of 10.1 billion dollars for tax reductions and payments on the national debt. But, because of the admittedly tentative nature of their estimates, the congressional spokesmen evaded any conclusion that their budget would leave room for the full 6.5 billion dollars in tax reduction recently voted by the house.

Meanwhile, the slight jubilation that had arisen over house passage of the Knutson tax reduction bill already had died down in view of the senate's attitude toward the measure.

The senate intends to keep the bill in drydock, possibly until early summer when it expects to have a better idea of whether or not the budget slash will stick.

FOR SALE:
Some Eggs

U. S. government has hung out a "for sale" sign on 46.8 million dozen eggs that it bought last spring to support domestic prices.

There is one stipulation, however. Only foreign users will be allowed to buy them.

For the comfort of U. S. housewives the agriculture department was swift to point out that these eggs are not the kind that can be used readily for home consumption. They were shelled, dumped into huge containers and frozen before the government bought them in the first place.

Agriculture department decided to sell the eggs to foreign buyers when it was unable to sell them to bakers and confectioners in this country because egg production has been going up and egg prices down.

Hence, the eggs are being offered on a bid basis to foreign governments, relief feeding organizations and to brokers or exporting concerns to "explore possible foreign outlets" and "to help relieve the foreign shortage of food."

GLOOMY:
World Report

In a massive survey of global economy at the end of 1947 the United Nations has blocked out a dismal picture of a world that is critically short of food, plagued by industrial shortages and inflation and lacks the dollars it needs to finance the imports so vital to recovery.

Only the people of the U. S. could take heart from what the U. N. survey had to say. For this nation, with its undamaged wealth of resources and production, holds nearly all the economic chips in a world that is producing less than it did 10 years ago for a population that has increased by 200 million.

More distressing is the fact that the world outside the U. S. has bogged down following the relatively rapid strides in reconstruction made during the 18 months after the end of the war.

By clear implication the U. N. report warned that the United States, as the world's major producer and banker, is in such a position that it must carry a great responsibility toward the rest of the world economy. On this nation is resting the fate of the globe.

This, in the dry, impartial language of a United Nations survey, was the basic reason behind Secretary of State George Marshall's plan for European recovery. Marshall himself couldn't have put up a more forceful argument in favor of it.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home
Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.
It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.
And you'll say it's truly excellent, for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Indians Conserve Food

The various religious groups in India have made plans to conserve food. For centuries they've used edible vegetable oils to annoint themselves as a part of their religious ceremonial. Recently, in the interests of food conservation, they decided to look for a substitute type of oil. It had to be odorless and colorless. Now their troubles are over and they can even divert their annointing oil to their country's short supply of foodstuff. Some 700 barrels of crystal-clear white oil are on their way to Bombay from American oil refiners.

Identifying Bass

The general color of the white bass, striped bass or white lake bass is silvery tinged with gold below and the sides have narrow dusty longitudinal lines, five above the lateral line, one along it and a variable number below. The head is subconic flattened at the sides; mouth terminal oblique, lower jaw reaching the middle of the pupil; teeth are on the base of the tongue in a single patch. The white bass is one of the most handsome of fresh water fish and ranks fairly high as a food fish.

Dakota Land Opened

Dakota territory was opened for settlement on January 1, 1863, under the homestead act which permitted a citizen to homestead 160 acres. Settlers could obtain an additional 160 acres under a tree claim by planting 10 acres of the land in trees. Provisions later were made for purchasing a third 160-acre tract at a very low price.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

There's No Limit to Work Day For Mayor of Many Interests

WNU Features.

WOOD RIVER, ILL. — The mayor of Wood River (population 8,197) is a man of two titles, five jobs, unbounded enthusiasm and a complete disregard for the limits of a 24-hour day.

As mayor of the bustling Midwestern town, 35-year-old Lavier D. Humphrey puts on his "executive hat" and, like mayors the country over, deliberates highway improvements, tax rates, police affairs and garbage disposal.

Then he switches to dungarees and an oil worker's safety helmet for his eight hour a day job as operator in Shell Oil company's refinery in neighboring Roxana. Starting with the company as a laborer in 1933, Humphrey has worked up to his present job as an operator in the lubricating oil plant.

Donning a worn but serviceable baseball cap—symbolic of his intense interest in youth of the town — Humphrey turns to his third major interest, that of providing suitable recreation facilities for Wood River youngsters. He has established supervised playgrounds for youngsters of all ages and currently is sponsoring the conversion of a 15-acre corn field into a ball park and recreation center.

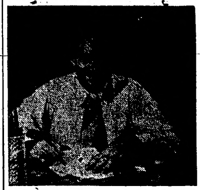
The mayor's fourth activity—the one of which he secretly is most proud—is his famed Junior G-Man club, first of its kind in the country. Humphrey and Police Chief Frank Starkey formed the club after youngsters caused $500 damage to municipal property during Halloween night festivities in 1944. Club members cooperate actively with police; they report parking violations, speeders, red light crashers; they unmasked a peeping tom always one look ahead of police, and they aided in detecting a gang of vandals who were breaking into the local high school. Since the club was organized, Halloween damage has dropped to less than $25.

Humphrey admits, however, that his fifth job is the hardest: The coordination of all his activities within the limits of a 24-hour day. Under a Shell policy encouraging employees to participate in civic activities, Humphrey often finds himself wearing the mantle of each of his jobs at once.

Between sandwich bites during lunch hour in the refinery, he may hear a citizen's complaint that his neighbor's children get up too early, study a report on speeders from a trusted G-Man lieutenant, review the latest set of ball park plans and even go over his own refinery reports.

Enthusiasm is this young Midwesterner's main trait — a contagious enthusiasm of rolled up sleeves, hard work and the deep satisfaction that comes from accomplishment.

His Honor

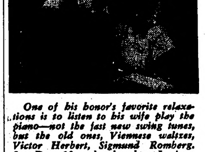


Like mayors the country over, Lavier D. Humphrey finds many responsibilities attached to the job of being chief executive of the bustling little city of Wood River, Ill. The routine of handling civic affairs, however, is relieved when he is called upon frequently to serve as peacemaker in settling neighborly squabbles.

Works, Too

Losing his official dignity, Humphrey is known as "Humpy" at the Shell refinery, where he works in a section of the lubricating oil plant. Most of his working day is spent in front of a complicated control board bristling with dials, knobs and recording instruments which keep tab on the plant's operations.

At Play



One of his honor's favorite relaxations is to listen to his wife play the piano—not the fast new swing tunes, but the old ones, Viennese waltzes, Victor Herbert, Sigmund Romberg. Son Don, 13, and a daughter, Laniece, 11, also join the family group for frequent evenings of music.

Human, After All

Back in high school, Humphrey set a record for the mile which lasted until 1947. He has been a fast-moving man of action ever since. Rugged as he is, however, he occasionally tires from the strain at the refinery and city hall. When the pace does catch up with him, it's usually in this living room chair.

Country Doctor Prescribes for Self—It's School

HARRISBURG, PA.—The country doctor in Pennsylvania has returned to school to learn the latest progress in the medical field. This new venture in medical education, never attempted previously anywhere in the world, has been hailed as a "pattern for other states."

Sponsored by Pennsylvania Medical society, the project has been accorded an enthusiastic reception by some 840 physicians of small towns and rural areas.

"Students" attend one eight-hour class a week in the nearest of six centrally located instruction centers. Teaching centers at present are in Allentown, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Oil City, Wilkes-Barre and Williamsport. The course extends for 10 weeks.

Instructors are medical experts from leading training institutions of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. They lecture morning, afternoon and evening on the latest know-how in medicine. Practical phases of diagnosis and treatment are covered, instructors explaining the best techniques known to the medical profession.

Of the 840 doctors who took the opening course 580 were general practitioners, most of them from small communities and rural areas. Sixty-two were specialists in internal medicine, 61 were surgeons, 32 were obstetricians and gynecologists and 25 were neuro-psychiatrists.

"This program has proved that the general practitioner, especially the typical country doctor, seeks to keep himself abreast of the latest progress in medicine," Dr. Charles W. Smith, chairman of the medical society's graduate education committee, said in commenting on success of the venture.

No Problem for Him

BURLINGTON, VT. — Stricken with laryngitis, Prof. Robert S. Long of University of Vermont thought of canceling his classes. Then he had a better idea. He whispered his lecture into a recording machine which he carried to the classroom and turned on full blast.

Farmers Strengthen Neighborly Tradition

EL PASO, ILL. — Strengthening a tradition of neighborliness between El Paso villagers and Woodford county farmers originally launched 33 years ago, 50 farmers aided in cleaning streets and yards of debris left in the village by a storm.

With tractors, axes and saws, the farmers cleaned up parts of fallen trees, brush and twigs, hauling the debris to a dump for burning. Then the farmers were treated to dinner in two El Paso cafes.

The neighborly tradition began in 1914, when 160 farmers hauled 700 loads of dirt into town to fill in the village parks, then being developed as a recreation center for children of the community and outlying rural areas. In 1918 the villagers reciprocated by organizing shock troop grain harvesters during a farm labor shortage.

Portable Fire Escape Becomes Lift in Use

A new type of fire escape consists of a small motor truck having gear wheels in front that mesh with a toothed rack on a vertical steel beam mounted permanently on the side of the building. When thus connected, the truck travels up and down the wall like an elevator and can carry, besides its operator, eight persons at a time, four each on the platforms that extend out to the nearest right and left windows.

NO Harsh Laxatives are NOT necessary for most people
The juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination.
No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! Lemon in water is good for you!
Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They are rich in vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B1 and P. They alkalinize; aid digestion.
Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

Undulant Fever

Brucellosis, commonly known as "Bang's disease," attacks hogs as well as cattle. When humans contract the disease through milk or meat from infected animals, it is known as undulant fever. Undulant fever caused by eating infected pork is much more virulent than the disease resulting from drinking milk from infected cows.

Save Food—DO YOUR PART NOW

This is everybody's pledge. Cut it out . . . Sign it . . . Then paste it in your window to let everybody know you are helping to save the peace.

First Parachute

The first successful use of a parachute in a descent from a moving aeroplane was made by a Captain Berry in 1912 in St. Louis, Mo., according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Some use was made of parachutes by captive balloon observers during World War I but aviators in that war did not use them until the last few weeks of the fighting.

Dear Mabel:

We've been getting our Holt paper just fine every week and would like to thank you for all the extra work you've had.

It sure is nice to read about relatives, friends and neighbors where I grew up.

I know the subscription to the Holt News is the best birthday present our mother (Mrs. J. O. Johnson) could possibly have given us.

Thank you very much.
Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fermenich.

Restore Fruit Flavor

Canned fruit juices often lose the fresh fruit flavor because the air has been removed during vacuum processing, say research chemists of the department of agriculture. A simple way to restore the fresh fruit flavor to canned juices is to pour the chilled juice back and forth from one tumbler to another just before serving.

TODAY'S TIP ON FOOD SAVING ...For HOMEMAKERS

Buttered Brussels sprouts or cabbage may be given an added touch of texture by sprinkling each serving with crisp toasted cubelets of bread. Before toasting the bread cubelets, they may be brushed lightly with bacon drippings or melted butter or margarine, or sprinkled with grated cheese.

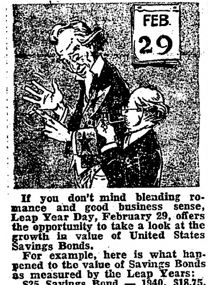
Uncle Sam Says



If you don't mind blending romance and good business sense, Leap Year Day, February 29, offers the opportunity to take a look at the growth in value of United States Savings Bonds.

For example, here is what happened to the value of Savings Bonds as measured by the Leap Years:

$50 Savings Bond — 1940, $37.50. purchase price; 1944, $40.00 and 1948, $46.00.

$100 Savings Bond — 1940, $75.00, purchase price; 1944, $80.00 and 1948, $92.00.

Buy Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank if you are self-employed. Watch your nest-egg grow, safely, surely, profitably.

Power Curtailment Over

Ottertail Power Company today announces the end of the voluntary electric peak load curtailment program which was instituted last fall when delayed construction schedules kept approximately 20,000 KW of additional generating equipment from being available for the heavy load periods of the fall and winter season. Restrictions are also lifted hn connecting up ranges and water heaters for other than "off peak" service.

C. G. Wright, Vice President in Charge of Operations, in making the announcement, states that the installation of some additional generating units has been completed and that this, coupled with the seasonal decline in load, permits the lifting of restrictions. The Company asks, however, that customers who are contemplating sizable load additions check with the nearest district office so that service will be available when required.

Mr. Wright states that the Company is engaged in the largest construction program in its history in order to take care of the expanding needs of the territory it serves, that during 1948 some large generating additions will be completed, and that construction has started on further plant additions where contracts call for 1949 and 1950 completion dates. Extensive additions and changes are also being made in transmission lines, substations, and distribution systems in order to improve service.

In announcing the end of the voluntary curtailment program, the Company states that it received the whole-hearted cooperation of its customers throughout the entire system during the months when it was advisable to to hold down demands over the peak-load periods.

Memoriam

In memory of our loving father John Moberg who passed away four sad years ago Feb. 29.

Four years have gone since you passed on,
And death has closed the door
But your gentle face and kindly grace,
Live with us for evermore
We have lost, Heaven has gained
One of the best fathers the world contained.

The family of John Moberg.

OtterTail Power Gets Pat on back

The following editorial is taken from the Karlstad Advocate. The picture fits Holt and we reprint it with thanks to Editor Nordine in expressing so ably what we all feel is true.

Some years ago when the Otter Tail Power Co. was asking for franchises in these towns, there were those who contended that we could make money operating our own plant, and that the service would be better. Those fellows are ready to admit that they were wrong. Our service has been good. The hi-line has a crew or two all the time improving the lines and good men scattered over the district ready to give quick service, and on the whole the service has been better than that of a good local plant. Of course there is always the danger of something happening so that we may be out of service for days and longer, as a few years ago when a sleet storm paralyzed the service for nearly two weeks. But danger of long disrupted service exists equally in a local plant. We feel free to say that the local hi-line service is the only kind of service for the small towns to have - electric energy at your fingertips as long as you pay your bills. And, here is something of importance that we have never before given much thought to. Our bills are much lower than the average home owned town plants. We have before us the new increased rates set up in Warren by the city council there. Under the rate we would have paid $4.62 more at our house for electric current than we did and $6.16 more at the office. That kind of money, ~~month in and month out~~, in addition to supporting taxes, is not hay. The Ottertail Power Co. is building a million dollar steam plant at Crookston and they have small supporting units here and there to help. We should be proud and appreciative of their service and the kind of rates they maintain while everything else is going up. All these years when everything else has been going up, their service has increased and their rates have gone down.

Mrs. Ole Hanson Passes

Word was received here of the death of Mrs. Ole Hanson, 71, at the home of her son Peter in Minneapolis, on Thursday Feb. 19

Funeral services were conducted from the Wernes Bros. chapel Minneapolis Saturday. Interment in the Lincoln Memorial Park in Portland, Oregon, after a service on Tuesday in the Mount Scott chapel there.

Petra Hanson was born Feb. 7, 1877 in Vestre Gausdal, Gubransdalen, Norway where she was baptised and confirmed in the Lutheran church. She was united in marriage to Ole Hanson by Rev. K. Kolby in Norway on October 28, 1898. To this union eight children were born.

Left to mourn her passing are two daughters Clara Therkildsen of Portland, Signe Nelson of Hot Springs, S. D., four sons, Christian of Portland, Oscar of Bruce, S. D., Peter, Minneapolis and Melvin of Huron, S. D. One brother Christian Sanstehagen, St. Paul, one sister in Norway, nine grandchildren and and seven great grandchildren.

Preceeding her in death are her husband, who passed away July 28, 1945; oldest son Hans, who passed away Dec. 22, 1946 and youngest daughter Ottina. who passed away in June, 1947.

The wealth of floral and In Memoriam offerings was evidence of the many friends who will miss her.

Mrs. Hanson, with her three oldest children, came to America in 1904 and came to Argyle to join her husband who had been here a year. They moved to Strandquist in 1905 and later to Newfolden and in 1915 to South Dakota. 1920 to 1923 they resided on a farm north of Holt. She has lived in Portland from 1944 until last fall when she came to make her home with her son in Minneapolis.

Her grandchildren Mr. and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold, and daughter-in-law Mrs. Mabel Hanson drove to Minneapolis to attend the funeral, returning home Sunday.

Sportsmen Club Corner

About 400,000 American elm, soft maple, green ash and cottonwood tree planting stocks are still available to private land owners at cost, Ray Clement, forester for the Minnesota Division of Forestry, said today.

"Farmers, land owners, sportsmen's groups other organizations wishing to start a tree planting project are urged to contact the county agriculture agent, forest supervisor or the St. Paul forestry office at once to secure information and an order form," Clement said.

These kinds of trees make valuable windbreaks and woodlots, and are excellent for wind and erosion problem areas. If planted this spring they will provide a protection for spruce and pine to be planted in the coming years when such trees will be available. It is probable, Clement said, that elm, ash, maple and cottonwood stocks will be smaller next spring.

The supply of spruce and pine for this year was exhausted by heavy demands, while the requests for elm, ash, maple and cottonwood were not ss large as forestry officials had anticipated.

Holt Township Clerk to Retire

T. B. Folden announced this week that he is retiring as clerk of Holt Township after an outstanding record as officer for 43 years. Mr. Folden was elected Township Treasurer in 1905 and served in that office until 1911 when he was elected as clerk, taking the place of Halvdon Hanson, father of Edwin Hanson.

Mr. Folden has been very active in all community organizations and has seen this area grow from a land of the hardy pioneers to the thriving community we now have.

Mr. Folden said. "It was often hard, after working all day with farm work when the children were all small, to have to sit and do the necessary township bookwork in the evening but I enjoyed it and it is a good experience for anyone who is interested."

Mr. Folden has always been good to work with in connection with the News office and we will miss him. To him goes sincere thanks from the entire community.

Commodity Skid May Affect Tax Cut; Russ in Second Propaganda Blast; Fight Shapes Up Over Soil Control

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

JUNIOR MARSHALL PLAN . . . Members of Bethesda, Md., Cub pack 232 called on Secretary of State George Marshall to present a "Junior Marshall plan" through which they hope to feed and care for at least 12 of Europe's needy children. The Cubs want to raise funds for their aid program by staging a series of benefit shows.

MARKET FALL:
And Tax Cuts

Following the first blush of joy over the spirit of deflation which seemed to have been evoked by the commodity market price slump, U. S. citizens began to realize that complications might set in.

Most significant hidden gimmick behind the market skid appeared to be the development that the price decline might, in the words of Sen. Scott Lucas (Dem., Ill.), "eliminate all possibility" of income tax reductions this year.

And that apparently was the cautious but considered opinion of the entire tax-writing senate finance committee, of which Lucas is a member.

Sen. Owen Brewster (Rep., Me.), also a finance committee member, expressed a concurring view, pointing out that any appreciable general price decline "certainly would have to be taken into consideration" by Republicans in their tax-cutting plans.

Another member of the group, Sen. Harry Byrd (Dem., Va.) said that if a decline of market prices develops into a business recession, it probably would have "a considerable effect" on tax reduction.

"I certainly am not going to vote for any bill that would put the treasury in a deficit position," said Byrd.

While the senators' statements reflected a good deal of pussyfooting and at least a temporary surge of indecision with regard to tax reduction in the light of the market slump, it was obvious that they were thoroughly concerned with this turn of events.

Theory which set their tax-cutting plans awry is that a continued slump of commodity market prices would bring down the national income and tax receipts, thus rendering any major tax reduction perilous.

U. N. PLUM:
To Europe

Decision on where the United Nations will hold its 1948 assembly meeting will mean that some European city will get a healthy, 50-million-dollar plum tossed in its lap.

Because the choice of a site for the coming meeting probably will involve that much money there is a considerable ferment of anxiety in the cities of Paris, Brussels, Geneva or the Hague, principal contenders for the honor.

Trygve Lie, U. N. secretary-general, just back from a tour of European cities, has made a factual report without actually recommending any one spot. He did, however, narrow the field down to those four cities.

The 57 member nations of the general assembly decided at last fall's session to hold the 1948 parley in Europe, possibly to get away from the scene of their erstwhile rather futile effo

SERIAL:
Propaganda

Russia has issued the second installment of its popular propaganda serial based on the western Allies' behind-the-scenes relationships with Adolf Hitler.

Great Britain and France, asserted the latest Moscow release, connived with Der Fuehrer in spawning World War II by appeasing him in the hope that Germany could be shunted off into an attack on the Soviet Union.

During this international skulduggery, claimed the Soviet information bureau, Austria and Czechoslovakia were betrayed.

The Russian statement, citing German documents seized by the Red army as its authority, was the section portion of the Soviet propaganda retaliation to the release by the U. S. state department of other Nazi foreign office papers proving that Stalin and Hitler had been working on an agreement to divide Europe between them.

Unlike the first Soviet attempt to make capital of the German documents, this installment contained but one brief reference to the United States. Until lately, it said, it was customary to blame the "treachery" of Britain and France alone for the Munich appeasement. But it added:

"The fact that the American government undertook to make the German files public while excluding documents pertaining to the Munich agreement shows that the U. S. government is interested in whitewashing the heroes of the Munich treachery and in putting the blame on the Soviet Union."

SOIL CONTROL:
State or Federal?

One of the springtime battles now shaping up in congress will concern the issue of whether the national farm erosion program should be federally or state controlled.

Fireworks are scheduled to begin in March when the house agriculture committee opens hearings on a bill sponsored by Rep. Harry D. Cooley (Dem., N. C.) which would turn over the soil conservation program, operated by the agriculture department since 1935, to state land grant colleges.

Along with the transfer of authority would go about 10,500 department agents who administer the program in about 2,000 districts. That will provide a point of strong controversy, as will the measure's provision for federal grants to help states foot their soil-saving bills.

Pushing the switch from federal to state control most strongly is the national farm bureau, one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington, on the grounds that the soil conservation program would accomplish more under state authority.

The federal program has not been as effective as it should be so far, the farm bureau contends. But opponents of the transfer counter with the argument that the states lack experience to handle the project satisfactorily.

Currently operating under an annual budget of 39 million dollars, federal soil conservation service has 10,500 persons working with farmers, helping prepare conservation plans which the farmers may accept or reject.

So far it has prepared conservation plans for 476,128 farms covering 131,855,608 of the country's one billion acres of farm land.

THAT LOOK:
Watchful Waiting

Remember when the new look was new and an organization of women who called themselves the Little-Below-the-Knee club arose with sardonic wrath in Dallas, Tex., for a battle to keep the hemline up where they thought it belonged?

The girls now have subsided into the state of "watchful waiting" that eventually claims any minority group attempting to bar the path of a steamrolling social institution.

Present condition of the club, which attracted 300,000 members in 46 states, was outlined by its president, Mrs. Warren J. Woodard, 24-year-old housewife and mother, of Dallas.

"We are in an inactive status. We won a compromise victory and we are ready to mobilize again in case drastic style changes seem to be coming up," she asserted.

The "compromise victory," Mrs. Woodard said, was the persuading of American fashion designers to tone down the new look from the extreme styles which had originated in Paris.

"The dresses aren't nearly as long as the Paris designers planned them and we are getting to keep some padding in our shoulders," she boasted.

Go West, Girls

Although the U. S. census bureau doesn't exactly say so, its latest set of figures seems to indicate that single women who would like to get into marital harness should go West to do so.

Bureau's statistics showed that the West has the lowest proportion of single women in the country. Only 17 per cent of the women there are single, compared with 25 per cent in the Northeast.

START FROM SCRAPS

Boys Comb Rubbish Heaps For Boat Contest Materials

It's a treasure hunt in the rubbish heap for boys all over the United States. They are seeking old tin cans, mother's castoff garters, scraps of wood, paper clips, rubber bands and even leftover paint, all of which will be used for building entries in the first nationwide Skipper's Cup model speedboat contest.

To build a swift and sturdy craft for less than $1 is the immediate objective of many of the quarter million youngsters who are members of or affiliated with Boys' Clubs of America. This organization and Eveready Battery company are cosponsors of the nationwide contest.

If the "skipper" qualifies locally, his next aim is to survive regional eliminations so he can race his speedboat in the Reflecting Pool at Washington April 10 and 11 for final honors.

The national contest is dated to coincide with annual observance of Boys' Club Week.

The contest is limited to boys under 16, all of whom are supplied with working drawings of model types. The model boat was designed by Douglas Rolfe, who also will serve as one of the judges of the national finals. Instructions covering length, weight and detail govern all series. Hulls must be completed and water speed tests certified to national headquarters on or before March 13.

Builders of the best boats locally will receive awards of tiny, two-ounce electric motors and a supply of flashlight batteries. Winners in the seven Boys' Club regions of the U. S. will receive regional Skipper's cups.

In the national finals in Washington the seven boys who score top time trials, regardless of region, will compete before U. S. and foreign celebrities under the shadow of the Lincoln Memorial.

Judges will include Guy Lombardo, band leader and speedboat champion; Bill Stern and other well-known sports figures. Former President Hoover is serving as honorary chairman of the national committee.

Local craftsmanship contests will precede speed trials. Judging, which will be on a basis of point competition, will cover basic design, originality, workmanship, finish and overall appearance.

War Vets Respond To Call for Blood

ATLANTA, GA.—For 24 veterans of battlefields extending from Luzon to St. Lo, the call for blood was enough.

Many of them gratefully remembered that their own lives had been saved by blood plasma during the war, and here was Lawson veterans' hospital appealing for blood donors.

All 24, with Purple Hearts shining on their jackets, lined up at the hospital to give blood.

Proud Son Sees Widowed Mother In Cap and Gown

ITHACA, N. Y.—When the library tower chimes at Cornell university peeled forth their congratulations to mid-year graduates, Jonathan Hartwell Harwood III, aged 4, near burst with pride.

Among the young women in academic robes was his mother, Virginia Oake Harwood. Few fellows have the privilege of seeing their mothers graduate from college.

Jonny doesn't know it, but he was the chief reason why his mother finished her course in the college of home economics. Jonny's father fought in the invasion of Normandy, June 6, 1944; and he never came back.

Jonny's dad graduated from Cornell, too—in 1942. And his mother, whose parents live in Lockport, N. Y., left school in her sophomore year to marry him. They didn't have much time together—just a couple of summers while dad was training at Fort Bragg. Then he was sent to England to train as a Ranger—and was made a captain. Then came D-Day. . . .

"People thought I was crazy when I decided to take my two-and-one-half-year-old son to Ithaca with me in the fall of 1945 and continue college," Mrs. Harwood admits. "Maybe I was a little crazy. But I had to have something to do—something to occupy my time and my mind. I could be a better mother to Jonny, I felt, if I graduated from college and was prepared to earn my living."

The pension and insurance money made it possible for them to rent a small Ithaca apartment and live in modest comfort. And Jonny went to Cornell, too. Jonny attended the college's nursery school. He also will be graduated this year—from nursery school to kindergarten.

Woman Lighthouse Keeper Quits Post As Feet Are 'Tired'

TURKEY POINT, MD.—Because her feet are tired and she wants to "just rest," Mrs. Fannie Salter, the last woman lighthouse keeper on Chesapeake bay, has given up her job.

Believed to be the only qualified lightkeeper of her sex in the nation, Mrs. Salter retired from a job she has held for 23 years. She took charge of the Turkey Point tower on February 11, 1925, under appointment by Calvin Coolidge. She succeeded her husband, who had been the keeper for three years before his death.

On sick leave since last September, the woman light tender explains that "climbing the tower has given me fallen arches."

Although she has no definite plans for the future, Mrs. Salter, who is in her 60s, insists that she will remain near the water. Her immediate plans are to "just rest and catch up on long-delayed visits with relatives."

Sale of Loafing Space To Restore Old Plaza

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Appealing to the weaker side of man, Albuquerque Historical society offered loafing privileges in the plaza in return for donations in a drive for funds to restore the old town plaza. Results were good, officials of the society report.

The scale ran: For $8.55, one square foot of loafing space; for $10, plain and fancy loafing anywhere; for $17.10, loafing privileges with frills; for $25, your child's footprint in concrete, and for $50, your own footprint.

He Gets Stung Daily—But It's His Living

BALTIMORE.—Harold J. Franklin gets stung several times a day—but he makes his living by doing it.

Franklin's job entails thrusting his arm into a cage filled with 3,000 mosquitoes. After a minute he withdraws his arm and counts the bites. If they total about 60, well and good. If not, he repeats the process in another cage until he can get the required number of bites.

When he finds a hungry community of mosquitoes, he covers his arm with insecticide and thrusts it in again, giving the insects another opportunity for a vicious bite on his arm. Once again he must laboriously count the number of bites.

Franklin is a laboratory technician for a local chemical company. The process is a test of the power of mosquito repellants which the company is developing.

Household Hints

When washing windows during the winter put a small quantity of ammonia or vinegar into the water. This helps to keep the water from freezing on the glass.

When laundering lace collars, sew the collars on white muslin. This will help keep them in shape.

Protect your rubbers from oil and soil. Oil causes blistering, and soil will cause rubber articles to chip and crack and lose their resilient strength. Clean well after using.

Keep on hand: Percolator tops, electric fuses, an assortment of corks, waxed paper, paper napkins, a box of tacks, an extra can-opener, extra light bulbs, a ball of twine, bicycle tape.

For a larger and fluffier omelet, add hot instead of cold water when beating the egg yolks.

Keep acid foods, such as tomatoes, lemons and vinegar off the porcelain enamel of a range or refrigerator. They cause stains that won't come off.

Excessive use of oil or thinners will reduce the covering power of any paint.

Contestant Gets Decision In No-Blow Boxing Match

The only boxing match that was won without a single blow being struck was a bout in 1943 in Bristol, England, between two American soldiers, Louis Fetters and Carmine Milone says Collier's.

At the gong starting the first round, Milone rushed toward Fetters so fast that, in leading with a haymaker, he lost his balance, fell, struck his head on a ring post, was knocked unconscious and counted out.

GOOD NEWS

THE POWER CURTAILMENT IS ALL OVER NOW!

The completion of some additional generating capacity and the seasonal decline in load will now enable us, we believe, to take care of ALL of the electrical needs of our customers.

It will no longer be necessary for you to curtail the use of electricity during peak hours - - you may feel free to use as much electricity as you like at any hour of the day or night.

Electrical Dealers may sell electric ranges for other than "replacement" again, and may likewise sell electric water heaters for other than "off-peak" use if they desire.

Yes, HAPPY DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN, but . . . please do not rush us off our feet - - check with our nearest office to be sure we can be ready for you when you are ready for us. Our local service problems are still with us.

And . . . now as the power shortage ends, we want you to know that we deeply appreciate your splendid cooperation during the power emergency, and we thank you most sincerely for your patience and understanding.

Easier Dishwashing

Cut down on time consumed in dishwashing by keeping a small pail or other container filled with cool sudsy water standing on the drainboard or work table. As mixing spoons, egg beaters, knives, and other utensils are soiled, drop them in the container to soak. There will be no need for hard rubbing and scouring later when they are washed with the rest of the dishes. This plan also saves soap.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Where Does Your Money Go?

Read the other day where country folks and farmers spend more money, proportionately, on their homes than city dwellers do.

Doesn't seem hard to believe when you think it over. Take the folks in our town, for instance: They're home-loving people—who'd rather spend an evening by the fire with a mellow glass of beer than go out in search of entertainment or diversion.

So it's only natural they put more into what means most to them and to their children: their homes. They may not have too much to spend—but it goes for those permanent, abiding comforts that make home a nicer place to be.

And from where I sit, that budget calls for some of the niceties of home life too—like cider and popcorn for the kids from time to time, and a friendly glass of beer for Mom and Dad . . . things that belong with what we mean when we say "Home."

JAMES G. PATTON, President, National Farmers' Union, says:

"My advice to the farmers is to put all cash they can spare into U. S. Savings Bonds, and to hold onto every Bond they own. If the farmers and ranchers generally will do that—and millions of them are doing it today—we won't have the heartbreaking hard times we had after the last war on most of the farms of this country. Money saved in savings now is hardship saved later."

European Check-Up

How would you like to be able to take a five-weeks' trip to Europe to see if what you've heard is true? Mr. Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation of Pittsburgh, did just that. He made informal contacts with people of all sorts. Then he had opportunity to interview outstanding men of finance and industry in each country.

Because of Mr. Weir's nationally recognized leadership, and because I consider him a far-seeing and capable observer, I want to give you some of his conclusions.

People Must Work

English businessmen he interviewed think England must work out her own salvation. They said more U. S. dollars poured into England would be harmful. Our $4 billion loan to them has been wasted, they told him, and has kept England from facing problems squarely. "England's greatest need is for better government, more hard work and greater production."

France, excepting war-torn areas, was in about the same physical shape as England. "The most serious condition in France is the black market in money," he added. The black market offers twice as many francs for a dollar as the government allows officially. "The great problems of France are bad government, encouragement of the people to believe they can live without working, and the consequent failure of the people generally to produce."

Follow Up the Money!

Mr. Weir thinks the German people must have full liberty in the reconstruction of their country. He branded the Morgenthau plan, as applied in Germany, "one of the great crimes of history." America should stop lending or giving money without proper planning and full investigation of the use of the money. At the same time, he believes Germany is a safe place to put funds for reconstruction, with proper plans.

The individualism of the people in England, France, and the United States makes communism an unreal danger. He believes the people in these countries will never, for long, permit "the iron heel on their necks." It is his belief that a program financing foreign nations so they will not go communistic is without justification. "People who will stand for Communism will go in that direction irrespective of what we may do to the contrary."

Need for Leadership

Europe is loafing on the job of genuine recovery, he believes. "The day they roll up their sleeves and go to work, recovery will begin." Visitors find the English and French, supposedly starving, working only 40 hours a week. Mr. Weir asks: "Why don't they adopt a six-day week, which would greatly increase the production of all materials?" There are enough resources and manpower. "Given the right kind of leadership and adequate incentives . . . the peoples of Europe would work harder and more productively."

Mr. Weir's phrases "right kind of leadership" and "adequate incentives" suggest the key to this entire puzzle of European difficulties. Take away the profit motive and people lack incentive to work. Then add tax oppression and all the decay of leadership that Europe has had to put up with. The result is unrest and economic chaos. Grabbing the nearest "ism" will not bring prosperity, nor freedom of any kind, for anyone. That is the way to shackles that bind men: hands, feet, and ideals.

Karolyn Fosholm, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Fosholm, was ill and at a hospital at Thief River Falls this week.

Amanda Fosholm has been on the sick list this week and has been staying at the Theo. Ness home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ness visited at the Irvin Larson home Sunday.

Mrs. Christ Saastad visited a few days at Grand Forks this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Reed lefr Tuesday for Minneapolis where the former is consulting a specialist in surgery.

J. P. Augustine and A. W. Carlson returned Wednesday from a trip to the west coast.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Asks More Aid for China; Wallace Victory Worries Democrats; Senate OKs Tentative Budget Cut

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

SUPPORT:
China

Although it was obvious that his heart wasn't in it, President Truman presented congress with a request for 570 million dollars to be sent to China as a prop for the foundering economy of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

White House and state department sources admitted that the request was something less than a half-measure and claimed that the President had acted under pressure from the Republican congress which has insisted that the U. S. must support Chiang against the Communist revolution in connection with the European recovery plan.

At best the 570 million dollars is a token gesture—just a chip in relation to the vast amount of timber that would be needed to restore the rotting derelict of Chiang's government.

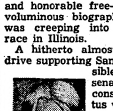
Theory behind this latest extension of aid, which will be used to finance Chinese imports of cereals, petroleum, coal, fertilizer and so forth, is that the money will enable Chiang's government to free other resources for purchase of arms and ammunition to continue the fight against the Communist guerrillas.

But that is more of an idle hope than a valid theory, because the government forces, despite their American arms and equipment, are being bested consistently by the Communists.

CAT FEET:
First a Dream

Like the fog that "comes on little cat feet," Carl Sandburg, honored and honorable free-verse poet and voluminous biographer of Lincoln, was creeping into the senatorial race in Illinois.

A hitherto almost imperceptible drive supporting Sandburg as a possible candidate for senator picked up considerable impetus with the release of a public opinion poll indicating that he might become a popular choice over the Democratic candidate, Paul H. Douglas, and the Republican candidate, Sen. C. Wayland Brooks.



SANDBURG

As far as the question of how a poet can turn into a politician is concerned, those favoring him say he is a "good man," he understands the common people and is educated and well-informed about the country's needs. The opposition claims he is politically inexperienced and, since he is a writer, is an impractical dreamer and an idealist.

But Sandburg, the poet, once wrote:

"The republic is a dream.
Nothing happens unless first a dream."

THE JOLT:
Election

Democrats were puzzled, not to say frankly alarmed, over the astonishing victory of Leo Isacson, American Labor party nominee, in the special congressional election for New York's 24th district.

The jolt was especially severe because Isacson had been prominently supported by Henry Wallace, avowed third party candidate for the White House, and the Bronx election had been viewed as a testing ground for Wallace's power to win votes.

Moreover, the election apparently was no fluke. Isacson, with 22,697 tallies, had amassed more votes than his three opponents combined. Karl Propper, Democrat, got 12,578; Dean Alfange, Liberal party, 3,840, and Joseph de Nigris, Republican, 1,482.

In the first stages of shock, political observers took the election's results as a significant straw in the wind. Wallace had campaigned vigorously for Isacson, particularly attacking policies of the Truman administration with respect to Palestine. However, no one was generalizing too much on the strength of that factor, because the Bronx district (24th congressional) has a heavy Jewish population.

Nevertheless, the Democratic candidate had been expected to win hands down, because the district has sent members of that party to congress consistently through the years.

Said Henry Wallace, with great elation: "This proves that the so-called third party can become the first party in 1948."

SURPLUS:
Biggest Ever

Tax payments on record high income and reduced government spending have brought the government's budget surplus up to a whopping $4,073,951,189 for the current fiscal year, treasury records show.

That amount is well over half of the 7.4-billion-dollar surplus President Truman had predicted would be on hand by June 30, 1948, and it is by far the largest surplus the government ever had on hand.

Oh, Happy Day

On Henry Wallace's side of the political fence there was abounding joy and gladness when Leo Isacson (right), Wallace-backed American Labor party candidate in a special Bronx congressional election, sent the Republican, Democratic and Liberal contenders to the showers and captured the contest by getting more votes than his three opponents combined.

BUDGET CUT:
Indifferent

With little discussion and a good deal of outright indifference, the senate adopted a resolution to cut President Truman's fiscal 1949 budget by 2.5 billion dollars.

How much significance the senate resolution would have in the final analysis was questionable, in view of prevailing uncertainties which might affect both sides of the ledger.

The 2.5-billion-dollar reduction would leave an estimated 10 billion dollars for tax cuts and debt reduction. Republicans, therefore, were feeling increasingly confident that an income tax slash of up to 5 billion dollars could be enacted.

Brevity of the senate discussion and its lack of apoplectic oratory was in direct contrast to last year's strident contest over the budget committee's recommendation of a 6-billion-dollar cut in the 1948 budget.

Democrats made no effort to block the proposed spending slash which had been recommended by the house-senate budget committee. It still requires house adoption.

Biggest bug in the senate's budget recommendation was the fact that it probably embodied a number of inaccurate estimates. Republican sponsors of the measure admitted that accurate estimates of budget needs were impossible at the time.

Sen. Styles Bridges (Rep., N. H.), chairman of the budget committee, compared the estimates with "a pre-game guess at the final score." But Sen. Alben Barkley (Dem., Ky.) called the procedure "a step in the dark."

Most profound uncertainties arising in the budget estimates were the result of the recent commodity market drop, which might possibly affect government tax revenues and also the annual personal income rate. Not one senator was willing to commit himself with finality on what future developments along these lines might be.

PLANETARY:
Martian Life

After having given rise to much idle speculation and phantasmagorial nonsense among recent generations, one of the minor riddles of the universe—whether life exists on the planet Mars—finally got a tentative answer.

With scientific reticence, Dr. Gerard P. Kuiper, director of McDonald observatory at Mt. Locke, Tex., offered a timorous "Yes—maybe."

He made his disclosure after taking a peek at the red planet, aided by a new-fangled infra-red spectrograph.

But if there is life it exists in the most primitive of forms.

Dr. Kuiper, aided by astronomers from the Universities of Chicago and Texas, came to the conclusion that probably lichen, the hard, moss-like growth found on rocks in the U. S., was present on Mars.

Weather conditions, although colder than anything Earth knows, would support such life, Dr. Kuiper said. Studies have shown that the temperature ranges from a few degrees above freezing to an estimated 80-100 degrees below zero.

Mars, he added, evidently has polar ice caps "composed of water." However, the ice caps retreat as much as 100 miles a day, indicating that they are very thin, possibly not more than one-eighth of an inch thick. Climate of the planet resembles "earth at an elevation of 50,000 feet," he explained.

One comforting deduction is to be made from this latest scientific evidence: Anything resembling human life, or even such malevolent life as H. G. Wells visualized, apparently cannot exist on Mars. So stop fretting over those flying disks

Factory and Farm Payrolls

Farm income represents about one-seventh of the national income. How does it compare with factory payrolls? Studies show that the two have paralleled each other for many years. For example, in 1928, farm income totaled $11,700,000 and factory payrolls amounted to $11,400,000. In the depression year of 1932, farm income dropped to $5,400,000 and factory payrolls hit a low of $5,200,000. Studies record that factory payrolls follow farm income up or down at intervals of three to six months.

Diversified Flax Uses

Besides being the source of the fine strong fibers from which world famous Irish linen is woven, Ulster's flax crop yields another equally famous product—flax straw. Flax straw is used for making fine stationery, carbon paper, condenser paper and cigarette paper. Flax straw also is an essential ingredient of all U. S. paper currency.

Favorite of Creole Cooks

Down New Orleans-way, okra appears as "gumbo" in soups and stews. It contains a thick, jelly-like substance that is ideal for thickening these dishes. When okra is cooked as a vegetable, a good way to avoid too much of its jelly-like consistency is to combine it with ripe tomatoes. This is an old and delightful favorite of Creole cooks.

California's Tree Rush

Lumber from a California tree farm rides for 2,800 feet in a railroad car suspended 1,200 feet in the air. Located near the spot where James Marshall found gold in 1848, timber crops from this tree eventually will dwarf in value the gold taken from the area, as the forests continue to produce wealth.

Ancient Santa Fe Trail

Centuries before Columbus discovered America, the Santa Fe trail was in use. At least 700 years ago, natives traded and traveled up and down the Arkansas river from its mouth to the Rocky mountains. Fear of dying of thirst influenced them to follow the stream instead of taking the desert route.

Private Car for Potatoes

A new-type potato car recently carried more than 90,000 pounds of the tubers on its initial trip from Maine to New Jersey markets. Built as an experiment, the car can hold 100,000 pounds of potatoes, 30,000 pounds more than usually is shipped in one car.

SCIENCE IN SURGERY

Complicated Device Photographs Perfect Camera—The Human Eye

Most people understand how the X-ray is used by the medical profession, and many have heard that photography is being used in the medical field. However, it is difficult for the average person to visualize just how photography can be used to advantage in medicine.

A visit to the New York Eye and Ear infirmary, the oldest specialized hospital in the western hemisphere, where people from all walks of life have been treated for more than a century in its numerous eye, ear, nose and throat clinics demonstrates the value of the technique. This hospital is staffed by the great and near-great in the fields of ophthalmology and otolaryngology. Surgeons with Park avenue practices come daily to diagnose and treat the 35,000 people who pass through its clinics each year.

Here medical photography has become a recognized and established service in the treatment of many eye diseases.

Explains Techniques.

This department was organized and is run by Mary R. Brown, one of the few women in this country who specialize in the field of ophthalmic photography. She is a pretty, quiet woman whose own son is just completing his medical education. Mrs. Brown explained some of the scientific techniques she uses daily in her diagnostic research and medical record work for surgeons at the New York Eye and Ear infirmary.

In addition to the small and delicate cameras that photograph the outer sections of the eye, there is the Fundus camera used for photographing the retina of the eye—the area deep within the eye itself. This complicated camera uses the lens of the patient's eye as part of its optical system and the resulting pictures are in color. They have great diagnostic value; the surgeon's decision depends many times on these true-to-life photographs.

Mrs. Brown relates that, "Only recently, a young lad who had his eye hurt playing basketball was brought into the hospital. A growth had formed on the retina and retinal pictures were ordered. These were airmailed to a famous eye specialist in England to corroborate our own surgeon's diagnosis. With nothing but these colored slides, magnified and thrown on a screen, he recommended preserving the eye, as our own men did. In time, the growth went away, just as the specialist said it would, and today this boy has his sight."

Recalls War Case.

"Back in November 1945," Mrs. Brown recalls, "a young G.I. bride, whose husband was still in the South Pacific, was brought in for photographs. Her record, when she entered the hospital, stated that a tumorous growth, thought to be malignant, had formed in the iris of the right eye and therefore the eye should be removed. The surgeon in charge at the New York Eye and Ear infirmary was not in full accord with this diagnosis and did not feel that this patient should lose an eye without further study. He ordered photographs taken of the condition every month, carefully measuring the size and comparing with the previous plates. At the end of a year the growth had not expanded in any direction, these measurements proved. During the following year pictures were taken every two months and careful checks were made against the first plates. It has been fully determined, up to the present time, that the growth is not malignant, and this grateful young woman still has her eye today."

Movies taken in color and used for teaching purposes are a part of Mrs. Brown's daily work. These films of rare and delicate operations performed at the infirmary are being used to guide and teach a new generation of eye surgeons throughout the Americas and as far away as India and the Philippines.

In addition to routine work, classes in medical photography are conducted for graduate students in ophthalmology. Thus the young specialists who train here can take with them to the small communities throughout the country a knowledge of ophthalmic photography that will help them trace the progress of eye diseases and their treatments, thus many times saving the sight of an eye otherwise lost.

HAVEN FOR AFFLICTED . . . The New York Eye and Ear infirmary, where Mrs. Brown helps guide surgeon's hands and scalpels with her photographic technique, is the oldest hospital of its kind in the western hemisphere. Founded in 1820, it ranks as the third oldest hospital in the City of New York.

No Track or Train But Railroad Pays Regular Dividends

ADRIAN, MICH. — Although it hasn't operated a train or collected a fare for nearly a century, the Erie and Kalamazoo railroad again is making its semi-annual payment to stockholders.

Now forgotten by all except historians and its fourth and fifth generation stockholders, the Erie and Kalamazoo ranked as the oldest railroad west of Schenectady, N. Y.

Although the railroad has long been inoperative, it derives a regular income from lease of its original right-of-way to the New York Central railroad. The present dividend amounts to $9,000 after deductions for taxes and expenses. Last year the E. and K. paid $19,500 in dividends.

Incorporated by the Michigan territorial legislature on April 22, 1833, the E. and K. was capitalized for $1,000,000 but only $300,000 in stock was issued.

It originally was authorized to operate between Lake Erie and "the navigable waters of the Kalamazoo river," but it was destined to run only between Port Lawrence (now Toledo, Ohio, but then part of Michigan) and Adrian, a distance of 35 miles.

By 1836 track had been laid from Port Lawrence to Adrian and the first horse-drawn train clattered over the wooden rails in [illegible]

Oklahoma Boasts Self-Supporting Capitol

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—One of Oklahoma's proudest boasts is that it has probably the only self-supporting state capitol in the world, one that even pays a bonus now and then.

While other states have to settle for the oratory, Oklahoma finds its coffers enriched by black gold. In the 13 years since the oil wells were drilled on the capitol grounds by order of E. W. Marland, former governor, the state has profited to the extent of $5,619,945.

The wells were drilled over bitter protests from residents of the swank Lincoln Terrace neighborhood nearby. Drilling oil wells is about the messiest job ever, they contended, besides representing a fire hazard. They quoted a city zoning ordinance to show Marland couldn't do it. The governor said he'd like to see someone stop him.

AGRICULTURAL WEED-NO-MORE
"A Proven Ester Formulation of 2,4-D

Proved new spray method requires only 5 gallons of water—or less—per acre! Saves labor, costs less!

Agricultural Weed-No-More now gives you easier, cheaper, and more effective weed control than has ever before been possible . . . in small grains, corn, flax, and pastures.

Use Agricultural Weed-No-More in only 5 gallons of water—or less—to control weeds on a whole acre! Developed by Sherwin-Williams Research, this new low-gallonage method has been proved on farms like yours.

Haul 95% less water. One man can treat as many as 100 acres per day. Use a simple lightweight rig that you or any local shop can quickly assemble!

NEW, BETTER HAND SPRAYING—for roadsides, barnyards, fence rows, ditches, etc. With the new Weed-No-More method you can treat ¼-mile of fence row 10 feet wide with only 1 gallon of spray mixture.

AGRICULTURAL WEED-NO-MORE
Costs less per acre because it controls weeds more effectively!
Agricultural Weed-No-More is a proven ester formulation of 2,4-D. The ester formulation is recognized by authorities as being more effective over a wider range of weeds and conditions than other types of 2,4-D. Weed-No-More penetrates the weed almost immediately, can't wash off, mixes easily, won't clog or corrode equipment, is harmless to stock.

Freezing Cooked Foods Solves Homemaker's Problems

Mrs. H. F. Lathrop (left), Allen county, Indiana, homemaker, empties frozen soup into the cooker well of her electric range for a quick snack. Meals made up of frozen foods give her extra holidays from the kitchen. Mrs. L. A. Spencer (right), Van Buren county, Michigan, has just unwrapped one of her frozen pies from the reach-in freezer. The other is still in its heavy waxed-paper covering. When baked, these will be a tempting dessert.

FREEZING cooked foods solves many problems for busy farm homemakers, advises Joan Miller, Rural Home expert of nationally circulated Capper's Farmer.

"Harvest hands want Sunday dinners every meal," she writes in the farm magazine. "If you're short of help in the kitchen, it's hard feeding them. When farm women hold a 3-day meeting you would like to go, but Dad and the youngsters can't cook for themselves. Every day you wish you could shorten the time spent preparing meals. Freezing cooked foods solves all these problems, according to representative farm homemakers."

Short-notice meals for extra help on the farm are easier to prepare with plenty of baked things in the home freezer, Miss Miller points out. Another big advantage is that home freezers make it possible to get the most out of food at the best stage.

Cooking large amounts of foods and freezing them at one time for future meals is a time and labor saver for many farm women. As one homemaker put it: "Cooking has to be done some time; with a home freezer, work can be distributed to make the farm woman's life a bit easier."

The approximate lengths of time farm women have kept cooked foods frozen are: red beans, 2 years, pastry shells and pies, 1 month; cookies, 6 months; bread 6 weeks; rolls, 2 months; cakes, 2 months; baked beans, 2 months; left-over meats, 9 months; baked ham, 3 or 4 months; tomato juice, 9 months; soupstock, 9 months; and wheat cereal, 2 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Robley Hunt and boys were visitors at the Oscar Christenson home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Grondahl and family visited at the Chas. Skoglund home Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Simmons of Moose River spent Wednesday at the Carl Knutson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Holmstrom and Barry, and Mr. and Clifford Johnson, Barbara and Dale visited at the Johnnie Ness home Sunday.

How to Put Up with Women's Styles

When Will Dudley's missus finally gave in to the new-style longer skirts, Will was mighty critical at first. Allowed as how women were a slave to fashion ... ought to dress to please their husbands and not style designers.

Sue finally reminded Will of his habit of sitting by the radio Saturday afternoons in shirt sleeves and old slippers, listening to the sportcasts with a mellow glass of beer. Suggested that maybe Will was a slave to comfort.

And Will admitted she was right.

Perhaps the way somebody dresses isn't always to our taste—just as Will's glass of beer may be another person's cider.

But from where I sit, those little differences aren't important—unless we go out of our way to make them so, by being hypercritical. As Will says now: "Well, anyway, those long skirts hide a multitude of shins" ... and lets it go at that!

Demand for Fertilizer Tops Supply Despite Big Increase in Output, U. S. Report Shows

Fertilizer Use Has Been Greatly Expanded in Midwestern States.

CHICAGO.— How farm demand for fertilizer has far outstripped the supply in spite of tremendous increases in production, was disclosed in a recent report of a special subcommittee of the U. S. House of Representatives' committee on agriculture.

The report, issued in Washington, was received here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee. It covers a preliminary survey of the 1947 fertilizer supply situation.

"It is obvious," says the report, "that the basic difficulty facing farmers this spring is not (with the exception of Chilean nitrate of soda) an actual deficiency of supply, but rather an unprecedented demand.

"Fertilizer consumption has increased at the rate of about a million tons a year during the war, reaching a peak of 14,000,000 tons in 1946 compared to an average of 7,300,000 tons in the years 1935-39.

"Significant in the pattern of increased demand is the greatly expanded use of fertilizer in the Midwestern states, where previously little fertilizer was used." The most important factor in the changing pattern of fertilizer use, the report continues, is that "fertilizer plants have naturally been built primarily in areas of greatest use — in the Southeast and along the Atlantic seaboard."

But most new fertilizer plants now being constructed are located to serve the Midwest area. The Civilian Production Administration reports that 65 new plants and 44 major plant expansions have gone into operation in the past year and others are being constructed as fast as materials become available.

At the Holt Township election Harold Nohre was made clerk, succeeding T. B. Folden who retired. Supervisors elected were H. D. Inman and Willie Larson.

The chief topic of conversation is the weather which dipped to 35 below on Wednesday morning. There is plenty or snow in case anyone asks, but spring s just around the corner, we predict.

A letter from Mrs. Signe Nohre who is staying in Spring Grove, Minnesota. tells of how she enjoys the Holt News and it helps, when she gets too lonesome for Holt. She is taking care of her father and mother who are 90 and 84 years, repectively. She also tells of the rains they have had and flood conditions. She also sends greetings to her Holt friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Horien had as their dinner guests Tuesday evening Mrs. L. Hams and children of International Falls, Mrs. Mabel Hanson and Mrs. Torrance Lillevold and sons, honoring Mary Ann Horien and Mrs. Hanson whose birthdays are the same dsy. Gracing the table was a birthday cake with candles. The honor guests received many gifts.

Dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Davidson Sunday of last week were: Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Johnson, Roy and Robert, Carl Johnson, Elaine Merill and Forest and Howard Horien.

Mrs. Hannah Tollefsrud of Newfolden, Mrs. Hj. Johnson Mrs. K. Nyberg and Mrs. V. E. Johnson visited Mrs. Guy Anderson at Thief River Falls Thursday.

Mrs. Lawrence Hams and Larry and Diane of International Falls visited at the Leo Horien home this week.

Rail Quiz

What is a slide detector fence?

To prevent train accidents due to falling rocks or earth slides in hilly or mountainous regions, electrically charged wire fences are made to serve as detectors. If a falling rock or an earth slide breaks one or more of the wires in the fence, a relay is released and "stop" signals are set up to halt a train approaching from either direction.

Holt People At LOL Meeting

Several thousand dairy and poultry farmers and their families are gathering in Minneapolis this week for the 27th Annual Meeting of the main plant of Land O' Lakes. Inc.

Attendance is expected to be the largest in the history of the organization, according to John Brandt, President.

He said many new problems confronting farmers and cooperative organizations gives this year's meeting unusual importance.

Yesterday's session included a report by F. D. Stone, on the marketing of Land O'Lakes products, and addresses by L. L. Getten, production manager and Milo K. Swanson, executive secretary, Wisconsin Council of Agriculture. W. E. Rumble, legal counsel for Land O'Lakes, discussed the tax status of cooperatives and Mr. Brandt presented his annual address.

Dr. J. O. Christenson, Superintendent of School of Agriculture, University of Minnesota, was the principal speaker last night.

Todays sessions consist of fnancial reports and business sessions.

Attending from here are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson, John Payne and Herb Johnson.

Mrs. S. G. Tharaldsen, who spent a number of weeks in St. Lukes hospital, is now staying at the C. O. Larson home.

Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen, Mrs. Harvey Peterson and Louis Sagstuen made a trip to Crookston Monday where the former consulted a specialist.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Sollom, Tuesday, a girl.

Anton Sagstuen and Lyle Johnson were guests of honor at a birthday party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Johnson on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Ness, Leonard and Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. Orlin Ness and Wayne visited relatives at Greenbush Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Haglund and family arrived here Saturday from Tacoma. Wash., where they have lived the past number of years. Mr. Haglund was injured there and is unable to work.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
*President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas*

You Pay for It

Other day that classic journal of ours, the Arkansas Gazette, commented: "The government has it all figured out what people do with every penny of their money. Now, if only the people could figure out what the government does with it." That is a real poser! To be sure, government has to spend a lot of money. We are a big nation. Moreover, we find it necessary to take on obligations in many foreign lands.

But whether the government (specifically the federal government, where they throw around big sums) spends no more than is needful is important to everyone. Government is not a luxury; it is a necessity. Yet, to read the budget figures you would think all operations were on a luxury basis.

Government Spends

That government is expensive was proved again by John T. Flynn, who showed in Reader's Digest that TVA, a government project, forgot to include certain items in its bookkeeping. Instead of the indicated profit, there was a real deficit of $130,000,000 to June 30, 1944. Flynn shows there was an actual loss in sales of power to that date of $15,000,000. This demonstrates that efficiency is a quality unknown to government operations.

Here's a prophecy. Wait until the budget is presented to this Congress, then watch the departments and bureaus fight any reductions. Increase the appropriation and swell the payroll — but shrink the swollen department? Never.

Way to Depression

This kind of selfishness means meager tax savings. It permits little tax reduction for folks who so much need relief. The more we tax and the more we spend for government, the nearer we get to depression.

Taxes of all kinds are too heavy these days. Corporation taxes are burdensome. Income taxes on all levels are too high. The individual income taxes cut down the rewards of the wage earner, keeping him from saving and investing. Instead, his tax payment is earmarked: "government expense." Some people oppose tax reductions for corporations and individuals, without realizing that continued heavy taxes will undermine our economic system and their own standard of living.

Decisions Lie Ahead

Obviously, one of the quickest ways to halt wasteful and unprofitable bureaucracy is to stop feeding fuel to its fires. Government, without a plentiful supply of tax money, could hardly be wasteful government. Congress has the power to say what the government shall spend and what amount it shall collect in taxes. It is up to us to see that our Congress keeps a proper rein on collections and expenditures.

Unwise spending and taxing could take this nation into the bankruptcy of communism. It could do it more quickly than anything else. Indeed, the power to tax is the power to destroy. We must see to it that America keeps an efficient and well-managed government, not a wasteful bureaucracy. That will be a powerful factor in deciding, in the coming months, whether America will remain prosperous and economically stable.

Deadline for Flax Ins. March 15

Federal Crop Insurance is now being sold in Marshall County, the government insurance is on flax.

This insurance is a sound business practice protecting your investment of seed and expense of seeding.

We have two areas of coverage Area No. 1 has a coverage of 3.4 bu. per acre and area no. 2 has a coverage of 3.9 bu. per acre. The premium per acre has been reduced to .4 of a bushel. Both premium and indemnity are figured at the local support level for flax which is $5.74.

You may insure your fax crop by contacting your local AAA office or Chester Larson who represents Holt, East Valley, Excel and Agder townships.

Leonard Ness of St. Cloud spent a few days at his home here.

Here's Bright Salad For Dreary Days

A bright salad for dreary days is this combination of crispy apples and crunchy peanuts, writes Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

"The family will enjoy helping themselves to the vitamin-packed treat served from a large bowl," she tells homemakers. "Or use individual salads for a pleasant change. For an appetizing touch garnish with peanuts and unpeeled slices of apples."

PEANUT WALDORF SALAD

- 1 c. apples, diced
- 1 c. celery, chopped
- ½ c. peanuts, chopped
- 2 tbsp. salad oil
- ½ tsp. tarragon vinegar
- ½ tbsp. lemon juice
- ¼ tsp. salt
- ⅛ tsp. paprika
- ⅛ tsp. pepper

Combine the apples, celery and peanuts. Mix remaining ingredients together thoroly by beating with rotary beater. Blend this with first mixture. Let stand in the refrigerator until chilled. Serve on lettuce or other salad green. Mayonnaise may be added if desired. Serves 4.

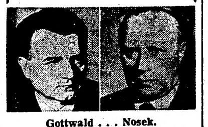
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Reds Complete Political Conquest Of Czechs, Take Over Government; Congress Extends Rent Controls

Released by WNU Features.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CONQUEST
Curtain Time



Gottwald . . . Nosek.

There were six days of crisis in Czechoslovakia and then it was all over—the Communists were in complete control of that nation of 13 million population.

The iron curtain came down with a muffled clang as President Eduard Benes accepted the resignation of 14 of his cabinet ministers after he had refused for a week to do so.

Into power strode Communist Premier Klement Gottwald who had led his party upward from a minority status in Czechoslovakia until now its members dominated every phase of the nation's life and were prepared to swing it directly into the orbit of other Soviet satellites.

Wielding the club to keep the Czechs in line was Gottwald's good right hand, Vaclav Nosek, minister of the interior, who controls all Czechoslovakian police forces. In that powerful position in a Communist-dominated state Nosek was analogous to the mailed glove on the dictator's fist.

For what it was worth—and that was very little—aging President Benes had managed to keep at least a superficial appearance of representative government by insisting that the government be composed of members of other parties of the national front which reinstated the Czechoslovak republic in 1945 when the Germans were being driven out. But it was a hollow, tasteless victory—meaningless in any practical application.

The new government consists of 12 Communists (there were seven before), four Social Democrats, two Czech National Socialists, two Catholic Peoples party members, one Slovak Democrat and two non-party men, Jan Masaryk as foreign minister and Gen. Ludwig Svoboda as minister of defense.

Bewildered Czechs finally knew their cherished republic had come to a grim end when loud speakers in Prague blared this announcement into the night:

"Reaction has been beaten. Go back to work and let us complete our tasks on the two year plan."

In Czechoslovakia's ironic chronology the surging wall of the Red tide engulfed their country just 10 years after the western Allies had sold the nation to Hitler at Munich in a tragically selfish and futile effort to avoid war and save their own skins at the price of just one small Central European state.

Reaction

With the Balkans all tied up with a red ribbon the world began to wonder which small nation the Communist tide would engulf next.

Some thought Finland might be the top name on the list, others wondered whether Austria, France and Italy might not be clamped soon in the Communist vise.

There was general agreement on one fact, at least: That the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia had forged perhaps the most vital link in the Russian chain intended to shackle the Marshall plan.

In Finland and Italy, as in Czechoslovakia, elections were coming up soon and the Communists were out for victory. Finland, like Czechoslovakia, is ruled by a coalition government which has acknowledged that the country must remain friendly with Russia

DOWNWARD:
Factory Wages

Life, as it is reflected in the weekly pay check, is no longer as lush as it was last year. To be exact, it was 47 cents less in January than in December, according to the bureau of labor statistics.

The bureau disclosed that weekly earnings of factory workers declined in January to an average of $52.27.

Average weekly hours of the 12.8 million production workers in manufacturing establishments fell from 41.2 to 40.6 between December and January, and weekly earnings fell from $52.74 to $52.27.

However, average hourly earnings increased from $1.279 in December to $1.289 in mid-January.

The average number of hours worked each week is exactly the same as in January, 1947, the bureau said, but gross hourly earnings were about 13 cents higher.

In the durable goods lines the weekly earnings for production workers slid off from the December peak of $56.52 to $55.71. In the non-durable goods industries average weekly earnings were $48.62 for a work week of 40.1 hours, while hourly earnings averaged $1.213.

RENT CONTROL:
Extension

The tenants got another reprieve. Legislation extending federal rent controls for a month beyond the February 29 deadline — through March 31 — was passed by the house and senate and sent to the White House for signature.

The bill was approved while the senate was considering legislation to continue rent controls for 14 months, and it will operate to give the house and senate time to agree on long range extension measures.

In evolving rent control extension during the interim provided by the stop-gap bill the house was expected to devote considerable time to wondering whether congress should not wait and see whether prices will be stabilized at a lower figure following the recent market break before it acts in the matter.

It was probable, however, that the house would go along with the senate's 14-month rent control extension, but would attempt to make a "good many" revisions.

House backers of rent control legislation are determined to protect tenants who have agreed to increases up to 15 per cent against further hikes in their rent. The senate bill now under consideration would freeze rents at the increased level from December 31, 1948, when the 15 per cent leases expire, until April 30, 1949.

COLD CHICKEN:
No Fuel Oil

Campaigning politicians this year may have to eliminate "a chicken in every pot" from their lists of promises because there might not be enough chickens to go around.

Reports from the poultry belt in the Midwest say that the severity of the fuel oil shortage is cutting into the 1948 baby chick hatch to threaten poultry and egg production this year.

Thousands of farmers canceled chick orders for early March delivery because they couldn't get oil for their brooder stoves. Iowa and the Northwest were suffering most from the situation, but it also was bad in Illinois and Indiana. The kerosene shortage has been severe enough to cause hardship in most of the poultry producing area.

Some poultrymen were deferring chick deliveries until later dates, hoping that warmer weather would ease the tight oil supply.

Officials of one large hybrid chick hatchery in Iowa claimed they needed six tank cars of fuel oil to get their 1948 production under way.

One of the most vociferous complaints generally being made among farmers was that city consumers were using up all the fuel oil.

FEARFUL:
Hoof and Mouth

Cattle, hog and sheep growers of the U. S. continue to live in the shadow of a fear that the hoof and mouth disease which has been decimating livestock in Mexico for many months will spread across the border and affect U. S. herds.

At a recent session in Chicago a joint committee of the cattle, hog and sheep raisers forwarded a plea to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson to renew efforts to eradicate the disease.

Among other things, the stockmen requested that these actions be taken:

1. Renegotiate with high Mexican officials on plans for resuming the interrupted slaughter and burial program.
2. Immediate construction of a fence along the present quarantine line about 250 miles south of the U. S. border.
3. Build new beef canning plants in the "clean" states of northern Mexico and continue to run those now operating.

BULL'S-EYE:
V-2 Rockets

Army scientists are saying now that improved control devices on German V-2 rockets eventually will be able to steer them to within yards — instead of miles — of their targets.

During World War II, German V-2s missed their mark by an average of six miles.

So far, however, scientists are only in the first stage of improving the rockets' marksmanship

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

ROMANCE OF THE BELLS . . . Cast in Spain in the eighth century, an ancient bell with a romantic history has summoned McKendree college students to classes for nearly a century. The bell reposes in the dark belfry of the tower of the historic college chapel (above), which was built soon after the turn of the 19th century.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Students Heed Aged Bell's Call to Class for Century

WNU Features.

LEBANON, ILL. — Oldest chapel bell in the United States is not the famed Liberty Bell in Philadelphia or an aged bell from long-settled St. Augustine, Fla., but an ancient bell which has rung classes in and out of McKendree college here for nearly a century.

This fact is authenticated by historical data, meager in spots, but fact nevertheless. The bell has a recorded history that dates back for centuries before founding of the Lebanon institution.

The bell, which is located in the clock tower of the historic chapel building on the campus at McKendree, a Methodist institution, has been used almost hourly to summon students to class ever since the college was a mere stripling of 30 years.

But its sonorous voice was heard centuries before Columbus braved the Atlantic to discover America. The vibrant toll of the bell first was heard in Spain, where historians say it was cast in the eighth century. Later it was recast in Spain and brought to Florida sometime in the 16th century.

There are many unfilled gaps in the story of the bell's turbulent history. From Florida it found its way to the Southwest during the historical era when the West was the last frontier of the country. In the 1850s a roving band of Santa Fe traders found the old bell, dated as to its arrival in America, in a deserted Indian mission in New Mexico.

For some reason the heavy instrument was brought to St. Louis, then the gateway city to the new country. Historians disagree as to whether or not the bell was recast or repaired in St. Louis. Anyway, the name, "Saint Louis," is visible on the bell, as well as other symbols and insignia so corroded as to be almost undecipherable.

Following its arrival in St. Louis, the bell was taken to Centralia, Ill., in 1858, to be exhibited at the Illinois state fair. Here it was purchased for McKendree college by a Mr. Cobleigh, at that time president of the budding institution.

The bell was taken to Lebanon and hoisted into the bell tower of the new chapel then under construction. Since then, it has reposed in the dark belfry of the tower above the building, where the outside world little realizes the romance of its long history.

Just how the bell served during its first century in America is unknown. McKendree college, founded in 1828, is conceded to be one of the oldest colleges in the Mississippi basin, and one of the buildings, known as "Old Main," is said to be the oldest assembly hall west of the Alleghenies.

Very few people have seen the bell at its resting place high in the clock tower of McKendree's chapel, for to reach it, a person must climb a series of ladders that lead upward to the darkened tower.

Aged Evangeline Oak Receives Special Aid

ST. MARTINVILLE, LA. — In an attempt to stimulate the aged tree, special tree food has been placed in the ground at the roots of historic Evangeline Oak, which stands on the banks of Bayou Teche near the old Attakapas trading post.

About 100 pounds of a special preparation were embedded near the roots to overcome slight deterioration of the tree noted recently.

Broncho Busters Thrill Youngsters Of Old River Town

CASSVILLE, WIS. — This is one town where the youngsters don't have to go to the Saturday afternoon movie to see their cowboy heroes.

Some of the best broncho busters, trick ropers and bulldoggers in the country live right here in this Mississippi river village of 956 population. To the delight of the town's youngsters, they wear their big hats, fancy jackets, loud shirts and high-heeled cowboy boots around town whenever they are home from rodeos in New York, Chicago, Denver, Pendleton, Salinas and other cities.

The hard ridin' hombres who give the village a touch of the rough and ready west are four members of the Buschbom family. They are Bill Buschbom Sr., 41, and his two sons, Jack, 20, and Bill Jr., 23, and Bill's brother, Ted, 34.

At present the Buschboms have more than 100 horses, some trained and some wild, and an assortment of bulls, steers and calves on their ranch near here.

As usual, Cassville youngsters anxiously are awaiting the advent of spring. Then the Buschboms will spend a few weeks practicing bareback riding, roping and bulldogging steers in the field near the big barn before hitting the sawdust circuit.

During those two weeks, Cassville mothers are going to have a hard time getting their pistol-packin' cowboy sons home in time for meals.

Jack Buschbom ranks as one of the top three or four bareback riders in the country, winning about $5,000 in prize money in that competition last year. Bill Jr. is one of the top ranking trick ropers. The father, a former bronc rider and bulldogger, now confines his activities almost exclusively to putting his 8 to 12 trained horses through their paces in his "liberty act" at major shows. Occasionally, however, the lure of his old calling impels him back into the ring for bulldogging contests and last year he won first place in a Mobridge, S. D., show. Uncle Ted also is a bulldogger.

Home Ec Students Practice on Husbands

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—For the first time, the practice cottage conducted for seniors in home economics at Central State Teachers college has male occupants. The three men, however, are not studying home economics but are husbands of three seniors in the course.

Spending part of a semester as occupants of the practice cottage is a requirement for home economics seniors. The idea, of course, is to put into practice what was preached in the home ec classrooms.

The three degree seekers, Lillian Korzilius, Elizabeth Paulson and Gloria Schultz, tried out their lessons on real, live husbands when Miss Bessie May Allen, department director, permitted the three couples to live in the house.

Two of the husbands, Edward Korzilius and John Paulson, also are students in the college while the third, Louis Schultz, is employed in Stevens Point.

Six Daring Aerialists In Incredible Escape

In a motorbus accident in Japan in 1934, the seven passengers, all men, saved their lives in one of the most incredible escapes on record, says Collier's. While rounding a mountain road, the bus skidded, went over a cliff and crashed several hundred feet below, killing the driver.

Halfway down the mountain, however, the vehicle had bumped into a lone tree which checked its fall for an instant. During these few seconds, the men made a mass flying leap from the windows of the bus to the branches of the tree. Their amazing agility and timing were accounted for by the fact that they were aerialists, performing together in a trapeze act of a circus.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Do not immerse the electrical parts of an appliance in water, particularly the motor, heating element, thermostat, or switch.

Glue a small piece of cloth measuring tape to the inside of the wooden frame of your knitting bag. You'll find this handy when sewing or knitting.

If delicate net curtains are placed in a cheesecloth bag, they may be laundered safely in the washing machine. Such articles as nylon hose and lingerie may also be washed this way.

To retain the fluffiness of chenille or candlewick bedspreads hang them double and wrong side out when drying. In this manner the tufting rubs together and is kept fluffy.

The vitamin value of lettuce drops markedly when this vegetable is kept in the refrigerator too long. The rate of loss corresponds to the amount of wilting.

½ cup warm water (100°-110° F.)
¾ cup milk
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
5 cups flour (approximately)
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup shortening
2 eggs
½ cup currants
Add 2 pkgs. Red Star Dry Yeast to warm water. Let stand. Scald milk, add sugar and salt. Stir well and cool to lukewarm. Stir yeast solution and add to milk mixture. Add half the flour sifted with cinnamon. Stir in well beaten eggs, shortening and currants beating well after each addition. Add remainder of flour and mix thoroughly. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead for 5 minutes. Shape into smooth ball and place in greased bowl. Brush top lightly with shortening. Cover and let rise in warm place for 45 minutes. Shape into round buns and place in well greased baking pan. Cover and let rise until light (about 45 minutes). Bake in moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 20 minutes. Make cross with plain icing. CONQUEST
Curtain Time

Gottwald . . . Nosek.

There were six days of crisis in Czechoslovakia and then it was all over—the Communists were in complete control of that nation of 13 million population.

The iron curtain came down with a muffled clang as President Eduard Benes accepted the resignation of 14 of his cabinet ministers after he had refused for a week to do so.

Into power strode Communist Premier Klement Gottwald who had led his party upward from a minority status in Czechoslovakia until now its members dominated every phase of the nation's life and were prepared to swing it directly into the orbit of other Soviet satellites.

Wielding the club to keep the Czechs in line was Gottwald's good right hand, Vaclav Nosek, minister of the interior, who controls all Czechoslovakian police forces. In that powerful position in a Communist-dominated state Nosek was analogous to the mailed glove on the dictator's fist.

For what it was worth—and that was very little—aging President Benes had managed to keep at least a superficial appearance of representative government by insisting that the government be composed of members of other parties of the national front which reinstated the Czechoslovak republic in 1945 when the Germans were being driven out. But it was a hollow, tasteless victory—meaningless in any practical application.

The new government consists of 12 Communists (there were seven before), four Social Democrats, two Czech National Socialists, two Catholic Peoples party members, one Slovak Democrat and two non-party men, Jan Masaryk as foreign minister and Gen. Ludwig Svoboda as minister of defense.

Bewildered Czechs finally knew their cherished republic had come to a grim end when loud speakers in Prague blared this announcement into the night:

"Reaction has been beaten. Go back to work and let us complete our tasks on the two year plan."

In Czechoslovakia's ironic chronology the surging wall of the Red tide engulfed their country just 10 years after the western Allies had sold the nation to Hitler at Munich in a tragically selfish and futile effort to avoid war and save their own skins at the price of just one small Central European state.

Reaction

With the Balkans all tied up with a red ribbon the world began to wonder which small nation the Communist tide would engulf next.

Some thought Finland might be the top name on the list, others wondered whether Austria, France and Italy might not be clamped soon in the Communist vise.

There was general agreement on one fact, at least: That the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia had forged perhaps the most vital link in the Russian chain intended to shackle the Marshall plan.

In Finland and Italy, as in Czechoslovakia, elections were coming up soon and the Communists were out for victory. Finland, like Czechoslovakia, is ruled by a coalition government which has acknowledged that the country must remain friendly with Russia

DOWNWARD:
Factory Wages

Life, as it is reflected in the weekly pay check, is no longer as lush as it was last year. To be exact, it was 47 cents less in January than in December, according to the bureau of labor statistics.

The bureau disclosed that weekly earnings of factory workers declined in January to an average of $52.27.

Average weekly hours of the 12.8 million production workers in manufacturing establishments fell from 41.2 to 40.6 between December and January, and weekly earnings fell from $52.74 to $52.27.

However, average hourly earnings increased from $1.279 in December to $1.289 in mid-January.

The average number of hours worked each week is exactly the same as in January, 1947, the bureau said, but gross hourly earnings were about 13 cents higher.

In the durable goods lines the weekly earnings for production workers slid off from the December peak of $56.52 to $55.71. In the non-durable goods industries average weekly earnings were $48.62 for a work week of 40.1 hours, while hourly earnings averaged $1.213.

RENT CONTROL:
Extension

The tenants got another reprieve. Legislation extending federal rent controls for a month beyond the February 29 deadline — through March 31 — was passed by the house and senate and sent to the White House for signature.

The bill was approved while the senate was considering legislation to continue rent controls for 14 months, and it will operate to give the house and senate time to agree on long range extension measures.

In evolving rent control extension during the interim provided by the stop-gap bill the house was expected to devote considerable time to wondering whether congress should not wait and see whether prices will be stabilized at a lower figure following the recent market break before it acts in the matter.

It was probable, however, that the house would go along with the senate's 14-month rent control extension, but would attempt to make a "good many" revisions.

House backers of rent control legislation are determined to protect tenants who have agreed to increases up to 15 per cent against further hikes in their rent. The senate bill now under consideration would freeze rents at the increased level from December 31, 1948, when the 15 per cent leases expire, until April 30, 1949.

COLD CHICKEN:
No Fuel Oil

Campaigning politicians this year may have to eliminate "a chicken in every pot" from their lists of promises because there might not be enough chickens to go around.

Reports from the poultry belt in the Midwest say that the severity of the fuel oil shortage is cutting into the 1948 baby chick hatch to threaten poultry and egg production this year.

Thousands of farmers canceled chick orders for early March delivery because they couldn't get oil for their brooder stoves. Iowa and the Northwest were suffering most from the situation, but it also was bad in Illinois and Indiana. The kerosene shortage has been severe enough to cause hardship in most of the poultry producing area.

Some poultrymen were deferring chick deliveries until later dates, hoping that warmer weather would ease the tight oil supply.

Officials of one large hybrid chick hatchery in Iowa claimed they needed six tank cars of fuel oil to get their 1948 production under way.

One of the most vociferous complaints generally being made among farmers was that city consumers were using up all the fuel oil.

FEARFUL:
Hoof and Mouth

Cattle, hog and sheep growers of the U. S. continue to live in the shadow of a fear that the hoof and mouth disease which has been decimating livestock in Mexico for many months will spread across the border and affect U. S. herds.

At a recent session in Chicago a joint committee of the cattle, hog and sheep raisers forwarded a plea to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson to renew efforts to eradicate the disease.

Among other things, the stockmen requested that these actions be taken:

1. Renegotiate with high Mexican officials on plans for resuming the interrupted slaughter and burial program.
2. Immediate construction of a fence along the present quarantine line about 250 miles south of the U. S. border.
3. Build new beef canning plants in the "clean" states of northern Mexico and continue to run those now operating.

BULL'S-EYE:
V-2 Rockets

Army scientists are saying now that improved control devices on German V-2 rockets eventually will be able to steer them to within yards — instead of miles — of their targets.

During World War II, German V-2s missed their mark by an average of six miles.

So far, however, scientists are only in the first stage of improving the rockets' marksmanship

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

ROMANCE OF THE BELLS . . . Cast in Spain in the eighth century, an ancient bell with a romantic history has summoned McKendree college students to classes for nearly a century. The bell reposes in the dark belfry of the tower of the historic college chapel (above), which was built soon after the turn of the 19th century.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Students Heed Aged Bell's Call to Class for Century

WNU Features.

LEBANON, ILL. — Oldest chapel bell in the United States is not the famed Liberty Bell in Philadelphia or an aged bell from long-settled St. Augustine, Fla., but an ancient bell which has rung classes in and out of McKendree college here for nearly a century.

This fact is authenticated by historical data, meager in spots, but fact nevertheless. The bell has a recorded history that dates back for centuries before founding of the Lebanon institution.

The bell, which is located in the clock tower of the historic chapel building on the campus at McKendree, a Methodist institution, has been used almost hourly to summon students to class ever since the college was a mere stripling of 30 years.

But its sonorous voice was heard centuries before Columbus braved the Atlantic to discover America. The vibrant toll of the bell first was heard in Spain, where historians say it was cast in the eighth century. Later it was recast in Spain and brought to Florida sometime in the 16th century.

There are many unfilled gaps in the story of the bell's turbulent history. From Florida it found its way to the Southwest during the historical era when the West was the last frontier of the country. In the 1850s a roving band of Santa Fe traders found the old bell, dated as to its arrival in America, in a deserted Indian mission in New Mexico.

For some reason the heavy instrument was brought to St. Louis, then the gateway city to the new country. Historians disagree as to whether or not the bell was recast or repaired in St. Louis. Anyway, the name, "Saint Louis," is visible on the bell, as well as other symbols and insignia so corroded as to be almost undecipherable.

Following its arrival in St. Louis, the bell was taken to Centralia, Ill., in 1858, to be exhibited at the Illinois state fair. Here it was purchased for McKendree college by a Mr. Cobleigh, at that time president of the budding institution.

The bell was taken to Lebanon and hoisted into the bell tower of the new chapel then under construction. Since then, it has reposed in the dark belfry of the tower above the building, where the outside world little realizes the romance of its long history.

Just how the bell served during its first century in America is unknown. McKendree college, founded in 1828, is conceded to be one of the oldest colleges in the Mississippi basin, and one of the buildings, known as "Old Main," is said to be the oldest assembly hall west of the Alleghenies.

Very few people have seen the bell at its resting place high in the clock tower of McKendree's chapel, for to reach it, a person must climb a series of ladders that lead upward to the darkened tower.

Aged Evangeline Oak Receives Special Aid

ST. MARTINVILLE, LA. — In an attempt to stimulate the aged tree, special tree food has been placed in the ground at the roots of historic Evangeline Oak, which stands on the banks of Bayou Teche near the old Attakapas trading post.

About 100 pounds of a special preparation were embedded near the roots to overcome slight deterioration of the tree noted recently.

Broncho Busters Thrill Youngsters Of Old River Town

CASSVILLE, WIS. — This is one town where the youngsters don't have to go to the Saturday afternoon movie to see their cowboy heroes.

Some of the best broncho busters, trick ropers and bulldoggers in the country live right here in this Mississippi river village of 956 population. To the delight of the town's youngsters, they wear their big hats, fancy jackets, loud shirts and high-heeled cowboy boots around town whenever they are home from rodeos in New York, Chicago, Denver, Pendleton, Salinas and other cities.

The hard ridin' hombres who give the village a touch of the rough and ready west are four members of the Buschbom family. They are Bill Buschbom Sr., 41, and his two sons, Jack, 20, and Bill Jr., 23, and Bill's brother, Ted, 34.

At present the Buschboms have more than 100 horses, some trained and some wild, and an assortment of bulls, steers and calves on their ranch near here.

As usual, Cassville youngsters anxiously are awaiting the advent of spring. Then the Buschboms will spend a few weeks practicing bareback riding, roping and bulldogging steers in the field near the big barn before hitting the sawdust circuit.

During those two weeks, Cassville mothers are going to have a hard time getting their pistol-packin' cowboy sons home in time for meals.

Jack Buschbom ranks as one of the top three or four bareback riders in the country, winning about $5,000 in prize money in that competition last year. Bill Jr. is one of the top ranking trick ropers. The father, a former bronc rider and bulldogger, now confines his activities almost exclusively to putting his 8 to 12 trained horses through their paces in his "liberty act" at major shows. Occasionally, however, the lure of his old calling impels him back into the ring for bulldogging contests and last year he won first place in a Mobridge, S. D., show. Uncle Ted also is a bulldogger

Home Ec Students Practice on Husbands

STEVENS POINT, WIS.—For the first time, the practice cottage conducted for seniors in home economics at Central State Teachers college has male occupants. The three men, however, are not studying home economics but are husbands of three seniors in the course.

Spending part of a semester as occupants of the practice cottage is a requirement for home economics seniors. The idea, of course, is to put into practice what was preached in the home ec classrooms.

The three degree seekers, Lillian Korzilius, Elizabeth Paulson and Gloria Schultz, tried out their lessons on real, live husbands when Miss Bessie May Allen, department director, permitted the three couples to live in the house.

Two of the husbands, Edward Korzilius and John Paulson, also are students in the college while the third, Louis Schultz, is employed in Stevens Point.

Six Daring Aerialists In Incredible Escape

In a motorbus accident in Japan in 1934, the seven passengers, all men, saved their lives in one of the most incredible escapes on record, says Collier's. While rounding a mountain road, the bus skidded, went over a cliff and crashed several hundred feet below, killing the driver.

Halfway down the mountain, however, the vehicle had bumped into a lone tree which checked its fall for an instant. During these few seconds, the men made a mass flying leap from the windows of the bus to the branches of the tree. Their amazing agility and timing were accounted for by the fact that they were aerialists, performing together in a trapeze act of a circus.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Do not immerse the electrical parts of an appliance in water, particularly the motor, heating element, thermostat, or switch.

Glue a small piece of cloth measuring tape to the inside of the wooden frame of your knitting bag. You'll find this handy when sewing or knitting.

If delicate net curtains are placed in a cheesecloth bag, they may be laundered safely in the washing machine. Such articles as nylon hose and lingerie may also be washed this way.

Remodeling Erases Years From Old House

THIS cheerful, modern-equipped black, white and red kitchen with inlaid linoleum covering chromium-edged counter surface, is an example of what can be done to erase years from an old house by a smart remodeling job.

The Elmer Klever family did just that when Mr. Klever bought a farm in Scott county, Iowa, four years ago, Betty Lindsay points out in an article in Capper's Farmer, a leading farm magazine. The old-fashioned house was gloomy and run down. It had few conveniences.

So mother and dad and the three children, Marilyn, Joan and Al made plans for modernizing the house. Soon carpenters were at work.

The kitchen is just one instance of what was done inside and out, Miss Lindsay tells the readers of the farm magazine that reaches 1,300,000 farm families. Off came three unused porches. White asbestos shingles masked the age of the exterior. Gay red shutters gave a streamline effect. By adding a dormer, wasted space over the living room was made into a bedroom. A hallway was built upstairs to save going through one room to get to another. Some windows were changed.

There was electricity in the house. So Klever installed a water system with a softener, making possible a new kitchen sink and a bathroom. A new furnace with stoker and blower was added. Modern materials pepped up the aged interior. The Klevers slipcovered and refinished old furniture so it would look better in new surroundings.

Uncle Sam Says

Want to know a Leap Year proposal you can accept whether you are single or married and have a dozen children? It's the proposal to join the Payroll Savings Plan for buying United States Savings Bonds, or the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank if you are self-employed. Millions of my nieces and nephews have learned from experience that a growing nest-egg built by regular buying of United States Savings Bonds is the best personal guarantee of a happy future.

U. S. Treasury Department

Future Cropland

Most recent department of agriculture suggestions developed in cooperation with the states, are for 418 million acres of cropland by about 1950, or 8½ million below the 1935-39 average, assuming prosperity conditions and desirable changes in practices. Improved agricultural methods, including conservation practices, account for the allowable decrease. If full advantage were taken of all technological improvements, actual cropland in 1950 possibly could drop to 330 million acres.

IS YOUR HOME ADEQUATELY WIRED . .

For future as well as present electrical needs?

Electric wiring, like automobiles, furniture, fashions, etc., becomes out-moded too.

Wiring installed fifteen or twenty years ago is incapable of handling today's electrical needs properly. It also prohibits the use of tomorrow's many new appliances which you will want to enjoy.

So . . . when you buy, build or modernize, insist upon adequate wiring. Be sure to provide for (1) a large enough service entrance to bring the electricity required into the home, (2) enough branch circuits of large enough wire to give a full measure of energy for all appliances, and (3) plenty of convenience outlets to provide for all electrical equipment - - - future as well as present.

Ben's Bride Gets Chickenhearted

Ben Ryder was mighty proud of his young bride when she offered to care for his new flock of baby chicks. "Just like a mother with her brood," he boasts.

Then came market time for fryers—and the crisis! Sue simply wouldn't let Ben near her chickens with an axe. She'd raised them as babes . . . she'd named them . . . they were her very own!

Ben poured himself a glass of beer, to think things over sensibly. He hated to lose the price on fryers . . . but he figured Sue had put up with his peculiarities, he guessed he could put up with her fondness for the chickens.

So now Ben has the nicest brood of laying hens in town, and from where I sit, one of the most successful marriages, too. All because he "lived-and-let-live"—literally. And whenever he wants fried chicken, he takes his bride over to "Andy's Garden Tavern for a crisp wing and a glass of beer.

How to Keep 'Em Down On the Farm

The other day Pete Swanson's nephew, Bud, allowed as how he was fed up with farm and country life . . . and was going to the city where there was a lot more opportunity and excitement.

Some folks might have tried to stop him. But not Pete. He even advanced Bud carfare for the trip . . . figured that when he'd had a good look around, he'd come back where he belonged.

And what happened? After seven days of big-town bustle and excitement, Bud was back behind the wheel of a tractor, with color in his cheeks again. And he'd traded the night life of the city for a quiet glass of beer with Dad.

From where I sit, that's how it goes. Try to prevent some one from getting what he thinks he wants—and he'll go on wanting it. But give him his head, and he'll settle for the sensible thing—whether it's country life, or a temperate glass of beer!

Big Day Here Saturday

Saturday is the Big Day of the year in Holt when the people of the entire community gather for the annual meeting of the Farmers Cooperative Company. It has always been a day when farmers and villagers get together to visit and exchange ideas - in other words - when everybody comes to town. Besides the usual transactions of business, reports, and election of directors, there will be a representative from the Artificial Breeding Association, Mr. Meade of Roseau, to give an educational talk on that phase of the dairy industry.

A new inducement to be at the meeting on time is the many door prizes that will be given away right after the roll call. Free lunch will be given to all who attend the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Starr and children of Delhi, Minnesota, visited at the O. H. and Harold Nohre homes Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Glenn Peterson and children returned home with them for a visit.

Holt Sportsmens Club will hold its monthly meeting March 25th at 8:00 P. M. Projects for the coming year will be discussed.

Vernon Engen and George Fricker left Thursday morning for Minneapolis where they will attend the state basketball tournaments.

The Typha plant is now operating again after a shut down of several months. The crew is processing fluff for shipment.

Myrtle Nohre and L. A. Gauthier of Crookston spent Sunday at the Loyd Larson home. In the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Larson and Marlo Jean and their guests visited at the Ole Larson home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Horien and family visited at the Leo Horien home Thursday evening.

Mrs. L. Hams and Diane of International Falls, Mrs. Torrance Lillevold and sons and Mrs. Mabel Hanson visited at the Lindberg home at Argyle on Thursday. Mrs. Hanson remained there until Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Horien and children and Mrs. L. Hams visited relatives at Swift on Friday. Mrs. Hams and children went on from there to her home at International Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Saxberg of Roseau spent the week end at the Saxberg and Becklund homes.

Martin Rantenen came by air plane from Minneapolis Saturday having finished his training course in operating an airplane.

Mr. and Mrs. Rude Christenson and boys were visitors at the Oliver Grondahl home Saturday evening.

Carl Beck returned last week after spending several months visiting relatives in Sandarne, Sweden.

Hilmer Davidson and Sidney Engstrom went to Karlstad Friday where Mr. Davidson purchased a new tractor.

Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Oakey visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sorum Sunday evening.

Minn. Poll On Anti-Gambling

Approximately a year has passed since Gov. Luther W. Youngdahl began a campaign to drive slot machines and other gambling devises from the state, and nearly two-thirds of the state's people (65 per cent) say today that they approve of that campaign, according to a just completed Minnesota Poll survey.

More than half of them, moreover, say that they do not want the 1949 legislature to legalize raffles, lotteries or gambling at fairs — all of which came under the state ban last year. "Keep the laws as they are," 53 per cent of the voters say.

Minnesota Poll interviewers questioned a representative cross section of the state's adults about their views on anti-gambling drive.

More men, (31 per cent) disapprove of the campaign than women (15 per cent). There also is more objection among city residents (26 per cent disapprove) than is found among town people (17 per cent) or farm residents (20 per cent).

The following helped Alvin and Art Saxberg celebrate their birthdays Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Chas Skoglund and Roger, Mr. and Mrs. Algot Skoglund and Vivian, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Swenson and Janice Russell, Rueben and Eunice Becklund, Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Davidson and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Knutson and girls.

Oscar Furr and Harry Engen arrived home Monday from Glendale, Calif., where they were employed the past winter.

Hughey Engstrom is visiting relatives at Detroit and Chicago.

Deadline for Flax Ins. March 31

Federal Crop Insurance is now being sold in Marshall County, the government insurance is on flax.

This insurance is a sound business practice protecting your investment of seed and expense of seeding.

We have two areas of coverage Area No. 1 has a coverage of 3.4 bu. per acre and area no. 2 has a coverage of 3.9 bu. per acre. The premium per acre has been reduced to .4 of a bushel. Both premium and indemnity are figured at the local support level for flax which is $5.74,

You may insure your fax crop by contacting your local AAA office or Chester Larson who represents Holt, East Valley, Excel and Agder townships.

The deadline was extended recently by the State Office from March 15 to March 31.

The Eastern Marshall County Farmers Union held a meeting at Gatzke last Friday for the purpose of electing officers. The following officers were elected: Roy Wiseth, Goodridge, chairman, Algot Skoglund, Secretary and Hilmer Davidson, Treasurer. Directors chosen were Alfred Johnson, Gatzke and Tom Braaten, Middle River.

The Ringbo 4-H Club met at Ringbo School House March 5. Audrey Christenson presided. It was decided that the Cedar 4-H Club should be invited to give our club a program for our next meeting. A short program was given. Lunch was served by Eunice Becklund and Dalles Christenson. Next meeting to be April 2.

The Nazareth Lutheran church was filled to capacity Sunday evening at the Luther League meeting. The Newfolden High School Chorus gave several numbers on the program.

Spray Peach Trees

To assure a good peach crop, part of the spraying must be done after the leaves drop and before the buds crack in the spring. Extension specialists say that this first spray is to prevent peach leaf curl, reduce brown rot, and control San Jose and terrapin scales.

Finland Fears Reds Seek Control As Stalin Calls for "Defense Pact"; Vandenberg Urges Speed on ERP

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

WHO'S NEXT?
Finland

Finland seemed to be resigned, saturated with the apathy that sometimes precedes extinction.

It was a state of mind that had grown out of a reported request by Josef Stalin of Russia that Finland join up with the chain of Soviet defense pacts that now stretches across Europe.

To the Finns that request was nothing less than a prelude to the same kind of political control Russia had just imposed on Czechoslovakia. They feared their parliamentary freedoms would go by the boards in such a turn of events. But after losing two wars with Russia in less than 10 years, the Finns were able to do little except resign themselves to the Soviet pattern of conquest.

Finland's President Juho Paasikivi was said to be in favor of signing a Finnish-Russian friendship treaty as suggested by Stalin.

His viewpoint, distinguished by realism if nothing else, was this: To turn down the Soviet bid would aggravate Russian-Finnish relations to a dangerous degree. To accept it could mean Finland might get as favorable conditions as possible toward keeping national independence.

At the same time there was concern whether Stalin's request was dictated exclusively by the wish to safeguard Soviet territory, particularly Leningrad, or whether he had something else up his sleeve. So far there were no actual demands of any kind, such as that the Red army be allowed to occupy Finland in the case of war or the threat of war.

On the global scale it seemed apparent that Moscow's overtures to Finland, coming as they did after the seizure of Czechoslovakia, were another part of the Soviet retaliation to the U. S.-sponsored Marshall plan in Europe. The Russians were drawing up the final lines for the conflict and at the same time consolidating their position in eastern Europe.

MARSHALL PLAN:
The Beacon

> "This act may well become a welcome beacon in the world's dark night. But if that beacon is to be lighted at all, it had better be lighted before it is too late."

With that exhortation and many other clamoring brass alarms did Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) attempt to spur the senate into swift action on the Marshall plan as it opened debate on the 5.3-billion-dollar program to defeat communism in Europe.

The chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, one of the strongest backers of the Marshall plan, urged the senators to "light the beacon" of economic aid to Europe before "aggressive communism" begins knocking on the door of the New World.

"Help stop World War III before it starts," was the burden of Vandenberg's message.

Denouncing "treacherous Moscow propaganda that has "charged us with iniquitous American imperialism," he emphasized that the 16 western European nations must be saved from economic chaos.

"This vast friendly segment of the earth must not collapse. The iron curtain must not come to the rims of the Atlantic by aggression or default."

But despite Vandenberg's hortatory, prospects of swift, full passage of the Marshall plan were by no means bright and shining. In this election year congressmen were being doggedly and ostentatiously conscious of how they spent taxpayers' and voters' money.

The house, meantime, was working on another version of a world aid plan, with the foreign affairs committee deciding to wrap foreign aid for Europe, China, Greece and Turkey into "a single package."

PROBE:
Atomic

All of a sudden there was a new atomic security investigation under way to stimulate the jaded interest of the American public.

In the limelight this time was Dr. Edward U. Condon, atomic scientist and head of the government's bureau of standards.

Describing Condon as "one of the weakest links in our atomic security," a house un-American activities subcommittee reported in good faith that he "knowingly or unknowingly entertained and associated" with alleged Russian spies.

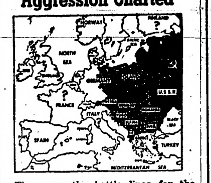
To the charge that he was a "weakest link" Condon retorted: "This is gratifying information because I'm absolutely reliable and therefore we have

OPTIMIST:
New Weapons

Rear Adm. Ellis M. Zacharias, retired U. S. naval officer, came up with another bit of shattering news not calculated to ease the jitters of this already drawn and weary world.

There are now in existence three new weapons which outrank the atomic bomb in pure, unadulterated destructiveness, he said. U. S. science has developed them since the war. They are probably of a bacteriological nature, it was assumed from Zacharias' remarks.

Aggression Charted



These are the battle lines for the "cold war" in which the two opposing forces are democracy and communism. The battlefield is Europe, map of which conveys that "this is where we came in" feeling. It is reminiscent of the Hitler drive to the East, except for the fact that this time it is a Russian expansion westward that is changing the color of the map.

nothing to worry about. The country can relax."

And as far as consorting with Communist spies was concerned — "That's just too vague to talk about. I certainly didn't do it knowingly," he commented.

Nevertheless, two congressional committees leaped into action. Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (Rep., N. J.), under treatment in Walter Reed hospital for a stomach ailment, said he might call a bedside meeting of his full un-American activities committee in order to send the sub-committee report formally to President Truman.

And Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Rep., Iowa) called a session of the senate-house atomic energy committee to study the house group's report.

The report itself was a package of straight-from-the-shoulder charges. It pointed out, among other things, that Condon had been appointed head of the bureau of standards in 1945 on the recommendation of Henry Wallace, then commerce secretary.

Discussing Communists, it said: "In this country they haven't gotten as far as they did in Czechoslovakia, but they got pretty far, because they got a man as vice-president of the U. S. and he is now their candidate for president, and he is the same man who recommended Dr. Condon as director of the bureau of standards."

Thus was the stage set for at least two more spine-tingling investigations.

PROFITABLE:
Steel

In response to a request by President Truman for a full investigation of steel price increases, federal trade commission and commerce department economists turned up with a story that was not destined to do the steel industry any good in the eyes of the price-whipped American public.

According to data assembled so far, the industry has been piling up profits at a rate unequaled in recent years and, in some cases, is running up net earnings almost double those of 1946.

The appraisal indicated that U. S. Steel, giant of the industry, was leading all companies with a net profit in 1947 of 126.7 million dollars—highest since 1929. Bethlehem Steel pushed up its net profit last year to 51 million dollars, about 10 million more than the previous year.

Other leading concerns either have doubled or more than doubled their 1946 profits.

Stimulus which got the steel profits investigation going was the recent $5-a-ton increase in the price of semi-finished steel — actually the fifth in a series of price boosts. During the first seven weeks of 1948, steel companies have jumped the price of pipe, nails, wire and structural construction steel.

Economists tended to view the steel price hike with alarm because they feared it would offset completely any beneficial deflationary trend which the commodity market drop might have set in motion.

HOMELESS:
DP Bill

Possibly in response to the growing humanitarian sentiment in the U. S. that something be done to relieve the plight of Europe's displaced persons, the senate judiciary committee approved a bill that would admit 100,000 DP's to the United States in the next two years.

The measure, now scheduled to be reported out to the senate for action, provides that homeless Europeans who are living in DP camps two and a half years after the end of the war will be admitted at the rate of 50,000 a year beginning next July 1 and ending June 30, 1950.

A three-member commission would be established to handle the program and to formulate regulations "for the purpose of obtaining the most general distribution and settlement of persons." At least 50 per cent of those admitted are to be employed in agriculture.

Sen Chapman Revercomb (Rep., W. Va.), chairman of the sub-committee that drafted the bill, said that this provision was intended to prevent the immigrants from settling in large groups in seaboard areas.

Those to be admitted would first be thoroughly investigated by a government agency

? Current Events ?

1. Some southern Democrats have launched a revolt against renomination of President Truman. Prior to Mr. Truman, six vice-presidents have succeeded to the presidency. Two were subsequently renominated for a full term as president. Who were they?

2. Recent photographs of a prominent public figure show him wearing a new homburg hat, gray suit, overcoat, striped necktie and tan pigskin gloves. What was unusual about his attire?

3. Sen. Glen H. Taylor, in a speech announcing his support of Henry Wallace, said: "I am not teamed up with the big-city bosses —Kelly, Hague, Flynn, Curley, Pendergast." With what cities are those men associated?

4. Opera fans recently celebrated the 75th anniversary of the birth of Enrico Caruso. (2) Where did Caruso begin his professional career? (b) Was he a tenor, bass or baritone?

5. The baseball world has been rocked by a new quarrel between two gentlemen known as "The Mahatma" and "The Redhead." Identify each.

ANSWERS

1. The six were Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson, Arthur, Theodore Roosevelt and Coolidge. Roosevelt and Coolidge were renominated.
2. He was in civilian clothes. His name: Dwight D. Eisenhower, retired army chief of staff.
3. Kelly, Chicago; Hague, Jersey City; Flynn, the Bronx, New York; Curley, Boston; Pendergast, St. Louis.
4. (a) In Naples, city of his birth; (b) tenor.
5. "The Mahatma" is Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, and "The Redhead" is Larry MacPhail, former president of the New York Yankees.

CRACK DOWN:
Holy Land

It was time to get tough in the Holy Land, the British occupying army decided.

Far from showing any inclination toward peace, Palestine Jews and Arabs were carrying their civil war over the partition plan to even bloodier lengths than before.

Weapons and ammunition were being sold openly in the streets. Bombings grew in number and intensity. Open warfare was the virtual rule in Jerusalem. All this might be the natural result of the artificial division of a long-standing state, but the British army had had enough of it.

Force must be used impartially against both Jews and Arabs, Brig. C. P. Jones, commander of the British Jerusalem garrison, told his troops.

In a directive he said: "Prolonged firing between Arabs and Jews within Jerusalem makes life intolerable for its inhabitants. Such disturbances will not continue. Force will be used in incidents of this kind. The army will, if necessary, use weapons more powerful than those available to Arabs and Jews."

It was impossible to decide, the British announced, whether the Arabs or Jews were the aggressors.

RENUNCIATION:
Southern Style

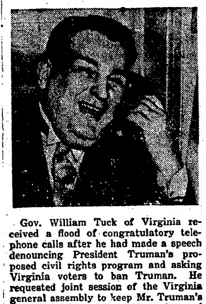
Things were not getting any better for President Truman in the Southland.

Democratic leaders of two strongholds, South Carolina and Tennessee, brooding over the President's irritating civil rights program, turned thumbs down on him as the party's 1948 candidate.

At the same time the Mississippi Democratic committee voted to withdraw from the party's nominating convention in June unless it pledged itself to fight "anti-southern" laws, meaning the civil rights program.

Both South Carolina and Mississippi voted to collect political funds against the possibility of a presidential campaign separated from that of the national Democratic party.

Nipped by Tuck



Gov. William Tuck of Virginia received a flood of congratulatory telephone calls after he had made a speech denouncing President Truman's proposed civil rights program and asking Virginia voters to ban Truman. He requested joint session of the Virginia general assembly to keep Mr. Truman's name off the ballot next November and permit Virginia electors to choose another Democratic candidate.

What Do You Breathe?

More than 700 persons die every year as a result of air pollution in Chicago alone, and a proportionately large number die from the same causes in other American industrial cities, says Dr. Clarence A. Mills of University of Cincinnati.

Respiratory illnesses, many of which are caused by air pollution, also are responsible for about 70 per cent of all the time lost from work, Dr. Mills said.

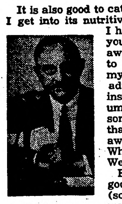
Why Spurn the Poor Fish? They Can't Be Beat to Eat

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Today one of the politicians' biggest worries is the housewife and HER worries, the biggest of which is meeting her budget and the increased appetites which we worked up during the war. We were able to satisfy them then because we had our pockets full of money.

Our pockets aren't so full now, but our stomachs are. We've been educated up to eating a lot more meat, particularly. But a large part of the country has not been educated up to eating fish. Fish is good to eat.



Baukhage

It is also good to catch, and before I get into its nutritive value (since I have you where you can't get away), I'm going to tell you about my recent fishing adventure (which inspired this column) and about some of the fish that didn't get away from me. What did I catch? Well—

First class bass, good stout trout, (some call them weakfish, but they aren't meekfish), sheephead, pigfish, porkfish,—look! snook, — snappers and porgy, Mexican bull-fish (not a tough pullfish), whitefish, blue fish, jew-fish, other tried and true fish, hark! a nasty little shark! Here's an old trouper, of course it's a grouper. Just a little urgin', then I'll claim a sturgeon, never caught a whale-fish, but what about a sail fish?

I could go on indefinitely, sitting back here in the city dreaming, with scales over my eyes, where about all the people know of piscatorial matters is confined to the use of a mickey-fin.

I recently had 48 hours on the bounding main and in the "cuts" as they call the peaceful, mangrove-bordered crane and pelican-peopled indentations of Florida's Indian river. There, the waters are almost "stiff with fish" as an Irish friend once said to me of his home river, and I am disposed to talk about the joys of angling.

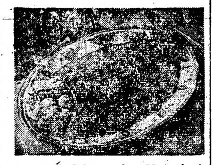
It was suggested to me by my editorial assistant that I approach the subject from the political angle. However, as a hook-and-line, and sometimes a rod-and-reel amateur, I might say that we deal in lines and also curves (when you consider that piece of lacquered bamboo from Burma when a big one takes it and goes) but angles are not in the vocabulary of anglers.

I remember an ancient motto imprinted upon a circular pad frequently placed beneath a beverage glass to preserve the table's patina, which said: "Follow the straight line of duty; if you do, the curved line of beauty will ever follow you."

There is nothing more beautiful than that arc of rod and line with the exploding flash of white water at its terminus where a vibrant captive shakes the hook. There is no sound more pregnant with hope and enthusiasm than the scream of the reel when it pays out to match its power against a game and finny fighter.

Now, having gotten that rhapsody out of my system, what about the practical side? This is still Lent. And a lot of people eat more fish during this season than they would otherwise. So fish prices have gone up a little. But not too far, and they are down as compared to last year.

For these trout I was talking about, the speckled variety (not the weakfish which officially are gray trout) we got 25 cents a pound down in Florida. Speckled trout is selling at this writing for 40 cents in the New York market, and bluefish (large) at 40 to 45 cents per pound (that's wholesale of course).



Baked fish creole. You don't have to go to New Orleans for this if you have the recipe.

A lot of sea bass, and trout, and porgies have been coming in from Norfolk lately. And please let me digress one moment to tell you about Potomac striped bass. In Maryland, you have to throw them back if they are over 18 pounds, and in Virginia waters, if they are over 25 pounds. And (this is for fishermen) we have a record of a [illegible]-pound bass caught in our northern waters.

Also (Bill Turner take notice) they've started a new stunt off Montauk Point, New York, where they run out just beyond the breakers in fast little boats, and catch these big ones. A lot are caught up around Cape Cod in the fall. . . . Just one more diversion for the fishermen before I continue on the more important matter of how to fish for a lower cost of living, which is what I am really supposed to be talking about. Ever do surf fishing for blues? Great stuff. You stand out there on the shore, with the waves breaking around you, and cast. The last time I tried it, I went right down into the undertow. Well, you use a pretty stout rod for that ordinarily, but a gentleman who has a story in the forthcoming issue of Field and Stream is going to tell a regular Ripley. He was surf-fishing here at Ocean City, Md., and neither he nor the rest of the group was getting much. So he shifted to a light casting rod and line, and pulled them in three to one.

Well, back to my filets—we ought to eat more fish. The department of agriculture and the fish and wildlife service of the department of the interior are trying to do something about it. As you know, there is a federally-subsidized school-lunch program which provides a fund for food for school children.

The departments are sending folks out to show the school cooks how to prepare fish, and they are doing a very sensible thing: They are trying to get the schools to teach the pupils something about the fish they are eating—their life, habits and general characteristics.

You know, out in the Middlewest where I was brought up nobody knew much about fish. When they bought fish, they just bought fish. They didn't know the difference between a pompano and a jellyfish. Along the Great Lakes where I lived later, we knew more. Whitefish were good. So are whitings, an ocean fish, no relation.

A broiled filet, spicy sauce. Something different.

Another thing that the department of agriculture is trying to do through its home economics branch is to teach people how to cook fish. Most people think all fish ought to be fried. They don't know how good a sauteed or baked fish is. The French can cook fish with sauce so that it is a delicacy. The fish and wildlife people are doing a similar job.

Meat is going up. We have a lot of commercial fishermen whose living depends on how well you like fish, and how well the fish bite or get netted. You can benefit and so can they, if you learn to appreciate this kind of healthy, nourishing, and if properly prepared, delicious food.

I'll be glad to help you: National Fisheries institute, an association which is interested in all phases of the fishing industry — its members include everybody from the fisherman to the dealer, has a pamphlet entitled "Fish and Shellfish Cookery," which I'll be glad to send you if you'll write me, care of this newspaper.

Although valentine sales this year hit a record high, the marriage rate which usually follows the rate of purchase of hearts-and-flowers missives has fallen off, say greeting card publishers. Which seems to indicate that youth is penny-postage wise and not pound-foolish. In other words, this leap year, they take a new look before they take the old leap.

Now you can get a heat-free bulb that glows through ivory or brown switches and saves fumbling in the dark. Now if they'll get illuminated chairs for the stumblers until they can get to the switches.

Clothespins soaked in soapsuds and dried out thoroughly without rinsing will never freeze, says the Hagerstown Almanack. I wonder if that treatment would work on fingers that use the clothespins.

Microscopic traces of arsenic lurking in food can be detected by a new laboratory technique according to American Chemical society. It takes a microscope to find the food in some of the portions served by the restaurants today.

Million Irishmen Attend Largest Political Meeting

Probably the largest political mass meeting in history, says Collier's, was that called at Tara, Ireland, on August 15, 1843, to hear the Irish statesman, Daniel O'Connell, demand the repeal of the union between his country and Great Britain.

It was attended by more than 1,000,000 people, a number equivalent, at that time, to one person in every family in Ireland.

How to help your sick child GET WELL FASTER
. . . as recommended in the interest of child welfare by
ROSE G. ANDERSON, Ph.D.
Director of The Psychological Service Center, New York
1. The after-effects of your child's illness are often more important than the illness itself. Pampering, catering to whims, oversolicitude teaches a child to dominate through weakness. Such well-meant kindness may prolong his convalescence.
2. You'll be smart to help him amuse himself. Give him something which doesn't require an adult's constant attention. Give him your "Eveready" flashlight . . . or get him one of his own. If he tires of flashing the beam, or flicking out imaginary signals, then...
3. Show him how to cut designs or figures from stiff paper and how to throw their shadows on the ceiling or wall. Moving the figures will make them dance. Watch his pride in what he's done. Watch him get well faster because he's happier!
Proof!...In the laboratory...in your own flashlight...
"EVEREADY" BATTERIES OUTLAST ALL OTHER BRANDS!*
● Brighter light, longer life! That's what you want in a flashlight battery—and that's what you get with "Eveready" brand batteries. Laboratory tests prove it. And the best "laboratory" of all — your own flashlight — proves it! That's why "Eveready" batteries outsell all other brands — because they outlast all other brands!*

Make Marketing Pay
The Land O'Lakes Way

WORKING TOGETHER—that's the key to progress of Midwest farmers in marketing their products through Land O'Lakes for 27 years.

WORKING TOGETHER through Land O'Lakes, the farmers themselves control the processing, distribution and sale of their milk, cream, poultry and eggs.

WORKING TOGETHER, they've developed new products and widened their markets as none could have done alone.

Doing the job together has been the aim and the achievement of Land O'Lakes and its owner-patrons. It's an achievement which, over the years, has poured many extra dollars into pockets of Midwest farmers.

H. D. Inman Listing Manager

The Holt Co-operative Shipping Association is this week announcing a new service which will enable the farmers to list the livestock that they have to ship, at any time that it is convenient for them to do so, with H. D. Inman. The Holt Shipping Association is a cooperative way of selling which progressive farmers have used for many years in this community. The fact that the young farmers here are taking an active interest in the association is proof that it is well worth looking into before you ship.

Prominent Holt Resident Passes

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday for Mrs. Inga Backlund at the Nazareth Lutheran church, Rev. V. G. Sorenson, pastor. She passed away at St. Luke's hospital at Thief River Falls on Wednesday afternoon March 10, after several months illness.

Inga Olson was born April, 8, 1886, to Lars and Ragnild Olson, in Urness Township, Kensington Minnesota. She was baptised and confirmed by Rev. T. A. Sattre of Evansville. Minn.

In 1906 she was married to Peder Larson who passed away October, 1920. She was married to Ole J. Backlund May 1923 at Farwell, Minnesota.

Mrs. Backlund was a wonderful wife, mother and homemaker and always also found time to take a leading part in the work of the Nazareth Lutheran church She served as president of the Ladies Aid, and before her health failed she was Dorcas leader and Sunday school teacher Her willingness to serve and her keen interest in the work of the church will make her absence keenly felt. Her concern for bringing up her children in Christian atmosphere is being reflected in their faithfulness now to the church, and although she is gone, that part of her will live on forever.

She is survived by by the following sons and daughters: Bertha, (Mrs. Marvin Sandberg) Loyd, Irvin, Kenneth, Marian, (Mrs. Ray Gusa) and Oliver. Two brothers and five sisters also survive. Preceeding her in death are her husband, who passed away May 12, 1936, her parents and one sister.

Also surviving are seven grand children.

Pallbearers were: Ludvig F. Larson, L. M. Larson, Walter Larson, Wm. Holst, Geo. Fricker and O. H. Nohre. Vocal solos were rendered by Mrs. Oscar Fosholm and Mrs. O. H. Nohre.

Those from a distance attedding the funeral were: Mrs. Ole. Rosby (a niece) from Farwell, Mrs. K. Nyberg and Carl, Mrs. Guy Anderson, C. L. Heinze all of Thief River Falls. Holgar Hougard of Strandquist, and Andor Hjelle of Warren.

Carlson Funeral home had charge of arrangements and interment was made in the Ridge Cemetery.

Easter, a Time For True Joy

Go to your church on Easter Sunday. Easter is a time of joy-a time when there is rejoicing in Christs victory over the grave. Easter comes at a time of year when the earth is wakeing up and taking on new life. Easter in its full meaning can be a new beginning for a downtrodden soul, and an uplift for the weary. Easter is Joy for all.

Minnesota Poll On Leisure-Time Interests

Favorite leisure-time hobbies of Minnesotans are radio lisening and reading books, magazines, and newspapers. Movie-going and watching sports contests rank next in popularity with state adults. These are findings in a Minnesota Poll survey in which a representative cross-section of people 21 years of age and older throughout the state was questioned by interviewers.

Forty-eight per cent say listening to the radio is among the things they "like to do most" in their spare time; 45 per cent list reading; 25 per cent, going to the movies; 23 per cent, watching sports events. Other interests covered a broad range. (Because many persons name more than one interest, the figures exceed 100 per cent.)

Only 4 per cent of the state's adults say they "have no sprre-time interests."

The survey also indicates that a majority of Minnesotans think that recreational facilities now available in their communities for young people and for adults are "very good" or "fairly good." But one person in three rates them "not very good." Many say youth centers and communits centers are the chief recreational needs in their communities.

Weed Meeting at Middle River

An Annual Plant Industry Conference has been called for 9:36 a.m. on Monday, March 29, 1948 at the Sportsman's Club in Middle River, Minnesota. This includes what was formerly known as the annual weed conference.

All town board members are full time weed inspectors under the amended law (Minnesota Statutes 1945, Section 20.11) and pursuant thereto are required to attend and should be appointed in time to do so. It is important to be present at 9:30 a.m. sharp. Weed inspectors are entitled to remuneration from their town or municipalities for their time and expense in attending.

At this conference important topics such as control of weeds, insects, plant disease and rodents will be discussed. You will want to get the latest information on chemicals and their proper use in spraying weed infested crops, etc., as well as methods of control of the corn borer which is threatening our corn industry. Requirements for selling agricultural seed by seed dealers, farmers, sales clerks, auctioneers and others also will be discussed at this conference, as well as varieties and other matters pertaining to seed, feed and fertilizers. You may also interested to know the State Food Conservation Committee has requested an all-out rat control campaign in each county of the state.

Your neighbors will be interested in these discussions, therefore, extend an invitation to them to attend this conference.

It is important that all officials attend since one of the primary purposes of this meeting is to organize the weed program of your county for this season.

Annual Creamery Meeting

The annual Stockholders Meeting of the Farmers Co'operative Creamery Company of Holt was held Saturday, March 20 in the school house. This meeting is held each year for the purpose of electing new members to the Board of Directors and for hearing reports and transacting any business which comes up.

This year the terms of three Directors had expired. They were Alf Movick, H. D. Inman, and Herb Johnson. Beacuse of their past record of good service, all three were re-elected.

Attendance at the meeting was not as good as was expected due to the bad weather. It seems that each year the annual meeting brings with it bad weather. About 45 stockholders were present at the meeting.

Door prize winners were Leo Horien, Harold Nohre, and Mrs. Walter Wegge. They were awarded a sack of flour, two pounds of cheese, and two pounds of butter respectively. All present at the meeting were given a free lunch which was served at the local churches.

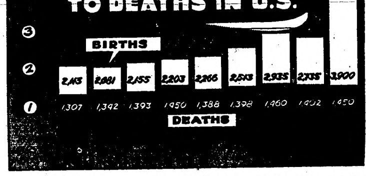
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman, MacArthur Would Accept Presidency "if the People Call"; Great Powers Confer on Palestine

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



The United States is experiencing a steady increase in population. From a range of 2.1 million to 2.3 million in the 1930s, births rose to 2.9 million in 1943. They totaled 2.7 million in 1945 and then sharply rose again to about 3.9 million in 1947. This sharp rise in births has had the effect of increasing the population some 4.4 million persons since 1945 and 13 million since 1939.

PRESIDENCY:
Announcements

As far as grabbing the spotlight was concerned, President Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur stumbled all over each other with their coy and almost simultaeous announcements that they would accept a presidential nomination if the people called them.

The declarations by the two men, coming within just a few hours of each other, were perhaps a symbolic prelude to a similar but greater clash of personalities and political forces which it is now possible might develop later this year.

Mr. Truman said he would run for a full term as chief executive if the Democrats would nominate him; and MacArthur opined that he would accept the presidency "if called by the American people" but would not actually seek it.

Taking note of the fact that petitions have been filed in Wisconsin putting his name in the primary there on April 6, MacArthur issued this sonorous statement:

"While it seems unnecessary for me to repeat that I do not actively seek or covet any office and have no plans for leaving my post in Japan, I can say, and with due humility, that I would be recreant to all my concepts of good citizenship were I to shrink because of the hazards and responsibilities involved from accepting any public duty to which I might be called by the American public."

Republicans, however, were going easy in their comments on the general's willingness to accept presidential nomination, confining them, for the most part, to peripatetic remarks about what a highly regarded figure MacArthur is.

Sen. Ralph Flanders (Rep., Vt.) said, "I think General MacArthur would be doing the country a disservice if he left the job he is in until he has put it in such shape he can leave. That's the place the Lord put him."

Other politicians were wondering about the spot that the Lord and Harry Truman was putting them on. Southern Democrats, despite Mr. Truman's announcement of his candidacy, were not burging an inch from their stand opposing him and his civil rights program. Some of the southern states, notably Mississippi, went right ahead with their plans to prevent their electoral votes from going to him.

NEW ATOM:
Thorium

Already well beyond the awesome threshhold of the atomic age, nuclear scientists are continuing to step deeper into the contradictory wilderness of creation and destruction that appeared when the first atomic blast burned up the night and the sands at Los Alamos, N. M.

Latest step is the manufacture of the first small pieces of a new kind of atomic bomb and fuel metal, according to an announcement by Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, atomic scientist.

Where formerly the extremely rare metal uranium 235 was the only practicable substance through which atomic energy could be produced, there now is a new metal, known as uranium 233, made by changing the heavy metal thorium into uranium.

This new form of uranium does not exist naturally on earth, nor is it known to exist in the stars.

Dr. Seaborg reported that a small fraction of an ounce—actually only a few hundred milligrams—of the thorium metal has been made in the Hanford, Wash., uranium-graphite, chain-reacting atomic piles. Apparently, although Dr. Seaborg did not amplify his announcement to include this implication, the use of thorium for atomic power is considered practicable.

Since thorium is three times more plentiful than uranium it will be the world's main reliance for atomic power.

CONSULTATION:
Holy Land

Leading experts on global anatomy were getting together in a consultation to determine whether there was any conceivable way in which they could perform a painless bisection of Palestine.

Russia, France, China and the U. S. had been requested by the United Nations security council to hold one of their famous conferences to study how partition of the Holy Land into independent Arab and Jewish states might be effected. Britain, too, had been asked to participate but declined the invitation, although consenting to sit in in the role of advisor.

As the consultation got under way, the United States was reported ready to seek big power agreement on a new conciliation effort in Palestine. Warren R. Austin, chief U. S. delegate, said he felt the talks should deal primarily with the question of "peaceful settlement."

But while U. N. delegates might talk in New York about a peaceful settlement, Arab military forces on the spot in Palestine had vastly different ideas.

Arab Commander-in-Chief Fawzi el Kawkji publicly issued a vow to free Palestine from "the zionist menace whether it takes one month, one year or a generation."

Red-haired El Kawkji, the Arab chieftain who had led anti-British and anti-Jewish revolts in 1936 and 1939, had just returned to Palestine after an absence of nine years. He came back, he said, to fight "partition, intrigue and zionism."

"We came here to fight anyone who stands for partition, be they British, Jewish or an international force."

What the United Nations conferees, none of them eager to apply international power in the Holy Land, could do against this kind of gun-waving local zeal was a problem which so far had them completely baffled.

RUHR:
Solution

One of the major problems of the uneasy peace—what to do with the Ruhr, Germany's prime industrial section—was solved when the U. S., Great Britain and France agreed in a series of conferences at London that they would place the Ruhr under international control.

It was decided also that the economic and industrial assets of western Germany, perennial breeding ground for German war machines, would be enlisted in the Marshall plan.

Moreover, the western powers agreed that western Germany should have a federal form of government, providing adequate central authority but protecting the rights of the various states.

Indicative of the manner in which statesmen of the western powers are thinking now was the fact that Germany will be represented in the international control of the Ruhr but that Russia very probably will not.

Recognizing the importance of the Ruhr to the recurring surges of German aggression, the conference communique pointed out that "the purpose of this international control would be to ensure that the economic resources of this area should not again be used for the purposes of aggression and that there should be adequate access to the coal, coke and steel of the Ruhr for the benefit of extensive parts of the European community including Germany."

Stressing the absolute need for cooperation among the British, American and French zones of western Germany, the conference observed that the "continuous failure" of the foreign ministers council to reach four-power agreement "has created a situation in Germany which, if permitted to continue, would have increasingly unfortunate consequences for western Europe."

PANIC PITCH
Americans Ready to Go off Deep End

People of the U. S. are conducting their day-by-day activities in a state of mind that is separated from a condition of acute panic by only the merest veil of self-restraint, says Dr. Frank Fremont-Smith of the International Committee for Mental Hygiene.

Any day now a phony rumor of sudden war or even of sea monsters invading New York harbor might produce wholesale panic. Many Americans are ripe to go off the deep end from just such a scare, no matter how fantastic it may be, Dr. Fremont-Smith contends.

The reason people might be easily panicked is the widespread worry, anxiety or fear over the possibilities of atomic war or of depression. This sets the stage emotionally for panic.

N. Y. Court Decision Holds Test-Tube Baby Legitimate

NEW YORK. — A supreme court justice ruled that a child born as the result of artificial insemination is legitimate.

The ruling was made by Justice Henry Clay Greenberg in deciding that the estranged husband of Mrs. Julie Strnad, 31, had a right to visit her daughter, four-year-old Antoinette, who she said was a product of artificial insemination.

Mrs. Strnad claimed that her husband, Antoine, 42, was sterile since birth, an allegation he denied. She sought to prevent him from seeing the child on the ground Antoinette was not the offspring of her exmate. She had won a separation decree and principal custody of the child last October.

Atomic Danger Zone Posted For Tests on New Weapons

WASHINGTON.—The atomic energy commission has posted a "Danger—Keep Out" notice covering 39,000 square miles of the Pacific ocean surrounding Eniwetok atoll, site of forthcoming "tests of military weapons."

"Hazards will exist" in a rectangular area approximately 173 miles north and south and 226 miles east and west, the commission said.

The danger will continue throughout 1948.

Plane Crosses Ocean With Dead Motor; Bishop Safe

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA. — An Australian flying boat, carrying 29 passengers and a crew of 6, landed here safely after flying 380 miles across the storm-tossed Tasman sea with one of its four engines dead. Among the passengers were Episcopal Bishop G. Ashton Oldham of Albany, N. Y., and his wife.

Railway Passengers Gassed And Robbed in Romania

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA. — A band of thieves put all the passengers in a railway carriage to sleep by using gas and robbed the night train from Bucharest to Iasi, the newspaper Natiunea said.

When the passengers woke up at Iasi station they found all their luggage gone.

Farm Mechanization Boosts Production to Record Level

OMAHA, NEB. — Americans are harvesting 20 million more acres today than they did in 1940, although there are three million fewer people doing it, and on 200,000 fewer farms.

Fast-growing mechanization of farms is largely responsible for this feat, Joseph A. Hoban, merchandise manager of B. F. Goodrich company, told members of Midwest Implement Dealers association. He cited the fact that the nation's tractor "population" had doubled, from one million to two million, just since 1940.

Praising "the way America's farmers and other food producers had come through to ease tragic conditions in many lands," Hoban cited the following estimates on the nation's 1947 exports of foodstuffs: 392 million bushels of wheat, five times the amount exported in 1939; 88 million bushels of corn, compared to 32 million in 1939, and 328 million pounds of meat products, against 193 million in 1939.

The farm market offered "the biggest sales opportunity" for industry in 1947, Hoban said, adding that "there is no question that this market is going forward at as great or even greater pace in 1948."

Hoban said that all tractors now made are rubber-tired, and that changing all a farm's rolling stock from steel to rubber tires produced an average saving of 24 working days and 675 gallons of gasoline per year, for each 150 acres worked.

Economical Buying Cuts Costs for Homemakers

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—According to a recent poll, the topic in which the people are most interested today is the high cost of living. This despite competition with communism, Taft, Dewey, the weather, and why who jumped out of a hotel window clad only in a filmy nightdress.

I managed to get myself into the middle of a controversy on that subject.

It all started when the wife of a machinist in York, Pa., wrote me of her difficulties in making ends meet on her husband's net salary of $53.40 a week (incidentally, bureau of labor statistics informs me that 50 per cent of the workers employed in manufacturing industry earn less than this York machinist.)

Her family includes a boy of 15 and a girl of 6. She outlined her weekly budget as follows:

Insurance	$ 4.57
Food	30.00
Gas and Electricity	3.00
Taxes	1.54
Withholding	1.60
Union Dues	.50
Water Rent (they own their own home)	.36
	$41.57

She pointed out that this total left very little for clothing, dentist and doctor bills, and nothing for the new stove, washer, vacuum cleaner, refrigerator and furniture they would like to have. And "Don't forget," she admonished, "There are a lot of people worse off than we are."

I used her story in a broadcast, and this is the reastion I recevied from other women correspondents:

An Oakland, Calif., housewife wrote: "When you mentioned that family who spent almost three-quarters of his salary for food, I just had to "sound off" or bust. Either this is an exaggeration by the wife or she is guilty of woeful ignorance of proper dietary requirements. In these days of shortages, I'd like to ship folks like these over to England where we have relatives, who could (perhaps!) 'larn 'er' a thing or two about the wanton selfishness of such extravagance."

This woman goes on: "My husband and I manage nicely on $10 a week for two. I enclose details to prove it. (She did)." And she adds: "I can remember no evening in years when my husband failed to compliment me on his dinner."

She suggests that women who can't cook should attend classes to discover that the "chemistry" of food preparation can be "fascinating and, oh, so rewarding." She herself gained knowledge in public school night cooking classes that enabled her to run a small tearoom in the lean years from 1930 to 1935, and which from 1941 to 1945, helped her to save 40 per cent of her husband's salary.

Another woman writes concerning a Dearborn, Mich., homemaker who fed "and fed well" her family of six on $75 a month last September. Now, since food prices went down, this woman planned to revise her budget downward. She spent $71.82 for food in November, $58.85 in December and $55.35 in January of this year.

As a sample of her meal planning: On a Saturday noon, (she writes) she may feed her three girls, aged 11, 4 and 2 years, egg sandwiches on bread spread with oleo (mixed with canned milk), a whopping big fruit salad made from pears, plums and peaches she canned last summer, and big glasses of milk. A supper menu might be macaroni and cheese, a vegetable salad, home-made chocolate cookies and fruit for dessert.

A woman from Detroit, Mich., whose family is the same size as that of the York woman's, writes that is costs her only $20 a week to feed her family. And that, she says: "Includes a carton of cigarets for my husband, all my soap supplies, polishes, cleansers and additions to my pantry shelf. We average one pound of butter a week, two dozen eggs, 10 to 14 quarts of milk, steaks and chops once a week. My husband takes his lunch—two or three sandwiches, one or two pieces of fruit, lettuce, sometimes another raw vegetable, cakes and cookies. The children (aged 2 and 5) have a hot breakfast and lunch each day. "I think," she says, "that we get well-balanced meals. At least we're all in good health and rarely have colds. It can be done easily if you apply yourself and figure ahead."

And this is accomplished, mind you, in Detriot, where according to labor statistics, is cost upwards of $3,293 a year for a family of four to live modestly.

Wife Achieves Near Miracle

Even more impressive is the food-budgeting record of a homemaker here in Washington, D. C., where, says BLS it costs more to live than it does in 33 other major cities of the country.

This woman, wife of a navy captain, has a family of seven to feed—herself, her husband, her mother and father, and three strapping boys aged 18, 16 and 13. Also two cats who are fed frozen horsemeat. She spends between $21.80 and $31 a week, and with prices lower, expects her costs to go down.

My first thought was that probably she shopped at a navy commissary, but she does not. She saves money by buying apples by the bushel, oranges by the crate, flour by the 100 pounds and cheese by the five-pound brick. She also "puts up" fruit, jams, jellies and preserves.

My assistant is prone to scoff whenever I receive one of the I-can't-manage-on-what-my-husband-makes letters. She's been keeping track of monthly food bills for herself and her husband since September of last year. She spent $31.28 in the month of September; $31.54 in October, $37.56 in November; $53.36 in December (she had a dinner party for 14 people, and another Christmas day dinner with turkey, et cetera for 7 people, and that upped the bills); $45.39 in January, and $29.69 in February. She says the February food bill dropped significantly because they took advantage of the price dip and bought cheaper butter, eggs, flour, et cetera.

Her food bills do not include their twice-a-month "eating out" which costs roughly $10. They also do not include her husband's lunches downtown which come to $1.60 per week.

—USDA Photo

"We don't very often buy any food," says Mrs. Walter G. Briggs of Fresno, Calif., as she gathers vegetables in the farm garden which produced fresh fruit and vegetables for the family during the growing season with enough left over to can more than 300 quarts for winter use.

She explains that her monthly food costs are low because: (1) They buy milk at stores instead of having it delivered; (2) don't eat much butter; (3) her husband doesn't demand meat at every meal, so they have dinner dishes like souffles, baked beans, hearty soups, baked eggs; (4) they shop once a week, going perhaps to five or six different stores to take advantage of special sales items (of course persons without a car couldn't do this); (5) she uses canned milk for coffee, and to make puddings and cream sauces; and (6) she says she never wastes ANYTHING. (I can believe that!)

With such a variety of figures to choose from, there isn't much basis for getting into a stew about budgets. What it seems to boil down to is that the bill-of-fare is a fair subject for argument, but doesn't leave a man too much to get his teeth into.

A good deal seems to depend on where you are willing to draw the waist-line.

When it comes to checking inflation, we have proved one thing—that the checks and controls are excellent—for the other fellow. Any checks and controls applied to ME though are ruinous, unholy, undemocratic. It all depends on whose bull is gored.

The favorite answer to what is the electoral college is "it's a school where you learn how to vote." It really is an institution where you don't learn that you are not voting for the man you think you are.

General MacArthur insists he will not permit the presidential campaign to interfere with his occupation duties in Japan. Other candidates hope the G.O.P. convention will not interfere with his duties in Japan.

Federal reserve board appointee McCabe was accused of cutting the tails off bombers before selling them to the Chinese. He said he didn't recall this act of cruelty to airplanes.

New paint sprays handle any type of paint, says Practical Builder. They'll soon be made in compact size, we suppose.

Ream Grapefruit

You can squeeze large grapefruit on an ordinary orange juice reamer if you cut the fruit in half length wise (rather than cross wise), halve again, squeeze, each quarter on reamer, pressing cut side against point of juicer. Smaller grapefruit can be cut in halves like oranges, juiced on regular reamer.

Sweet Potato Weevil

The sweet potato weevil resembles an ant to some extent, having a brick-red thorax or waist, distended body, and dark blue and prominent head and beak. It burrows into or through the potato, leaving excrations which make the potato unfit for food. If large numbers of the pest attack a potato, they render it unfit even for livestock feed.

Drilled-in Fertilizer Helps Barley Crop Get Quick Start in Spring

CHICAGO—The fertilizers farmers use on barley and other small grains will give larger increases in yield per pound of fertilizer if the plant food is put on with a fertilizer attachment on the grain drill, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement issued here.

With the drill the fertilizer is applied more or less in bands, close to the seed. The plants get a quick start in the spring and are better able to compete with the soil for the plant food.

Another way to get bigger increases from the same amount of fertilizer is to use it on soil with good structure—where legumes and grasses have been used regularly in the rotation. Plant food in the soil will be used only as the roots reach out to it. And good tilth is needed for strong roots.

Large amounts of fertilizer high in nitrogen drilled with the barley and small grains may injure the seed. The amounts that can be drilled with the seeds without injury vary from soil to soil, says the statement. The committee advises that farmers check with their state agronomists and county agents for recommendations on the kind, amount and method of application of fertilizer.

Thad's Feet Hurt

After a long, hard day's work on the farm, Thad's idea of how to spend an evening is to take off his shoes, and relax with a mellow glass of beer.

But his missus has other ideas. After being in the house all day, she's all for walking to the village, if it's only for a soda. Likes to see people, catch the latest gossip. But Thad says, no, his feet hurt! Began to cause unpleasantness in Thad's home.

Then Bill Webster comes up with an idea. If Thad takes the missus to Andy's Garden Tavern, Thad can relax with his glass of beer, and the missus can also chat with all the neighbors there. Each gets his (or her) own way.

Worked, too! In fact, now the missus likes an occasional temperate glass of beer herself. And Thad finds it's pleasanter to enjoy his beer with good companions, rather than alone. In fact, his feet stopped hurting too!

Teamwork of Soil Management and Fertilizer Gives Top Crop Production, Builds Up Land

Poor Soil Structure Limited Root Growth and Caused Lodging of This Corn Crop.

CHICAGO—Good soil management practices must go hand in hand with heavy use of fertilizer if farmers are to get the most bushels possible from every pound of plant food used, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement.

"It is one thing to put fertilizer in the ground," says the statement, "It is another to be sure the plant roots can reach the fertilizer to feed the growing crop.

"Fertilizers should be teamed up with practices that build soil structure, or tilth. With good tilth roots can spread out for plant nutrients and moisture to feed the above-ground growth of crops. Vital, too, are conservation measures that will prevent erosion and keep your soil in place after it is built up.

"You can protect your soil from losses by water runoff by contour plowing, seeding and cultivation. Rainfall will then have more chance to soak into the ground.

"By using deep-rooted legumes and grasses regularly in the rotation, using fertilizer carrying phosphate and potash, returning manure and plowing back all the corn stalks, straw and crop aftermath, you can increase the organic matter content and improve the soil's structure."

April Cancer Drive for Funds

H. Ostebye of Stephen has been appointed chairman and Mrs. Ira H. Burhans of Stephen, Commander, in the American Cancer Society's April fund raising drive of Marshall county. The money contributed to the fund will provide better facilities for prevention, diagnosis and treatment of this disease that sooner or later will reach into one out of every three homes in Marshall County.

A large part of the fund will be used to educate both children and adults in recognizing early symptoms, thus giving our doctors an opportunity to catch cancer in time.

The following were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Garthus Easter Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Reierson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig Monson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Lon Inman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Nelson and Oscar Furr.

Family's Sweet Tooth Is Readily Appeased

Selected from hundreds of recipes from Country Cooking readers of Capper's Farmer, by Marjorie Griffin, home editor, it is easy on sugar [illegible].

White Batter	Yellow Batter
1 c. cake flour	6 egg yolks
1½ c. sugar	¼ tsp. salt
6 egg whites	½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt	¼ c. cake flour
½ tsp. cream of tartar	¼ c. hot water
1 tsp. vanilla	1 tsp lemon juice

Sift flour with ½ c. of the sugar 3 times. Beat egg whites and salt until foamy. Add cream of tartar and beat until stiff. Fold in remaining sugar gradually, then flour-sugar mixture in 3 parts. Divide batter in 2 parts. Beat egg yolks until thick. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with very hot water. Stir in lemon juice. Fold this yellow batter into half of the white. Pour the two batters alternately into an ungreased tube pan. Bake in a moderate oven (325°) for 1 hour.

No frosting is needed for this cake, the Capper's Farmer expert points out. If the home-maker uses level measurements, the methods outlined above and the temperature suggested, she can make a cake that looks just as pretty and tastes just as good as the original pictured above.

Make Garden Plans Now

Planning the arrangement of vegetables in the family garden should not be left until planting time. Now is the time to draw up a planting plan of the garden to scale, advises L. C. Snyder, extension horticulturist at University Farm, showing the approximate feet of row for each vegetable to be planted.

If power equipment is to be used, running the rows the long way of the garden will be an advantage. If the garden is to be hand cultivated, short rows may be more convenient.

Snyder makes these suggestions on arranging vegetables in the garden.

1. Group perennial vegetables like asparagus and rhubarb along with small fruits on one side of the garden;
2. Group the cool-season crops that can be planted early and the warm-season crops that are to be planted later.
3. Place tall plants such as sweet corn and pole beans where they do not shade small plants.
4. Plant vine crops, melons, squash, cucumbers along one side so that they can spread into the fence row.
5. Make provision in the garden for successive plantings of such crops as snap beans, radish leaf lettuce and sweet corn.
6. Allow ample room for each vegetable to develop properly.

Theo. Ness came home Tuesday from St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls where he spent several days being treated for pneumonia.

Mrs. Arvid Wickstrom underwent a major surgical operation on Monday at a hospital in Thief River Falls.

L. M. Larson, Clerk.

Mayor Peterson's Statement

Research, education and treatment are the tools used by science in its fight to conquer cancer.

It has been demonstrated that the death rate from cancer, which is responsible for one in every eight deaths can be reduced by an informed public and medical skill.

The scientific fight and the reduction of the death rate cannot be continued unless the people support the American Cancer Society.

I sincerely hope that the citizens of Holt will cooperate and assist the Society in its April fund raising drive and will give freely as they are able to conquer cancer.

Signed — Walter Peterson.
Mayor of Holt.

Mr. and Mrs. Obert Reierson of Middle River were Holt visitors Saturday.

Mrs. Johnnie Nelson and Viola Johnson visited at the L. Monson home Thursday and Friday.

Sharp Cut in livestock Numbers

Marshall County farmers were advised to-day to stick to a long-range livestock program. Such a program should consider not only current feed supplies and prices but also the amount of help available, the need for conserving soil and the ease of getting back into livestock production.

Livestock numbers in Minnesota were cut severely in the last half of 1947, according to S. B. Cleland, extension farm management specialist at University Farm.

Cattle numbers are now the lowest in 11 years; hogs, lowest in 10 years; and sheep, lowest in over 20 years. The number of chickens on January 1 was also below a year ago but still above any year before 1943. Turkey numbers were down 50 per cent to the lowest point since 1929.

Milk cow numbers have been declining since 1944 when Minnesota had 1,800,000 head. This year the number is down to 1,575,000.

This trend may continue downward. Heifer calves under one year for milk cows are down 12 per cent from last year and are 9 per cent below recent averages.

At the same time the demand for milk products is likely to continue relatively good because of the large increase in population especially in the younger age groups.

All these figures are important to the farmer planning future operations, Cleland says. In addition, there are two other considerations.

First, it is relatively easy to get back into hog and poultry production but for dairy cattle, a long-range program is involved.

Second, if we have a good summer, corn supplies can be built up rapidly and make livestock production more favorable.

The deadline for Government Flax Insurance has been extended to March 31. Contact your local agent in your area or the Triple office at Warren for an application.

H. D. Inman Listing Manager

The Holt Co-operative Shipping Association is this week announcing a new service which will enable the farmers to list the livestock that they have to ship, at any time that it is convenient for them to do so, with H. D. Inman. The Holt Shipping Association is a cooperative way of selling which progressive farmers have used for many years in this community. The fact that the young farmers here are taking an active interest in the association is proof that it is well worth looking into before you ship.

Infested Pigs

Brush woolens carefully with a firm-bristled brush after each wearing. Open the pleats and brush between them in a straight downward line. Brush into seam lines, under lapels and any other place where there may be rubbing action which will wear out material.

Irish White House

James Hoban, a native of Ireland, who had resided for some time in Charleston, S. C., in 1792 won a prize of $500 offered for the best design for the President's house. Construction began in 1792, but President Adams in 1800 was the first to occupy the mansion.

Auto Snowplow

Hiram Maxim, son of the inventor of the Maxim silencer for guns, has patented a snowplow to be attached to the bumper of an automobile. The attachment is a simple one, requiring no additional equipment to enable an automobile to operate it.

Cooking Fish

Most important thing to remember in cooking fish is that it too often is overcooked. Just enough cooking to enable the flesh to be flaked easily from the bones will leave the fish moist and tender and bring out its delicate flavor.

Progress in Drying Grain

Results of experiments in chemical drying of seed grain, using calcium chloride as the drying agent, justify further investigations of this method, according to the U. S. department of agriculture.

Founded by Lottery

The British museum was founded on the proceeds of a state lottery, the managers of which were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the lord chancellor and the speaker of the house of commons.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Masaryk's Death Crystallizes Red Menace as U.S. Prepares to Act; Spring Rash of Strikes Breaks Out

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MASARYK:
Death in Prague

Whether Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, took his own life or was liquidated by the Communists really didn't make any difference.

The Communist government had announced that he had leaped to his death from a first, second or third-floor window (U. S. newspapers readers could choose their own version) of the foreign office in Prague.

Later reports by "highly authoritative persons" insisted that Masaryk had been murdered by Communists. An alleged "eyewitness" testified that he had seen Masaryk's body after its reported fall to a concrete pavement and that it bore no evidence that the foreign minister had died in such a manner.

Supporting the murder theory was the fact that Masaryk was reported to have met President Edouard Benes the day before his death, and the two were said to have planned something the Communists wished to prevent.

Unidentified Czech officials who have escaped from Prague reported also that President Benes was a prisoner of the Communist regime.

But whether Jan Masaryk, son of the founder of the Czechoslovakian republic, had been murdered or goaded to suicide by his intolerable position, one thing was certain: Communists had killed him just as surely as if they had put a pistol to his head and pulled the trigger.

If Masaryk took his own life it was not just because he was seeking an escape, but because it was the last service he could do for his country—throwing light, by his own destruction, on the terrible, destructive force that is communism.

NERVES:
Warlike

The alternate, ostentatious flexing of muscles by the United States and Russia was, it appeared, shifting in status from a cold war to a war of nerves.

There were the unmistakable signs of the military preparing to reassert itself. Many reserve officers had received letters pointing out that, although they were not being called to active duty immediately, they would do well to prepare themselves for such a possible eventuality.

In the Pentagon building in Washington army planners were working late at their desks. Procurement officers were reported to be showing great interest in cement factories, since cement is vital in building underground shelters and fortifications.

Russian troops were said to be massing in eastern Germany, but no one would venture to say whether this was pure bluff, a threat of retaliation to the Marshall plan and union of western Europe, or a show of force intended to influence the coming elections in Italy.

But President Truman himself precipitated the worst outbreak of war jitters when he publicly proclaimed that his faith in the attainment of real world peace had been shaken, although he still believes real peace is possible.

In this crisis the U. S. government was stressing these points which embodied administration policy for meeting the situation:

1. The European recovery plan should be carried out promptly.
2. The U. S. encourages formation of what Marshall called a political association in western Europe as the first step toward restoring stability.
3. Spread of Communist governments anywhere in the world, including China is opposed by the American government which will do everything in its power to block communism.
4. The U. S. will continue to work for world peace wherever possible.

Finally, any estimate of the situation must include this inescapable conclusion: Neither Russia nor the U. S. wants war now; and, more important, neither could afford to fight one. This particular decade continues to be a period worked by a shifting of forces and consolidation of strength where it will do the most good if and when the real showdown comes.

The Way Out

Added to the list of the world's numberless martyrs for liberty was the name of Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, son of Thomas Masaryk who was the first president and liberator of the country.

STRIKES:
Miners

Widespread strikes in the nation's soft coal fields were touched off by John L. Lewis' latest foray into the national scene, a demand for $100-a-month pensions for his miners.

The United Mine Workers leader had asked rank-and-file "reaction" to his charge that coal operators had "dishonored" the 1947 contract by failing to grant pensions. And his miners produced the exact reaction he wanted as almost 200,000 of them in 11 states quit to support Lewis' stand at the very outset of the difficulties.

It was not a strike in the technical sense of the word. Lewis, in all his power, simply had nodded his shaggy head and his men, quick to catch the signal, walked away from their jobs.

The current mine contract does not expire until June 30, but it provides that the miners need work only as long as they are "willing and able."

Impact of the soft coal walkouts showed first in the nation's steel industry where output is threatened if the shutdowns continue for any length of time. Many of the closed mines are "captives" whose entire output goes to the steel companies.

Packers

Fraught with an even greater immediacy than the mine walkouts, however, was a nationwide strike for more pay by 100,000 members of the CIO packing-house workers.

The strike went off as scheduled despite an urgent request by President Truman asking the packing companies and workers' representatives to maintain the status quo without interrupting negotiations until April 1, at which time a board of inquiry was slated to report to him on conditions of the strike.

In reply to the President, the union strike board rejected his proposal because, it said, the packing firms would not agree to placing even their wage proposals into effect during the negotiation.

As the strike began, government records indicated that the entire nation would come to feel the curtailed meat supply after the first week, with some areas more severely affected than others.

GOVERNMENT:
Expensive

Total per capita cost of running the federal government for one year has zoomed $201 since 1939, acording to a report by the Tax Foundation. It now is about $270 a year, compared with $69 in 1939.

War, of course, was mainly responsible for the increase.

Total estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1948 are 37.7 billion dollars. War and its aftermath accounted for almost 23 billion of that.

But the blueprint for 1949, said the foundation, registers an increase. It quoted President Truman:

"In the fiscal year of 1949, 79 per cent of our expenditures reflect the costs of war, the effect of war and our efforts to prevent a future war."

SHIFTING WORLD

Nobody Worries About 'Tissick' Now

City dwellers of 300 years ago—the inhabitants of London in the year 1648, for instance—were only half as likely to be killed in accidents as are the metropolites of today.

But they were several times as likely to die from tuberculosis or other diseases with such fearful names as spotted fever, purples, rising of the lights, plague in the guts, tissick, imposthume and others, says a study of early and present - day mortality by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

The king's horsemen were the fastest traffic to contend with in 1648. The automobile was still 250 years in the future

Olive Trees and Taxes

Many years ago, when the Balkan province of Macedonia was a center of contention among Turks, Bulgars and Greeks, the Turks, in possession at the time, set out to make the province unattractive to rival nationalities. They adopted the device of putting up taxes on olive orchards to the point that forced the unfortunate owners of olive orchards to cut them down. As olive growing was an important industry, the trick worked.

Big Elephant Tusk

The average weight of an elephant's tusk is about 55 pounds, although some exceed 100 pounds.

Lay Eggs in Sand

Turtles live in the water, but they lay their eggs in the sand away from water.

Dangerous Flame Heaters

Emergency operation of open flame gas and oil heaters brings a serious hazard into the home, engineers of the National Board of Fire Underwriters warn. During heavy snowstorms in the northeastern states, many deaths were caused by gas poisoning through use of unvented open flame heaters in tightly closed rooms. If a house is tightly closed or a room is small, the amount of oxygen in the room is gradually burned up, with the result that the products of combustion will contain high percentages of deadly carbon monoxide.

Ram-Jet Aircraft

Future air transportation at supersonic speeds with simple ram-jet engines developing 25 horsepower per pound of weight was visualized before the Society of Automotive Engineers at its annual convention. While admitted that the new development has one serious handicap — it may be limited to military uses since flight at such terrific speeds is likely to be a one-way trip — the ram-jet is superior to the rocket for war purposes.

Injury to Teeth

Some cola-type beverages have a 10 per cent content of phosphoric acid. Although destruction of enamel by acids varies with individuals, some injury was observed at Mayo clinic, which is believed caused by habitual use of acid beverages. Continued vomiting and therapeutic administration of hydrochloric acid, topical application of acids and acids in confections may have similar damaging effects on tooth structure.

Start of Ice Business

The first long-distance ice shipment was sent in 1799 from New York to Charleston, S. C. The real beginning of the ice business came in 1805 when Frederic Tudor of Boston shipped a cargo of 130 tons to the West Indies. His first competitor, Gage, Hittinger and company, Boston, introduced ice to the people of London. This was natural ice from rivers, lakes and ponds, harvested in winter and stored for use in summer.

Blame for Smoking

The sense of smell probably is responsible for the original idea of smoking. According to Encyclopaedia Britannica, this sense was much keener in primitive man, and along with the pleasure he derived from aroma, he probably also experienced a sense of mystery at the sight of the smoke rising up into the air.

Goggles for Ducks

Ducks have a transparent membrane to pull over their eyes when in flight—like goggles.

Vermont Led All

Merino sheep were first bred in the United States at Weathersfield Bow, Vt.

New Wonder Drug Found

Penicillin and streptomycin have a new ally, a synthetic compound called histadyl, which combats allergic reactions limiting the usefulness of many potent drugs. In the past, when a patient receiving regular doses of a drug suffered side reactions such as hives, it was necessary to halt the treatment. It now has been found possible to continue to give such patients penicillin, streptomycin and other drugs to which they have become allergic for periods as long as three months by the concurrent administration of histadyl.

Fruit Juice Improved

Fruit juice, having the characteristic color of the fruit from which it is derived, but without being cooked or treated with dyes, is produced by a recently patented process. Crux of the process is uniform refrigeration of the fresh juice to a mass containing fine ice crystals, subsequent addition of heat, separation of liquid from the ice mass which retains solid pulp particles and running the latter through a colloid mill, adding the colored product to the juice separated from the ice.

Non-Stop Trip South

The Golden Plover, traveling over the ocean, makes its 2,400-mile flight from Nova Scotia to South America apparently without stop, probably requiring 48 hours of continuous flight. Adults migrate in the fall before the immature birds, a large number of which go southward by an inland route. The tiny ruby-throated humming bird crosses the Gulf of Mexico in a single flight of more than 500 miles.

Dried Vegetable Waste

Dried vegetable waste makes excellent poultry feed and, according to University of Delaware, where quality control of the dried product has been maintained, is equal to or superior to alfalfa leaf meal. From chemical analysis and performance, it is concluded that vegetable waste is an excellent source of carotene, riboflavin and other water soluble vitamins.

Detect Solvent Vapors

Improved apparatus for determining the vapor content of a gas, recently patented, can be used to test the air in factories or other closed spaces where solvent vapors may be present, and by fliers to determine whether the water vapor content in their cylinders of breathing oxygen is low enough so it will not turn into ice crystals and plug the breathing apparatus.

Science Talent Quest Shows Aid To Progress

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—I don't often go into such intimate matters as private murders in these columns, but I have been impressed lately to see the results of the untrammelled spirit of modern youth, whose repressions and inhibitions have been removed by thoughtful parents who use reason instead of the cruel discipline such as I have suffered —having to go to bed without supper, for instance, when I was impudent to my elders, or being kept in the house for throwing my arithmetic at the cat instead of doing my homework, or having my mouth washed out with acme soap when I used language unbecoming a future commentator.

Recently a pretty little brunette who was irked by having to leave the city to dwell with her parents in some dull rural area of Missouri rebelled. After shooting Mama and Papa, she stuffed them behind the sofa and tried to dispose of their property. Then there was the poor little seventh-grader who smarted under thoughtless taunting by a farmer who thought the youth displayed poor form in sawing wood. The boy shot the old man and dumped him in a creek.

There was the 18-year-old girl from Portsmouth, Va., who playfully sprayed five G.I.'s with revolver shots in a shooting gallery, and the six girls, aged 14 to 16, who beat up their female gym instructor in a Bronx high school.

Of course I am not old-fashioned enough to encourage corporal punishment, but it does seem that a little less sparing of the rod might have prevented spoiling the crime record of the peaceful communities from which these youngsters came.

Perhaps it wouldn't have helped, though, when the nations of the world set such bad examples.

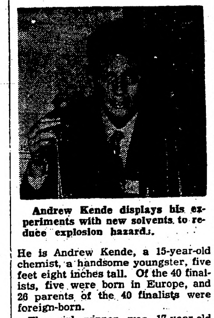
I couldn't help thinking of a paragraph in the concluding chapter of that highly important and revealing book by former Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Said Hull (and I can see him leaning back as he dictated, looking over the wide sweep of the Maryland landscape, letting his thoughts go back over the rich days of his years): "We have a desperate need for more religion and morality as the background for government. The religious and moral foundations for thought and conduct require strengthening here as well as throughout the world. There is no higher civilizing influence than religious and moral concepts. Corruption and tyranny can be driven out of government only when these concepts give men the faculty to recognize such evils and the strength to eliminate them."

In these days when we hear so many unpleasant references to the atom bomb, it was a relief to the national capital to get its annual reminder that the people who know most about atomic energy think far more about how it can promote human welfare than about how it can extinguish human life.

Sixteen thousand high-schoolers presented themselves this year as possible winners in the seventh annual Westinghouse science talent search. After rigorous elimination tests, 40 finalists were selected to come to Washington for talks with scientists, visits to Capitol Hill and the White House and conversations with their colleagues.

These 40 students have a reasonable assurance of scholarships of $1,000 each from various sources, aside from the search awards, while the two lucky top winners each are given $2,400 with which to continue their studies.

There was another interesting thing about this year's awards—the revelation that America still is drawing heavily on the Old World for its scientific talent. The boy who won the top prize was born in Budapest.

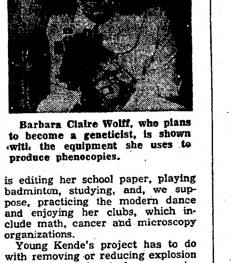


Andrew Kende displays his experiments with new solvents to reduce explosion hazards.

He is Andrew Kende, a 15-year-old chemist, a handsome youngster, five feet eight inches tall. Of the 40 finalists, five were born in Europe, and 26 parents of the 40 finalists were foreign-born.

The girl winner was 17-year-old Barbara Claire Wolff of Flushing, L. I., (where the United Nations has its headquarters although there is no connection). All the contestants must have worked on a special scientific project, and Miss Wolff devoted her time to production of phenocopies. Now, if you raise fruit, you will be interested in this, although you probably wouldn't recognize a phenocopy if you met it on one of your strolls through your orchard.

A phenocopy is a change—a change in the body-shape of a fruit fly. The fly itself will not be permitted to get at your fruit. Its eggs have been dyed and irradiated, observation of which processes in the long run probably will help the fruit industry. When Miss Wolff isn't dying eggs—and irradiating them—she is editing her school paper, playing badminton, studying, and, we suppose, practicing the modern dance and enjoying her clubs, which include math, cancer and microscopy organizations.



Barbara Claire Wolff, who plans to become a geneticist, is shown with the equipment she uses to produce phenocopies.

Young Kende's project has to do with removing or reducing explosion hazards in the chemical processes by which such modern synthetics as the silicones, sex hormones and some synthetic rubbers are produced commercially. Some day, thanks to him, men and women may be able to face the most alluring hormone or the most explosive overshoe or automobile tire in comparative safety, and may even be able to walk right up to a silicone and slap it on the back.

The 40 finalists were reminded by Watson Davis, Science Service director; Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard college observatory, and W. W. Waymack, atomic energy commissioner, that it is not enough these days, however, for scientists to stick to their scientific last, letting the rest of the world go by.

As Dr. Shapley put it: "Don't be so laborious in your laboratories that you ignore your responsibilities as citizens." And as Waymack warned: "Nowadays the scientists must not only aid in the creation of knowledge, but in the dissemination and use of that knowledge for the general welfare."

Unfortunately, there are all too few trained scientists in this atomic age. As the report of the President's scientific research board pointed out, the technological and scientific progress of this country depends upon one-half of 1 per cent of our population—some 750,000 persons. This small group comprises the trained manpower—the scientists, technicians and engineers upon which the operation and the expansion of our economy depends. And those actually engaged in scientific research, technical development or teaching comprise a much smaller group within this pool—only 137,000 persons.

The science talent search and similar projects undertaking to discover and encourage youthful scientific talents are helping to ensure the future security and prosperity of the United States which depend as never before on the rapid extension of scientific knowledge—not only because the laboratory is the first line of defense in wartime and the scientist is the indispensable warrior, but also because scientific discovery is the basis for our progress against poverty and disease.

Ex-G.I.'s can upset the budget again this year. In its attempt to trim Mr. Truman's spending, congress makes no allowance for nearly 500 million dollars still unclaimed in terminal leave pay due enlisted men. The President's bulging budget set aside only five million dollars for this item, just 1 per cent of the total possible cost.

In contrast to the usual Hollywood practice, the government's film production includes none of the usual "thrillers." Latest 25-minute short subject made by Uncle Sam bears the prosaic title, "Toward a Uniform Plumbing Code." Other recent "sockeroos" cover movies on blister rust control, Japanese agriculture, foot and mouth disease.

Some of the people who say they would rather be right than president don't get the chance they deserve.

Putting a 'Punch' in Lunch

Packing a lunch that "packs a punch" and avoiding that day-to-day sameness is a problem of many homemakers. Aim always to include something crisp, something juicy, and one hot, one sweet, one tart or salty, and one colorful food, advise nutrition specialists. Each lunch box should contain one third of the food supply for the day for the person who eats it. Lettuce put in sandwiches is likely to wilt and is better when wrapped separately.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

From Sheepskin to Sheep

There aren't too many college graduates in our town. Good honest thinking, yes...but most folks went from high school into farming.

No harm in that! But I admire veterans like Dick Newcomb... who's 23, but going to college under the G.I. Bill of Rights. Intends to be a sheep farmer—but a better-informed, more scientific farmer, with more know-how!

And veterans like Dick aren't letting anything interfere. What little relaxation they allow themselves is in the form of needed exercise, or books, or conversation and an occasional glass of beer with friends.

Seems as if, just by having their education postponed, they've put a higher value on it...and on things like temperance (that glass of beer, for instance), understanding, and good citizenship. And from where I sit, when Dick gets his sheepskin—he won't have lost much time. He'll be an even better farmer than his Dad. (Exactly what Dad wanted!)

Carlson's Move to West Coast

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carlson were given a farewell party on Tuesday evening at the Nazareth Lutheran church. A large crowd was present and a program given. They were given a cash purse.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlson will move west and their present plans are for building a house in Pheonix, Arizona. Accompanying Mr. Carlson to assist in building and moving will be J. P. Augustine and Sidney Ranum. Mrs. Carlson and children Karen John and Mark will visit at Bertha, Minnesota, before leaving.

The Carlson's have been held in high esteem here and will no doubt, maintain that level wherever the live.

The following were dinner guests of Freda Anderson and Rick Lorentson on Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lorentson and Dale and Mrs. Foss of Erskine, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lorentson and daughter Mrs. Benson and children of Thief River Falls and Elaine Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Aakus and Mrs. Koepp of Effie visited over last week end at the Herb Johnson home. Mrs. Koepp remained for a couple of weeks visit.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sjurseth made a trip to Grand Forks early Monday morning where Mrs. Sjurseth boarded the train for Tolley N. D. to be with her mother who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilson and Boyd arrived here Thursday from California where they have spent the winter. They also visited at the W. F. McMurray home at Roseburg, Oregon.

Jesse Sorum and sons of Grand Forks were Holt visitors Tuesday. Jesse has recently returned from a trip to California and Mexico. He says he likes this country here better.

Joyce Johnson, who is employed at the City Dairy at Thief River Falls, spent the week end at the Denny Inman home.

Jerome Horien arrived here Friday for a furlough with home folks. He is in the U. S. Army and stationed at Camp Carson, Colorado.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Kroke of Stephen were visitors at the A. C. Burtness home Saturday night.

Bankers Thumb Print Plan

Mr. Robert E. Pye, Secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association, today announced a "Thumb Print" plan to stop fradulent check writing.

Under this plan, any stranger who wishes to cash a check must place his right thumb print on the check beside his signature.

According to Elmer O. Stovern, Superintendent of the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension, fraudulent check writing is increasing daily in Minnesota and throughout the country, and every indication is that as unemployment increases, check forgery and other means of defrauding the the public will be practiced on an enormous scale.

To eliminate this problem, Mr. Pye conferring with Mr. Stovern, worked out this simple solution.

By merely placing a thumb print over signatures and figures on wills, money orders and other legal instruments, this plan can be extended to give added protection.

While this plan is extremely simple, defrauding the public through forgery of checks and other instruments can be eliminated from Minnesota if the merchants and bankers will give it their complete co-operation.

Shoud a person pass a worthless check bearing his fingerprint, it would be a relatively simple matter for law enforcement agencies to run him down, thus effecting a saving of both time and money for the people of Minnesota.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

Ruth Larson wrote the following and altho Ruth says the facts may not be accurate she received an A on it for the English.

Early History of Holt

Holt was started in 1892 when a small store was built 2½ miles east of the present location of the town.

In 1894 the railroad came through, and two elevators were built.

In 1897 a schoolhouse and post office were built a half mile south of Holt. These two buildings made up what was called Sandridge. A while later a store, now Lorentson's Service Station was built close to the railroad tracks.

The first house in Holt was built by J. M. McKinley. This is now Cleo's Cafe.

The first hotel built was called the "Evergreen Hotel". The Mickelson Hotel was built later.

There were two lumber yards. One is now the Typha plant and the other was located where the blacksmith shop is now.

The "Northern Light" was the name of the first paper started by Latta in 1906. The name of the paper has been changed to "The Holt Weekly News."

There was no postoffice located right in Holt but many small ones in the surrounding area. Some of these are Ringbo, Sorum and Sandridge.

The Nazareth Lutheran Church was built in 1906 and the Evangelical Free Church in 1912.

C. H. Graham's store was opened in 1906 and in 1910 Arvid Carlson started a store.

In the spring of 1917 the Creamery was organized, and opened on July 15, 1917.

The first bank was opened in 1908 and operated only 4 years before it went broke. The building the bank was located in has been made into a tavern.

Bennes Confectionery, first a pool hall, was built in 1914.

In 1915 the fire hall was built. This building is now the Sportsmen's Club.

The building housing the bank at the present time was built in 1917. The Post Office and barber shop are located in the same building.

The Holt Consolidated School was built in 1919.

Holt was named after Dr. Holt.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Shall America Follow?

Among all the postwar nations, no countries have so quickly restored their productivity without damage to standards of living as have Canada and the United States. These two countries have restored productivity to the 1940-41 level, and in many industries have surpassed this level. It is no coincidence that a recent New York Times 22-nation survey showed that except in Canada and the United States, the trend is toward government management of industry.

Countries that are exchanging their freedoms for government controls are not making good postwar records. In general, they are the countries that are crying the loudest for help from outside. Those nations which desire to turn everything over to the government for complete control and management are the very countries that are slipping backward. Still, the trend is in that very direction, toward government management.

Public Must Decide

Shall America ultimately follow this trend? In my opinion, the public in this country has not yet decided that issue. There are some voices crying loudly for government management. Even our Attorney General points his finger at American industry and accuses it of being responsible for high prices. Political maneuvers may please critical people and get votes, but in making industry unpopular the way is paved for replacing our free enterprise system.

As an educator, I favor that system which will provide the highest standards of living for the masses of the American people. If government management of our industries would provide higher wages, more productivity and greater purchasing power for each dollar spent, then certainly I would be in favor of it. Actually, our system of private enterprise has put America far ahead of other nations that have tried anything else.

Act With Wisdom

There are other dividends offered by the American Way. We have freedoms. We can work at what we please, where we choose. We can speak our minds, assemble in groups as we care to. These freedoms and other liberties we did not have under the control of despotic and dictatorial governments in previous centuries. Why, ever, should we want to follow a trend that leads us backward toward new despotism and loss of personal freedoms?

The experience of England should make us pause and think seriously. Those freedom-loving people have not found government management an asset. Their coal production has been extremely disappointing under government management. Rationing has become more and more severe. Burdens of the people have become more and more heavy. Today, the very future of England is threatened by strict government regulation and management of industry.

In this dark hour, Englishmen should study their own history. They will find that whenever their individual freedoms were greatest, it was then their prosperity was the most genuine. If we in America think soberly and act in our best interests, we will act with wisdom to preserve the fundamental patterns of our economy: the right of private ownership of property and the freest possible exercise of private management of our entire economy.

Card of Thanks

Sincere thanks to those who gave us the farewell party. Special thanks to those who arranged the party, to those who were on the program and for the cash purse.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carlson,

Make Gemetery Beauty Spot

Now that spring is here (or is it) our thoughts turn to cleaning up yards which brings us around to the ever present problem we have here of fixing up our local cemetery. Attempts have been made in the past to organize in connection with the Cemetery Association but lack of interest in attendance at the meetings was a drawback in planning any work.

The cemetery, located as it is here in the center of our village, could be a beauty spot that would speak well for the village, as that is a spot visited by many out of town people each year.

Let's have your opinion and your comments!

Uses of Wheat

Wheat is second only to corn as a cereal in the United States, and under normal conditions the major part of the crop is raised for the manufacturing of human food. Consequently, very little wheat is generally fed to livestock and poultry. Most grains produced for livestock feeding generally are provided at lower costs than is wheat.

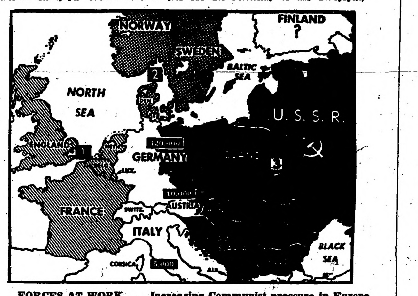
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Calls for Draft, Training To Bolster Resistance to Russia; U.S. Reverses Stand on Partition

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



FORCES AT WORK . . . Increasing Communist pressure in Europe has been instrumental in dividing the continent into three component power blocs, all of which are influenced by a fourth force—U.S. policy, symbolized by the presence of American troops in Germany, Austria and Italy. Map shows western bloc (1) of anti-Communist Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands; northern bloc (2) of the Scandinavian countries, daily growing more apprehensive of Soviet tactics and eastern bloc (3) of Russia and its satellites. Present approximate American troop strength is indicated for Germany (120,000), Austria (10,000) and Italy (5,000).

THE PRICE
Peace and War

"We must be prepared to pay the price of peace or assuredly we shall pay the price of war."

Those words, spoken by President Harry Truman to the U. S. congress, could be the seeds of the first genuine, effective foreign policy this nation has had for half a century.

Disregarding any political overtones there might have been in the President's speech, his address to the joint session of congress reflected the realization at the top level of government that any successful foreign policy must be based on the fundamental concept of striking a balance between commitments abroad and the national security or strength at home available to back up those commitments.

By definition, the term "foreign policy" implies that any nation expressing such a policy possesses the strength—in military forces and alliances—to follow it consistently at all times and to defend it just as consistently in case of war.

In that connection Mr. Truman specifically asked congress for power to draft men to build armed strength against the ruthless aggression of Soviet communism.

He asked also for "prompt enactment of universal training legislation," indicating that the draft should be only temporary until universal military training is giving the country the trained men it needs.

Finally, he sought swift passage of the 5.3-billion-dollar European recovery program — the Marshall plan for economic recovery of western European nations which is setting the Kremlin's teeth on edge.

Bluntly the President upbraided Russia for making a travesty of peace:

"One nation has not only refused to cooperate in the establishment of a just and honorable peace, but—even worse—has actively sought to prevent it."

Western Pact

Lending force to Mr. Truman's scattering of the seeds of foreign policy was the fact that, an hour before he delivered his pronouncement, the just-completed five-nation western European pact for common defense against attack had been announced officially.

Under the treaty, Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands pledged one another military aid in the event that any one of them should be attacked.

According to the new "Truman doctrine," the United States would be the principal guarantor of this five-power union. Without such a guarantee of U.S. backing, the western European treaty would be meaningless.

By his declaration in support of the western European pact Mr. Truman seemed to be guiding the U.S. to a point of departure from its historic adherence to the diplomatic enormity of refusing to engage in "entangling alliances" even at the price of its own welfare.

BACHELORS:
Declining

Evidence of an innate desire for family life among adult Americans is revealed in a study by the U. S. bureau of the census showing a long-term decline in the proportion of bachelors of both sexes.

On a numerical basis, census bureau figures disclose, the number of single men and women has dropped to the lowest level since 1920, despite a third increase in population since then.

REACTION:
Divided

What are the true facts? Just how potentially lethal is the situation with regard to Russia?

Senators and representatives were asking those questions after President Truman's "let's get strong" message. Many of them were demanding answers before they would consent to go ahead with any legislation endorsing a military draft or UMT.

Congress was divided, but the split was not along party lines. It reflected isolationism, discontent with the Truman foreign policy and in some cases an almost unhealthy respect for Russia's power in Europe.

Greatest fear seemed to be that conditions in Europe, as precipitated by Soviet actions, may get out of hand suddenly, despite the efforts of Russia or any other nation to prevent such a development.

CONVINCING

Closeted for 50 minutes with Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Defense Forrestal and Secretary of the Army Royall, the senate armed services committee emerged from the conference to throw its weight behind President Truman's plea for quick action to build up America's military forces.

Sen. Chan Gurney (Rep., S.D.), chairman of the committee, reported that 10 of the group's 13 members were convinced that both a limited draft and universal military training have become an "absolute necessity."

Just what the three secretaries told the armed services committee was not disclosed, but it was undeniably powerful information.

Best opinion holds that, while Russia is not now seeking war, the Communists have created a kind of Frankenstein monster in Europe that at any moment could plunge out of control and involve the world in another conflict. Secretary of State Marshall is said to feel this way:

The Soviets are motivated by a sense of urgency to act before the European recovery program begins to function and before the union of western European nations is firmly established. Driven by this feeling of urgency, the Soviets may not be able to avert an incident which would lead to a shooting war.

ABOUT FACE:
Expedience

To many persons it looked as though the United States, in abandoning its support of the Palestine partition plan, had pulled a "Pontius Pilate" on the same scene where the procurator of Judea had washed his hands not quite 2,000 years ago to sanction the Crucifixion.

In reversing its role in the partition struggle, the U.S. proposed that the Holy Land be made a United Nations' trusteeship, giving Jews and Arabs a chance to reach agreement on their own concerning the future of their country's government.

Warren R. Austin, American delegate to the U.N., said that it was obvious that partition could not be carried out except by force, and the U.S. consistently has demurred against the idea of sending troops to Palestine.

It was ironic that the American statement withdrawing support from the partition plan was undoubtedly the death blow to that plan which never would have been adopted by the U.N. in the first place if it had not been for American pressure and influence.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Making Lard

To keep lard from becoming rancid add two or three pounds of hydrogenated vegetable shortening to each 50 pounds of fresh lard—stirring it in while the lard is still in the kettle. This commercial shortening has been hardened by forcing hydrogen gas through it, a process which keeps the air or oxygen out of the lard, preventing it from oxydizing.

Meat Has Real Value

Nutrition scientists say meat is one of the most important natural sources of the B vitamins. It contains all of them — from the oldest, thiamine, to the newest B vitamin, folic acid. It supplies generous amounts of the three vitamins for which recommended allowances have been established — thiamine, riboflavin and niacin.

Discouraging Rats

Keeping refuse in sturdy covered containers is one of the best ways to discourage the influx of rats into a community. Rats thrive on garbage, so they should be denied this source of nourishment. Garbage cans are made of galvanized steel and are equipped with close fitting covers to keep animal pests out.

Safe Canning

A pressure canner is a necessary piece of equipment for canning all vegetables except tomatoes and for canning meats and poultry. Only by using a pressure canner is it possible to reach the 240 degree temperature necessary for safe canning of these foods.

Jan Masaryk Took His Life In Protest Against 'Robots'

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—For some time after I heard the tragic news of Jan Masaryk's suicide, a strange memory haunted me . . . . I saw —

A man and woman alone in a darkened room. They are two of the last three human beings on earth. The rest have been destroyed by an army of automatons—man-created robots. Creatures who have all other human attributes, but no sensitivities, no souls. Mechanically-made, the robots are the triumph of the productivity of the machine.

But they have revolted and turned against their creators. They now are marching on the last human stronghold. The lights go out, you can hear the rhythmic tramp, tramp, tramp of their iron feet. There is a crash of glass as they push, insensitive to pain, through the windows — two revolver shots ring out in the dark as the human beings commit suicide to save themselves from the horrible wrath of the automatons.

That, you may remember, was the climax of the play RUR—"Rossums Universal Robots"—written by Karel Kapek.

I was reminded of it because of one of the first deeds of Jan Masaryk in 1946 when he returned to his native country after the exile imposed on him when Hitler's robots crushed the first Czech republic. When Masaryk returned, he laid flowers on the grave of Karel Kapek, the great Czech author who wrote that prophetic play, giving us the word, "robot" and the warning behind it. The word comes down from the old Slavic "robota," servitude.

We have accepted the word.

We have not heeded the warning.

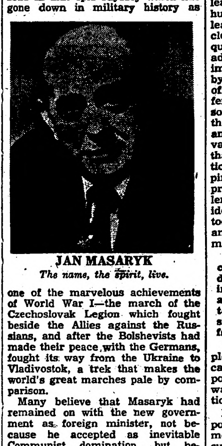
The robots, like the Golem of the Hebrew myth, and the Adam of the Psalms "yet being unperfect" before a soul was breathed into his substance offer a grim warning to us now. Unhuman beings released today, may re-enact Kapek's play on a stage, wide as civilization.

Day after day come the frightened echoes from Europe of the fear of war. And yet no people wants it. If you were to write down all the material demands of the diplomats and the rulers of each nation, and put them in the hands of the peoples of the world and tell them: If you want these you must have war, who would pay the price of war? None. None but a robot, without sensitivity, without soul.

The martyrdom of Jan Masaryk seems to have hurt rather than helped the Communist cause. I spent some time with the former Czechoslovak ambassador to the United States, Juric Slavik, on the evening of the day when Masaryk's suicide was announced.

Slavik believes that Masaryk felt he could serve his country better dead than as a living prisoner, for the ambassador says he was a prisoner. Masaryk, alive, but with every word and gesture filtered through the censorship of the Communist screen, would become a symbol of the spirit of Czechoslovakia surrendered, enchained, a noble and historic name and all it has stood for, besmirched and obliterated. Dead, the name, the spirit, live.

The ambassador recalled an episode in that epic odyssey which has gone down in military history as one of the marvelous achievements of World War I—the march of the Czechoslovak Legion which fought beside the Allies against the Russians, and after the Bolshevists had made their peace with the Germans, fought its way from the Ukraine to Vladivostok, a trek that makes the world's great marches pale by comparison.



JAN MASARYK
The name, the spirit, live.

Many believe that Masaryk had remained on with the new government as foreign minister, not because he accepted as inevitable Communist domination, but because he felt he could serve best within the government, working secretly with democratic elements. He made a cryptic declaration in a speech to the Czech army after the Communist assumption of power, in which he said: "Czech and Slovak brothers, I am with you." This may have been an indication of his true purpose; to direct the underground. He was a master at subtlety.

One must take into consideration the attitude toward self-destruction in a country which had a long tradition of martyrdom and underground resistance, and no Catholic background. I do not know how much of a mystic Jan Masaryk may have been. But it has been emphasized that only a few hours before his death, he visited his father's grave with others, to venerate the honored memory. And he remained there, alone, long after the others had gone.

Perhaps he felt that he had received, in that lonely vigil, some mystic command, say as Hamlet did after a similar experience: ". . . and thy commandment all alone shall live within the book and volume of my brain, unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!"

Peace Depends On World's Children

Recently I received a pamphlet from the General Brotherhood board containing an article by Gordon Allport, department of social relations at Harvard, entitled: "Guide Lines for Research in International Cooperation."

Allport points out that most international conferences meet in the glare of cameras, microphones and bald heads, and that it is time to concentrate our efforts on the children.

Credit: United Nations World

These United Nations members don't quarrel. Can you guess the country to which these children of members of the United Nations staff belong?

In teaching children about the peoples of the world, Allport says the tendency is to accentuate the DIFFERENCES.

He says: "The American child learns with horror about head-hunters, about infanticide; and he learns to laugh at the Dutch who clop in wooden shoes, and at the quaint observances of Easter among adherents to the Orthodox faith. The implication of inferiority is a usual by-product of our present method of teaching cultural and national differences. Less dramatic, but far sounder, would be the teaching of the common considerations of justice and morality that are identical over vast areas of the earth. Practices that may SEEM to differ dramatically often indicate common aspirations and common values. The prayer wheels of Tibet and the silent Quaker meeting have virtually identical functional significance; so too the initiation rites of the Pawnee and the American high school commencement.

Allport thinks that a study of the common peoples of the world undoubtedly would reveal that more important to them than boundaries and national aspirations are matters of self-respect, pride, food, shelter, marriage and the welfare of their children.

Yes, as I said earlier, ask the peoples of the world to vote between capture of territory, acquisition of ports or oil fields at the price of war—and there would be no question of their choice.

Little effort has been made, Allport claims, to search for the common ground of mankind—and he suggests that the United Nations prepare an encyclopedia of the uniformities and similarities in the beliefs, practices and aspirations of all peoples—an encyclopedia which would serve as a reference guide for innumerable aspects of world policy for years to come.

Young Evangelist Preaches, Sings and Plays Accordion

LOS ANGELES. — Little Marjoe Gortner, three and one-half-year-old "preacher," is the talk of Los Angeles evangelist circles.

The curly-haired son of the Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Gortner, both Long Beach evangelists, made his pulpit debut at a local downtown meeting and since has given several sermons, followers say.

His average sermon lasts about 10 minutes. He also sings and accompanies himself on the accordion.

Marjoe's best sermon, say his backers, is "The Last Roundup," in which he comes on singing, dressed in a cowboy suit, and concludes with a short message on the general theme.

New Clam Eating Champ Downs 120 in 10 Minutes

SEATTLE.—The Pacific Freestyle Amateur Clam Eating Contest association—a serious-minded organization with 193 vice presidents and no rank and file members—claims a new world clam eating record of 120 devoured in 10 minutes.

The new champion hailed by the association is Richard Watson, Seattle cab driver, who slammed down a clam every five seconds during the 10-minute contest.

'Cost Conscious Methods' Will Cut Overhead, Maintain Profit Levels, Dairy Farmers Told

Well-Fertilized Pasture Gives Cheapest, Most Nutritious Feed for Livestock.

CHICAGO—Dairy farmers should become "cost conscious" in 1948 in the face of rising production costs and uncertain farm prices, declared the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in a statement made public here.

"Although the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that 1948 dairy income will reach $4.2 billion," says the statement, "higher prices for feed equipment, labor and other commodities farmers buy may result in lower net incomes than in 1947."

The committee points out that "good pasture management is one key to reducing costs and keeping up profit levels."

"Good" pasture provides abundant forage, cheap, plentiful feed, high in proteins and minerals. It promotes a larger milk output per cow. It gives your land more animal-carrying capacity.

"You can step up your pasture's output by following a few common-sense soil management practices. Vital among these are measures that assure a good catch of deep-rooted legumes and grasses.

"To get these legumes you have to feed the soil so it can feed the crops. That means liming, based on soil tests. It means returning manure and crop aftermath to the soil. It means using plenty of fertilizer containing phosphate and potash."

Pioneer Lady Passed Away

Mrs. Gullick Swenson, pioneer of this community, passed away quietly at her home Thursday morning April 8 after a long illness. Funeral services were conducted Monday April 12 at 2 o'clock in the Ring Bo Church. Rev. Myhrer and Rev. Nystuen officiated. Christine Gullickson was born in Filmore County August 9, 1889 to Mr. and Mrs. Lars Gullickson. At the age of two she moved to Evanville Minnesota. She was baptized in Filmore County and was confirmed in Evansville Minnesota. She was raised in a Christian home and has always been a worker in the church.

In 1889 she was united in marriage to Gullick Swenson and to this union 11 children were born. They came to Holt Township and homesteaded there. They moved to Alberta, Canada in 1900 where they lived until 1915, when they returned to Minnesota After living in Big Fork, Minn., a year the family moved back here and settled on a farm in East Valley Township where she resided until her death. She reached the age of 79 years, 8 months.

Left to mourn are three daughters, Mrs. Pete Sorter, Holt; Mrs. Harold Larson, Thief River Falls and Mrs. Herb Strong, Alexandria; six sons, Martin of Rosewood, Hilmer, Oscar, Albert Arthur Lewis all of Holt. One brother, Gilbert Gullickson of Evansville, Minn. 11 grandchildren and two great grand children. Her husband, four sisters, one brother, two sons and two grandsons preceeded her in death.

Pall bearers were Melvin Sorter, Rude Christianson, Oliver Grondahl, Melvin Saxberg, Henry Gronvold, Ingvald Johnson.

Songs were sung by Mrs. Kore Myhaer, Mrs. O. K. Ose and the Oswald sisters.

Interment was made in the Ringbo cemetery.

World Famous Choir to Sing at Lutheran Church at Roseau

Announcement was made today that the Concordia college a cappella choir will appear in concert in Roseau on May 9th at 2:30 H. M.

The choir is directed by Paul J. Christianson, professor of music at Concordia College, Moorhead and numbers 61 singers, all students. The concert will be given at the High school auditorium and is being arranged by Brotherhood of the English Lutheran church, Rev. T. C. Hanson pastor and Dr. David Berge chairman of the Brotherhood.

The choir, now on its 28th annual tour, has received much praise wherever it has sung. It includes in its repertoire choir numbers by old masters, folk songs, and modern compositions by the director and other contemporary composers.

An invitation extended to the choir by Nordmanns Forbundet to make a tour of Norway during the summer of 1949 has been accepted. Passages for the choir members have been secured and plans now under consideration include spending the greater part of the summer in Norway and perhaps a few concerts in other countries.

Handle Tree Stock Carefully

Give the new tree planting stock proper care when the mailman or nurseryman delivers it to you. If you don't, you run the risk of poor growth.

To keep from drying out or moulding, open and water the bundles as soon as possible says County Agent F. W. Forbes.

For best results the trees should be planted 24 hours after they are received, If this is not possible store in a cool place and keep moist.

If it is not possible to plant the trees within a week they should be "heeled in" in a shady spot until planting time.

Three steps in "heeling in".

1. Dig a shallow trench deep enough to take the entire root system without crowding.

2. Spread the trees out in the trench with the tops well above the ground.

3. Pack soil firmly around the roots so that all roots are in contact with the soil.

Taking these precautions will make it possible to keep trees in good condition for a week or 10 days.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Now It's Neckties Made of Milk!

Fellow in Andy Botkin's Tavern was boasting about a trick necktie he was wearing made out of a by-product of milk. "Took 33 pounds of milk to make this tie," he says.

Bill Webster was unimpressed. "Personally," he says, "I'd rather nave the milk to drink. Just as I wouldn't change one glass of good American beer for a necktie made from thirty barrels of it!"

Yes, modern science being what it is—seems like you can make "anything out of anything" these days. But in the case of milk, well I guess drinking it is still a whole lot better than just wearing it.

Of course there are lots of other ways of abusing goods and beverages—like a fellow who doesn't appreciate good beer enough to drink it slowly and in moderation.

But from where I sit, most people who enjoy a wholesome beverage like beer or ale are moderate —because beer itself is a beverage of moderation.

First Illinois Paper

Illinois' first newspaper, the Illinois Herald, was published at Kaskaskia in 1814. The second, the Illinois Immigrant, appeared at Shawneetown in 1818. Kaskaskia, once the state's leading city, was flooded over and now lies at the bottom of the Mississippi river. Shawneetown, with a population of less than 2,000, recently was moved away from the banks of the Ohio to escape periodic flooding.

Good Wool Producers

Wyoming sheep producers carrying on flock improvement work use rams which produce about 4.8 pounds more greasy wool than ewes in the same flock, according to University of Wyoming wool department. Rams in these flocks produced from 1½ to 7 pounds more greasy wool per fleece than the mature ewes, with an average difference of about 4.8 pounds.

'Tarzan's' Bed

Johnny "Tarzan" Weismuller is reported to have the biggest bed in Hollywood. It measures seven by eight feet. Actually sleep is hindered if a bed is too small, but tall people don't have to be movie stars to remedy the situation. Extra length, extra width bedding now can be obtained at small extra cost.

Convention City

Abraham Lincoln was nominated for the presidency in Chicago in 1860. This was the forerunner of many history-making political conventions held in that city, including those which nominated Grant, Garfield, Cleveland, Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding and Franklin Roosevelt.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Lewis Battles Taft-Hartley Law; Baruch Sees 'Total Mobilization'; Eisenhower Repeats His Refusal

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

LABOR:
Lewis Fight

John L. Lewis and the Taft-Hartley law were locked in a mortal struggle.

His United Mine Workers were still out of the pits in a "voluntary" objection to the companies' alleged refusal to provide them with a $100-a-month pension plan. Most of the 400,000 miners were out fishing. Lewis himself was out gunning for the Taft-Hartley law, enactment of which was largely the result of his activities in the first place.

After the miners had gone out, President Truman, acting under the Taft-Hartley law, had appointed a fact-finding board to investigate the difficulties. But when the board asked John L. Lewis to testify, he refused.

Then the board issued a subpoena requesting that he appear. Again Lewis refused, stating that the board had no right to demand his presence before it.

He said he based his disinclination to testify on the facts that:

1. Neither he nor the UMW had done anything covered by the Taft-Hartley law, thereby nullifying the President's invocation of the law, and

2. Two of the three board members were "biased and prejudiced and in honor should not serve."

Finally, minutes before the deadline, the burly, bushy-eyebrowed chief appeared.

It was obvious, of course, that the UMW chief was out to break the Taft-Hartley enactment. Apparently he was determined to drag the pension dispute all the way through the courts—preferably as high as the supreme court to get a final verdict.

And any way it turned out, the process would react for the miners' immediate benefit. While the courts would be mulling over the matter the date for the annual renewal of the mine workers' contract in June would be approaching. The longer the present dispute remained unsettled, the worse the nation's coal situation would grow, thus putting Lewis in a good bargaining position to extract a favorable contract for next year.

MOBILIZE:
Controls?

Bernard M. Baruch approves of selective service and universal military training for the present quasi-crisis, but he does not think that is enough to meet all the implications the world situation holds.

The financier and presidential adviser called also for an "economic mobilization plan" and said that America's failure to muster all its resources now for peace would leave "no alternative but to mobilize for war" in the future.

Baruch told the senate armed services committee that he was afraid that if the nation suddenly and without preparation were called upon to mobilize and prepare for a big war, such forces of domestic inflation would be set in motion as could blow the country wide open and leave it defenseless.

He suggested the appointment of someone to "watch the impact upon our economy of the partial mobilization we are entering upon and to maintain a constant inventory, balancing all our growing commitments against our resources."

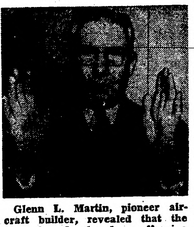
It had not been a hidden threat, but Baruch's statement had focused attention on the possible danger that a sudden spate of military spending could bring about ruinous inflation.

As a result, talk of reviving the defunct OPA was being heard in Washington. Baruch's warning touched off informal discussions in congress about the possibility of reviving wage-price controls, rationing and other curbs on the domestic economy.

This, of course, had been an integral part of President Truman's famous 10-point program against inflation which he proposed last year, but most congressmen virtually had gagged at the thought of reimposing price and wage controls, and the President was accused of trying to set up something like a "police state."

Now, however, congressmen were not so sure. They were beginning to wonder if the military spending necessary to contain Russia might not have to be buttressed by controls at home.

'Greatest Killer'



Glenn L. Martin, pioneer aircraft builder, revealed that the U. S. has developed an offensive weapon superior to the atomic bomb. He called it a "radioactive cloud—the greatest killer of human beings ever devised." Martin said also, "I'd be in favor of using it before I'd become a slave to another nation."

LUCIUS CLOBB
On War Nerves

"Pharonie," said Lucius Clobb to his helpmate as he arranged a quizzical wrinkle in his brow, "d'you think we're thunderin' toward another war?"

"Soon as you open your mouth I figure we're in for at least a skirmish," retorted Pharonie. "If you spent half as much time cultivatin' my peace of mind as you do your soybeans we wouldn't have near the arguments we do." She impaled the elder statesman of Pawhooley county on a spearlike glance.

"Dang it, Pharonie, why do you have to drag your rockin' chair militarism into everything I set out to do a little talkin' on? One of the reasons you married me in the first place was to get security. Now you got security but you still want to fight."

The light of creative achievement gleamed briskly in Lucius Clobb's eye.

"Say, by gosh, that there gives me a right smart idea for an aphorism. Nothing I like better than an aphorism. What d'you think of this Pharonie: Between 1941 and 1945 we were united with Russia in the bonds of holy warlock, but now the honeymoon's over, the lock is busted and there ain't nothin' left of the original idea except war."

"Mister Clobb, you can put that out in the corn crib with the rest of your aphorisms," commented the critical Pharonie.

"Mebbe so," sighed the elder statesman, "but it worries me—not knowin' how to feel about this here world situation. I'm gettin' on toward 69, so I could afford to think that in order to have peace and a secure foreign policy we first got to rig up a strong backbone at home. And a strong backbone right now means a strong army and navy and air force."

REPEAT:
Ike's 'No'

Gen Dwight D. Eisenhower, fair-haired boy of both political parties, said it once more: He would not be a presidential candidate on anybody's ticket.

There had been a lull following his unequivocal refusal of Republican overtures, and then the pro-Eisenhower sentiment was resurrected in the hearts of no fewer than four widely divergent groups.

Probably the most unique approach was being made by Torrey Stearns, a New York public relations man, who harbors the opinion that Eisenhower is a Republican. He conceived a "People for Eisenhower" movement. The method is a nationwide solicitation of voting citizens to send in postcards bearing this signed testimony:

"I want to vote for General Eisenhower for president in November. I am a citizen of voting age."

"On June 21," Stearns announced, "all of the statements will be presented to the Republican national convention as indisputable evidence that the people of the United States demand the nomination of Dwight D. Eisenhower for president."

But Eisenhower was having none of it. Speaking through a statement by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, army press chief, he indicated that "his no politics statement of some weeks ago" should "apply to all parties and groups of voters."

Said Parks: "He has not changed one iota in his position and I do not believe he will do so."

BUNDLE FROM HEAVEN

New Minor Planet 'Swims Into Ken'

U. S. astronomers have revealed the discovery of a bundle from heaven—a strange new minor planet which moves around the sun at high speed.

The planetoid is only about two miles in diameter. Although there are about 1600 of these minor chunks of matter, all circling around the earth like the sun, most of them travel in orbits far larger than that of the earth and do not come anywhere near it.

It is the fact that the newly discovered planet cuts through the earth's orbit that makes it unusual. Only four other minor planets have been found which do this, and they have since been lost to astronomers' telescopes.

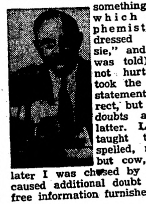
Ruminating on Ruminants, Or Cogitating About Cows

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—The subject of cows recently has been called to my attention.

In the early pre-crossword days, a cow was supposed to be an animal of the bovine species. Now it is just a three-letter word meaning ruminant. There is another three-letter word which also sometimes means a ruminant of which I will speak later.

Before I knew that a cow was either a member of the bovine species or a ruminant, I thought it was something fearful which was euphemistically addressed as "Bossie," and which (I was told) would not hurt me. I took the former statement as correct, but had grave doubts about the latter. Later I was taught that c-o-w spelled, not bossie, but cow, and still later I was chased by one. This caused additional doubt concerning free information furnished by one's elders.



Then came the crossword puzzles. I saw that "three, horizontal" was a three-letter word meaning ruminant. Having heard of the word "ruminate" by that time, and thinking that, thinking or, if you will, ruminating, was a fairly common practice among the genus homo, I wrote down "man." Later when I met a number of congressmen I was convinced of my error.

Now I know that neither definition is entirely wrong. A cow ruminates when it chews its cud (having chewed it before), and a man ruminates when he chews an idea upon which he has chewed before.

In some ways however, cows and men differ. In fact, cows even differ in some respects from women, although all three creatures—man, woman and cow—are mammals, the highest form of vertebrate, those which (the authorities inform me) nurse their young with milk. Just how man gets into this category is a little beyond me, but that is what the scientist says, and I am willing to strain my credulity a little. After all, I suppose that my father, who paid for the milk which I drank when I got so I could take it out of a glass, nourished me in a manner of speaking. We will let it go at that, although it seems to me that a man assumes a little of what might be criticized as the gland manner of speaking when he tries to get more than a grade B rating as a mammal.

But to return to the differences between cows on the one hand, and men and women on the other—(and I think no one will contradict me when I say there ARE differences): One thing a cow cannot do that a man can, is blow its own horn. And as we know from listening to the soap operas, it is easier to make a woman slip than to make a cowslip.

Now what has a cow got that you and I haven't? Answer: Cattle are closely related to the buffalo, the bison and the yak. I defy any genealogist to produce a bison, a buffalo and a yak in one human family tree. On the other hand, in the branches of a cow's family tree, there are no monkeys.

In some ways the cow has superior abilities. For instance, I have seen a cow roll over without spilling a drop of milk, which is more than any man, carrying a similar amount of lacteal fluid, could do.

Philologically, the cow seems to have somewhat of an edge on man, at least for those who believe in the capitalistic system. The Latin word for cattle (as of course you know if you just looked it up as I did) is "pecus." And the word pecuniary is derived from that, and the words cattle, chattel and capital are to each other what cow itself is to buffalo, bison and yak.

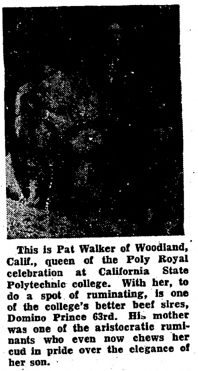
All present-day breeds of cattle, I am authoritatively informed, are descended from the two types, large and small, known in prehistoric times in Europe. However, in recent times (and now we are getting down to what started me ruminating), something new has been added. We now have developed what might be laughingly called "hot cows" and "cold cows."

The "hot" are the Brahmas which have been insinuated into our own American strains to inure them to our southern latitudes and for other purposes. As you know, Brahma cattle are known by their humps. A braw Brahma has a large hump just abaft the shoulders, and the others of lesser rank have smaller humps getting down to something not much larger than a fever blister.

The "cold" cow is quite a different thing. As might be expected, it comes from Russia where they invented the cold war, the cold shoulder and the common or Siberian cold, which is used to correct false ideologies, longevity and monopolistic capitalism.

When applied to cows instead of capitalists, the cold has the opposite effect on longevity. According to a recent article in Food Industries, a McGraw-Hill publication, the Russians have produced, by means of a chilling process applied from early calf-hood, cows which live with a high output to 15 years, yield up to 100,000 liters of milk and give birth to 15 calves.

The process is simple. One selects a calf from selected parents. It is put in an unheated barn where the temperature is kept at five degrees fahrenheit. The barns, I take it, are much like the ordinary Soviet citizen's dwelling except that there is plenty of bedding and the calves are provided with earmuffs. A citizen of the U.S.S.R. doesn't need the earmuffs because he is only allowed to listen to what the government thinks is good for him, and if his ears freeze it's all right with the censor.



This is Pat Walker of Woodland, Calif., queen of the Poly Royal celebration at California State Polytechnic college. With her, to do a spot of ruminating, is one of the college's better beef sires, Domino Prince 63rd. His mother was one of the aristocratic ruminants who even now chews her cud in pride over the elegance of her son.

The results of the chilling process on calves appear remarkable, but not for a moment would I doubt the veracity of the writer—despite my early experience with erroneous information concerning cows.

The other type of ruminant upon which these ruminations are based is illustrated in these columns.

The Old Order How It Passeth

After the grey winter days New Hampshire avenue almost sparkles these spring mornings.

The elm buds are spreading and the shadows of trunk and limb make sharp patterns on the wide expanse of the huge Belmont house. This house now is occupied by the Eastern Star—no family ever could have done more than rattle about in that palatial mansion. I suppose there will be few such palaces built in Washington any more—one after another, they are being torn down. The Leiter house on Dupont Circle is gone and a family hotel is rising in its place. Many other mansions, too big for embassies even, served as boarding houses for war workers and now they are empty and for sale.

One huge house which I pass occasionally is opened when the third generation, which still retains some of the original fortune, comes to Washington for a wedding or a party. After that the house is sealed up again, the burglar alarms are attached and the old residence goes back to dreaming of the past.

A part of this section of Washington — Dupont Circle — is being sealed off for a year while the roadbuilders burrow under the grassy park to make an underpass for trolley cars and automobiles. This will be the final blow of disfiguration to Connecticut avenue, which has yielded gradually over the years since I first knew it, to the vulgarian invasion.

A block below Dupont Circle that once was gay with the chatter of nursemaids and children of the foreign diplomats stood the British embassy. On the site today is a filling station.

Trained Homemaker Shortage in America

Maude Morlock, consultant to the United States Childrens Service, believes this country is far behind in supplying homemakers services for families temporarily without the help of their mothers.

"In this country," Miss Morlock said, "we have only made a slight beginning to develop trained homemakers who can take over the duties of a mother who is temporarily disabled or absent from her home".

She rated the U. S. second in a survey she conducted to all the following countries: England, New Zealand, New South Wales, Sweden and Denmark.

"This Partnership Pays"

...says F. J. SCHMOLL, Mankato Dairy Farmer

"When these calves grow up," says Mr. Schmoll, "their milk will go to market through Land O'Lakes Creameries. I know from experience that's the way to sell for fewer worries—and more money." Mr. Schmoll, who farms 189 acres outside Mankato and milks an average of 20 Guernseys, asserts that "by selling through Land O'Lakes I'm certain of fair test, fair weight and highest average price."

"Today," he says, "100,000 of us farmers cooperate as 'partners' in Land O'Lakes. We share in the returns and savings at three different stages—manufacture, distribution and selling. Land O'Lakes has given us a wonderful opportunity to work together for better products, more money, and greater security."

BARGAIN RATES FOR WAR FREIGHT

In suits now pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Government contends that the nation's railways overcharged it for wartime transportation services. Government attorneys estimate the alleged overcharges at between 2 and 3 billion dollars.

The public—especially the farmer, rancher, merchant and manufacturer—has a tremendous stake in the outcome of the so-called Reparation Cases. Should the Government be awarded reparations in substantial amounts, very much higher railway transportation costs would be inevitable.

Edwin C. Matthias, Vice President and General Counsel of Great Northern Railway, recently discussed the Reparation Cases before Western Minnesota businessmen in Willmar, Minn.

"Railroad rates paid by the Government during the war were in no instances higher, and in nearly every case were substantially lower, than those paid by private or commercial shippers," said Mr. Matthias. "It actually got its rates at a bargain.

"Freight charges for transportation of wartime supplies under Government bills of lading over Class I lines totaled approximately 5½ billion dollars for the period 1942 through 1945. During that time the railways paid the Government nearly 3 billions, 669 millions in taxes.

"The Government now wants to collect another 2 to 3 billions in the form of reparations. If it is successful, it will have obtained from the railways approximately 62½ million dollars more than the carriers received for hauling wartime freight under Government bills of lading.

"Land Grant rates saved the Government approximately 240 million dollars a year during the war, and Army and Navy officers testified before Congressional committees that other rate reductions voluntarily given by the railways saved the Government an additional 150 millions a year.

"Should reparations awards in substantial amounts be made, there are only two sources from which the money could be obtained to pay them—from shippers through heavy increases in rates, or from the Government to pay the Government.

"No one thinks that the money could be borrowed from the United States without creating a clamor from the politicians for Government operation of the railroads. Does the public want another extravagant experiment of that kind? It is our belief that the public does not want to take what might prove to be the first step toward the socialization of basic American industries as such industries are now being socialized in England!"

Dogs Kill Sheep

Eleven ewes and five lambs were killed and ten ewes severly injured by dogs early Monday morning on the Leo Horien farm a mile north of Holt. The entire herd of around 100 head, was affected and Mr. Horien estimates the loss at $500.00. The sad part of sheep killing by dogs is that they are left torn up and bleeding and suffer intensely. The heaviest ewes were killed due, no doubt, to the fact that they could not run fast as they were soon to lamb. One had been chased into the garage in the yard and killed. Apparently, only two dogs had done the damage.

LOOKING AHEAD

by GEORGE S. BENSON
President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

Great Teacher, Experience!

They thought that industrial strife would be over. High production, harmony, and peaceful work—all would be rosy ahead. No longer would the coal mines be operated for profit! That ghastly dragon, private enterprise, had gasped his last in a free election. From now on, the coal mines would be operated for use—for the benefit of the public. A labor government had taken possession of the mines and would be in charge of operations.

Since labor was the government, said brain-trusters in the party, all would be harmony. Of course there would be no more strikes in the coal mining industry. Labor would have no cause to strike against a labor government which was operating the mines solely for the welfare of the nation. This kind of fanciful thinking was popularly done in England when the British government took possession of the coal mines in January, 1946.

Learned The Lesson

The English people have had to learn an important lesson from their experiments in socialism. This lesson is: You can't change economic fact and law by switching political power over to another group through elections or revolutions.

What is the English experience? On September 3, 1947, the Associated Press reported from London that 50,000 miners were on strike. This action closed 46 mines in a spreading strike called "England's worst labor disturbance in three years." Coal had become so scarce because of the strike that 2,400 industrial plants employing 100,000 men warned the government they would be forced to shut down unless they could get coal.

This present strike is most serious. England is in a crisis of Dunkirk proportions — certainly her worst since peace came. Yet, despite the crisis, regardless of the labor government and the fact that it manages the coal industry, the great, spreading strike occurred. A labor government has not been able to keep workers from striking. Britain's program of nationalization has not resulted in cooperation from labor.

Free Work Is Best

For a long time the world has been plagued with ideas that there are substitutes for work. There will always be men who can make such ideas sound pretty good. But the ideas are just as false as are the men who want the political power required to put some paper "plan" into effect. There is no substitute for the opportunity of honest work, under the kind of free economic system we have in America. When some political system calls for all the economic power it can get, you may be sure that the common man is going to lose out. One of the first powers sought is the power to control industry.

In a country that speaks our language and enjoys our same civilization, a government that manages industry has brought forth no solution for industrial strife. Government management of industry has made conditions worse. It has brought loss of efficiency in England, to the tune of 60 million less tons of coal a year. Do we want high wages (which come only with efficiency and high production), and do we want industrial peace and national prosperity? Then surely we want no part of government management of American industries.

How to Disinfect Wells

Water from a well, cistern or spring which is suspected of being contaminated by flood waters should be disinfected before it is used for drinking or culinary purposes. The easiest and surest method of treatment is to boil the water for ten minutes. Storage of the water in the same covered vessel in which it is boiled is advisable.

For a large amount of water it is sometimes more desirable to disinfect the entire well or other supplies by using calcium hypochlorite, commonly known as chloride of lime, chlorinated lime, or bleaching powder. This chemical, which contains about 24 per cent free chlorine, can be obtained at any local drug store.

Disinfection of small water supplies can usually be accomplished by introducing into the well one-half pound of calcium hypochlorite (cholorinated lime). When possible the chemical should be scattered over the surface of the water in the well so that the powder will sink to the bottom, thereby permeating the supply. If this cannot be done, the chemical may be mixed with a pail of water and poured into the well. The water containing the chemical should be permitted to remain in the well for 12 hours following which water should be pumped to waste until the odor and taste of the chemical have disappeared.

For disinfecting small quantities of water mix a moderately heaping teaspoonful of calcium hypochlorite with a small amount of water in the manner before mentioned and add sufficient water to make a pint. Of this solution, use one tablespoonful for each ten gallons of water to be treated, or 36 drops to the gallon and allow to stand one-hour.

Thoughts Turn to Fishing

In another week the bonnie month of May is here again. May the halfway house between the ice castles of winter and the open playhouse of summer.

May brings many things to delight the eye and quicken the spirit. Ten thousand ice-locked lakes are open once more, and in countless homes the tackle box is center of attraction.

Beginning May 1, the speckled beauties that leap and play in in Minnesota's racing streams will be darting after shiny lure of the trout fisherman. On May 15 the season for walleyed pike crappies, sun fish and rock bass opens, followed a month later by the savage northern pike or pickerel. Bass gets another five-day respite with the season on both the large and small mouth varieties opening on June 20

Homer Does Some "Back-Seat Sewing!"

Homer Bentley's missus was working on her new sewing machine, when Homer comes in, draws up a chair, and starts talking: "Don't you think you're running too fast?" he says. "Slow down! Watch out! Be careful!"

When the missus finally turns with murder in her eyes, Homer says goodnaturedly: "I thought you might like a little help, dear—like you help me drive the car."

The missus can't help but burst out laughing—and they settle what might have been a quarrel over a friendly glass of beer. The missus agrees to give up back-seat driving and nagging Homer about ashes on the rug. Homer agrees to quit criticizing Sarah's taste for flowery hats and parsley salad.

From where I sit, the key to getting on together is meeting every issue half way—and overlooking any petty differences in tastes—whether these tastes apply to beer or flowery-looking hats!

Stitch in Time

Skirts are getting longer, girls, so why not let your hems down? In doing this you may find that there is not enough material left to give the desired width. Two or three rows of seam tape can be sewed together and used to make the hem wider.

Burning Sugar

Ever try to burn a lump of sugar with a match? You cannot. But place some cigarette ash on it, and you can. Nothing happens to the ash; it merely makes the chemical reaction of burning possible.

Choosing Pictures

Choose the pictures for your home with care. A fine picture continues to look lovely, no matter how often you change the furnishings in a room, and it will add much charm to your home.

Not on the Level

There are not more than 250 acres of level ground altogether in Nez Perce National forest in Idaho, and there is not more than a half acre of level land to be found in one place.

Birth Rates

The birth rate of the Soviet Union is more than twice that of the United States. Western Europe has suffered from falling birth rates and a declining population trend.

Car Killings

No one yet has been able to estimate how much wildlife is killed by speeding automobiles annually, but checks along stretches of highway indicate it is enormous.

Oily Skin Treatment

An oily complexion can be treated by washing the face once a day with fresh, clear water to which the juice of one lemon has been added.

'New Look' for Gloves

A tablespoon of glycerin added to the water in which gloves are rinsed will make them look new.

STOP USING HARSH LAXATIVES
Try Lemon in Water—it's good for you

The juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination. No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! Lemon in water is good for you! Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They are rich in vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B1 and P. They alkalinize; aid digestion. Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

Removing Jar Tops

Stubborn jar tops and screw-on bottle caps have caused bent silverware and exasperated housewives for generations. Scalding water will loosen the tops but takes time to heat. Here's a simple, instant method that will loosen the most stubborn cap. Just light a match and run it around the edge of the top or cap until it turns easily. Takes only a jiffy.

Birds of Passage

Fifty-nine bird species which were formerly abundant in the Northwest now are extinct in that area, or so rare that they seldom or never nest there. This list includes some of the smaller game birds whose passing lacked the drama that flares annually over the ducks and geese; but it also includes such large birds as the whooping crane and the wild swans.

Shortest Railroad

The Valley railroad, one mile in length, at Westline, McKean county, Pa., is the shortest line-haul railroad in the United States. This railroad derives its revenues entirely from freight and switching services. In 1944, the Valley railroad employed nine persons. It is an independent company, rated as a Class III road.

Treadmill Motor Power

In early stages of their development, both the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and the South Carolina railroad tried cars with treadmills driven by horses. It is reported that the strange contrivance tried out was condemned after it had been derailed by a trespassing cow.

DDT Controls Bollworm

DDT controls the bollworm and tarnished plant bug but is ineffective against the boll weevil, leafworm and cotton aphid. It gives good control of the bollworm at 10 per cent strength at 10 to 15 pounds per acre.

Mission Without Nails

The Cataldo mision near Coeur d'Alene, Ida., was constructed by the Jesuit fathers without the use of nails. The mission, started in 1848, required 20 years to erect. It still standing and in a good state of preservation.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Carries Fight to Communists As Congress Approves Foreign Aid; Income Tax Cut Becomes a Reality

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

FOREIGN AID:
In Motion

With President Truman's signature on the $6,098,000,000 foreign aid bill, the massive, potent forces of western capitalism moved into action against Russian communism for the beginning of a titanic, long range clash of strength.

To observers in the U. S. this interplay of forces had all the ingredients of an epic poem—the power of good striving mightily to overcome the power of evil, with the fate of a large segment of mankind depending on outcome of the struggle.

There was an epic quality, too, in the manner in which congress, seemingly impelled by a strong sense of urgency, raced the bill through for final action. The house approved it with a vote of 318 to 75 after less than 15 minutes of explanation, and the senate followed up swiftly with a voice vote.

Two days after passage of the measure President Truman meshed the gears of the global aid program by ordering the reconstruction finance corporation to advance 1.16 billion dollars at once. That action released U. S. dollars, reconstruction supplies and in some cases arms to 15 European nations, as well as Turkey, western Germany, Trieste and China.

The overall $6,098,000,000 aid package includes 4.3 billion dollars for the European recovery program, 275 million dollars for military assistance to Greece and Turkey, 463 million for China and 2 million dollars for Trieste. All of it is aimed at areas where communists are sharpening their sword of aggression.

An ill-starred movement in the house to include aid to Franco Spain in the bill was defeated before it had time to do much damage to U.S. prestige and moral stature abroad.

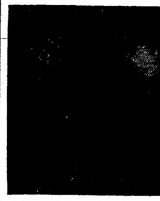
As the aid started to move, the situation abroad stacked up something like this:

Russia's seizure of Czechoslovakia, its new pact with Finland and pressure on Scandinavian nations, the Soviets' arbitrary action in Berlin all pointed to the fact that Moscow was trying to bring about a showdown in Europe before the European recovery plan began to work effectively.

On the other hand, the rapid passage of the foreign aid measure, the proposal to return Trieste to Italy and the stiffening of American will in Berlin seemed to indicate that the U.S., while not forcing a showdown, was, nevertheless, willing to have it as soon as possible.

Few persons familiar with the situation thought that a showdown with Russia necessarily meant war. But it did involve acceptance of a risk of war. U.S. leaders were willing to take that risk on the theory that the likelihood of a shooting war is less now than it might be in the foreseeable future.

Who's Mad?



Nobody seemed to be mad at anybody when Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia and President Truman met at convocation exercises at William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va., to receive honorary degrees of doctor of laws. Mr. Truman exchanged a cordial handshake with Governor Tuck, vociferous leader of the southern states' rebellion on the President's civil rights program.

REDUCTION:
Tax Measure

President Truman's veto of the income tax reduction bill was crushingly overridden by both houses of congress—311 to 88 in the house, 77 to 10 in the senate—and U.S. citizens sat back to gloat over the first major tax-cutting measure passed in nearly 20 years.

In his now characteristic "I'd rather be right than be president" role, Mr. Truman had stubbornly affixed his veto to the bill, protesting that it mainly would benefit presons with incomes of $5,000 or more, encourage further inflation and sap the nation's strength at a time of international "danger."

Examination of the new tax structure indicated that the President was right in his first contention, at least—that the law would be of greater benefit to persons with high incomes than to those in lower brackets. Reason for that is that 12.6 per cent of $3,000 is considerably less than 5 per cent of a million. (Cuts in tax rates as provided by the new law range from 12.6 per cent in the lowest brackets to 5 per cent in the top level.)

Most interesting aspect of the tax cut development was the question of what motivated Mr. Truman to veto the bill. He was aware that enough members of both houses were supporting tax reduction in this election year to override his veto; hence, that his veto would be a gesture of futility that would place him on record as opposing the popular will.

Mr. Truman must have been aware, also, of the strong possibility that next year congress, safely through the elections, will boost federal income by reimposing some version of the wartime excess profits tax.

In view of these unpretty but inescapable realities, the President's veto of the tax bill simply did not fit the preconceived pattern of political action in an election year. Rather, it looked more like the deliberate driving of another nail in his political coffin.

In his veto message, Mr. Truman contended that increased defense and foreign aid measures might make it necessary for congress to raise taxes next year.

"In the case of the income tax," he said, "nearly 40 per cent of the reduction would go to individuals with net incomes in excess of $5,000, who constitute less than 5 per cent of all taxpayers."

Also, the President continued, while national income is high every effort should be made to reduce the size of the 253-billion-dollar public debt.

He was, beyond doubt, sincere in his objections, but they fell on deaf ears in congress.

APOLOGIA:
From Russia

Even as Russia officially expressed regret over the "unfortunate" British-Soviet plane crash over Berlin which cost 15 lives, plain people all over the world began to see more clearly how, although no nation is seeking war now, a war could start accidentally.

A pilot of a Russian fighter plane had buzzed a British plane, carrying 14 passengers, as it was landing in Berlin. The transport crashed in the Russian zone where the wreckage lay for 12 hours before the bodies were permitted to be moved.

Tension in Berlin eased somewhat when British officials accepted the Russian apology and canceled plans to assign fighter plane escorts to all air transports coming into Berlin.

The official British account of the crash quoted eyewitnesses as saying that the Russian fighter pilot was "frolicking" when he hit the big plane.

While the fighter pilot undoubtedly had not been ordered to harrass the British plane, it was equally apparent that he and his cohorts had not been forbidden to do so.

Aside from the number of lives lost, the disturbing part of the incident is that it was, in a manner of speaking, an aggressive action, an overt act of deliberate provocation. And it is just such incidents as that that world leaders fear might one day touch off the conflagration.

MODERN MOTORCADE

Cars on Road Hit Historic Figure

Number of passenger cars on the road in the U.S. today is at an all-time high, according to an article in the April edition of "Business Comment," bulletin of Northern Trust company.

This is true despite the fact that no passenger cars were manufactured for private use during the war, that an estimated average of 1.2 million passenger cars were scrapped or put into storage yearly during the same period, and that postwar production has not yet exceeded the best prewar years, the bulletin stated.

Latest available figures indicate a total of 27.5 million passenger cars registered in the U.S. on July 1, 1947, the article reported.

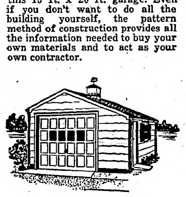
Easily Built Garage with Extra Storage Space

IF you know the difference between a hammer and a saw, you shouldn't have any difficulty with this 13 ft. x 20 ft. garage. Even if you don't want to do all the building yourself, the pattern method of construction provides all the information needed to buy your own materials and to act as your own contractor.



With the purchase list of materials you can shop around for the 2x4s and other lumber as easily as shopping for groceries. Then by following the step by step directions and assembly illustrations you can do all or part of the work yourself.

As the floor plan indicates, there is ample space for even the longest car. Best of all this garage provides a separate storage space for garden tools. Entry to this room is from the outside. Here the lawn mower, rakes, roller and other garden tools, as well as a bicycle or two, can be stored without cluttering up the garage.

Along one wall, directly below two casement windows, there is room for a six foot workbench. Toward the rear is a closet that can be used for any number of good ideas. It's large enough for a deep freeze unit or for a reserve canned goods supply; screens or storm sash, paints, darkroom or endless other uses.

Building the garage yourself can be lots of fun. You'll not only save a lot of money but you'll be surprised to see what a professional looking job you can turn out. Building from a pattern eliminates all guesswork. The pattern tells you what to buy and where to use each piece. Step by step directions are easy to follow. Full Size Patterns simplify making angle cuts on rafters and gable studs. All construction is laid out so that no special tools are needed. Directions for building the cupola are included.

Directions and assembly illustrations are also provided for building a breezeway connecting the garage to your house.

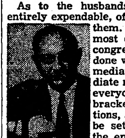
U. S. Has Best Opportunity To Enforce Peace in World

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

Once again we face the high cost of savagery—or preventing it—depending on how you put it. Billions more to run the government and the world, and to cover a stepped-up defense program. Talk of a 10 per cent increase in the budget for next year seems logical. As one cynic remarked, in the next war perhaps we ought to try to get on the losing side, and let the victors support us for a change.

Discussion of the details and cost of a selective service and universal military training program has been going on for some time. Sentiment against drafting husbands and G.I.'s seems to be crystallizing.

It would seem that G.I.'s might be fairly good material in an emergency without having to learn the general orders over again, and without having to reacquire precision in bringing the right hand smartly to the cap brim or lying down within a reasonable period before the arrival of a machine gun bullet.



As to the husbands—they aren't entirely expendable, of course—all of them. Probably the most effective thing congress could have done was to vote immediately for immediate registration for everyone. The age brackets and exemptions, after all, could be settled later. If the emergency arises or even approches—we can talk details. That is the kind of emergency we face, and no sacrifice would be too great to prevent it. Right now proof of our willingness to act is most important.

Contrary to the general assumption that all we need is a few push-button experts and professors of nuclear science, any war that might come from now on would require a more extensive mobilization of civilian as well as soldier than anything which has preceded it.

Meantime, there is a better chance to establish a solid and stable peace than there ever has been. The United States has a better opportunity to enforce peace than any nation ever had. We could, with comparatively small sacrifice, start a preparedness program to prevent the "imbalance" of power against us, as they say in diplomatic language.

In other words we could, without danger of actual conflict, since there is no power NOW (not tomorrow or next year, but NOW) strong enough to threaten us, establish a Pax Americana. And with the will to peace that exists in the world today, we could use that situation, not as the Pax Romana or the Pax Brittanica was used—to create enemies—but to build an effective Pax Universa.

America, in its strength could well afford to yield sovereignty to an international force. A period of tranquillity, enforced if necessary, is what the world needs; time to reflect. Rome and Britain did bring a long peace of sorts; we can establish a longer one—one long enough, perhaps, to build a permanent one.

The principle is simple—as a colleague of mine is fond of saying—"nobody tries to pick a fight with Joe Lewis."

Early statements were made to the effect that it would cost an additional 480 millions over what already has been budgeted for universal military training. We now spend 650 million dollars a year on cosmetics. And the total time used in applying them, according to my private statisticians, divided into manhours of military training, leaves a generous surplus for home-work.

I do not mean to treat lightly the world situation and the idea of a Pax Americana is not an empty one.

It is, in fact, the only kind of a peace we can be sure of until we have time to stabilize world conditions, until there is a fairer division of the bread, and the security in which to earn it and eat it; a cessation of the fear, suffering and anxiety which make men trade their heritage of freedom for the empty promise of protection at any price.

I sympathize with the people who oppose militarism in any form; but I do not accept as a valid syllogism: Militarism is bad; military training in America is militarism; therefore, military training in America is bad. Military training in Germany (the classic example) was the result of militarism, not its cause. Military training in America is no more related to German militarism than a hot dog is brother to a Dachshund.

Value of the Little Fish

The little ones didn't get away!

That is what Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug is explaining as he spreads the mesh of one of the 90-foot nets used by commercial fishermen of the New England coast.

"Fifteen million baby haddock that didn't get away," says Krug, who as interior secretary is likewise responsible for keeping a government eye on America's fish and wildlife, "would have been worth a million and a half dollars to New England's fishermen from March to mid-October of last year. They were caught in ordinary nets, killed and discarded."

If the little haddock had managed to get away, they probably would have grown up, been caught this year and sold by the same fishermen for a million and a half dollars."

This was one of the things I learned aboard the Albatross III, only floating laboratory possessed by the United States, which goes into service this spring. She started out as a regular commercial trawler, was drafted, transformed into a member of the coast guard's Atlantic patrol, discharged and now is equipped to do exactly the work commercial fishermen do, plus a lot more (by her crew of scientists) which will help the fishermen do better.

Baukhage interviews Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug aboard the floating fish laboratory "Albatross III" in Boston harbor.

One of the tasks of the fish experts is to see if anything can be figured out which will save the wastage created by catching the fish too young and thus preventing them from growing up to be caught and sold another year.

The mesh in the net in the picture is four and a half inches instead of the standard three-and-a-half measurement. Experiments have shown that use of the larger mesh saves 80 per cent of the under-sized fish, and does not reduce the size of the catch of the larger, marketable fish. But the commercial fishermen have to be shown.

One of the many tasks of the Albatross III is to prove by actual demonstration that this is true. It is a big job. And the department of the interior has a big man at the head of it. The dwarf in the photograph to whom Krug is talking (according to figures on my White House pass provided by the secret service) is 5 feet, 11 inches tall—and I am standing on my two feet, not kneeling.

Few Americans sipping their coffee, says Mid-America Information bureau, know that the berries from which it is made look a good deal like cherries. And for that matter, few Americans, sipping their Manhattans, say I, know that the cherries in them look a good deal like coffee berries.

BARBS . . . by Baukhage

The world's largest herd of dwarf cattle recently reached Chicago—five cows and bulls totaling less than the weight of an average steer. Now I know where that steak I got last night came from.

ASK ME ANOTHER?
A General Quiz

THE QUESTIONS

1. Who invented that pole with which your grocer picks cans and packages from the top shelf?
2. What is the coldest place in the world on land?
3. Do birds sleep in their nests?
4. If you find a pearl in a restaurant oyster, is it any good?
5. How much can you see with your eyes moving?

THE ANSWERS

1. Benjamine Franklin.
2. Verkhoyansk, Siberia. The January temperature averages 50 degrees below zero.
3. Only when they are too young to leave them, though a mother bird might accidently snooze while sitting on her eggs.
4. Probably not. Very seldom do pearls found in oysters by diners have any value. If the oyster was cooked, you can be sure the pearl is practically worthless.
5. Not a thing. You are stone blind when your eyes are moving in their sockets.

Retired Minister Reads Complete Bible 50 Times

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The Rev. Benjamin Beers, 71, has read the complete Bible 50 times and the New Testament 115 times. The retired minister of the United Pentecostal Council of the Assemblies of God makes a practice of reading the Bible two or three times a day for a total of about two hours.

Tossed From His Car, Driver Chases Vehicle

LYNN, MASS. — Roger Bragdon's motor trip from Lynn to nearby Revere left him footsore and leg-weary.

En route his car was in collision with a trolley. The crash tossed Bragdon—uninjured—out of his automobile, which kept on going. The 23-year-old driver chased the vehicle several blocks before he could overtake it and climb back into the driver's seat.

Indian Legend

According to Indian legend, wishes made at the Hassayampa Wishing Well, near Wickenburg, Ariz., will come true if, after drinking the water, the person making the wish faces north and tosses a coin into the well. Many tourists who visit this scene take advantage of this ancient legend.

Some of the 75,000 ABC Pins Get Ready to Travel

Did you know that rules of the American Bowling Congress call for daily replacement of the bowling pins on its 40 tournament alleys? This means some 75,000 new pins are used in the course of the event. The practice assures that every team will compete under exactly the same circumstances. In the photograph above a girl is repacking a few of the discarded pins for distribution by Chevrolet truck to privately owned bowling establishments.

Keep Milk From Sun

When a bottle of milk is delivered and left on the porch, where the sun beats down on it, your family will be cheated out of some of the milk's appetizing and nutritional values. Even in cold weather, if left in direct sun, the flavor and vitamin content of milk will be changed. The flavor of homogenized milk is affected within half an hour when in the sun, and other milk within one hour. The milk doesn't sour or "turn," but a distinct taste change occurs due to the sunlight.

Cleanup Week

Governor Luther W. Youngdahl has written to the State Board of Health as follows: "I hereby designate the week beginning May 2 as Clean-Up Week in Minnesota." The time and effort devoted to the thorough cleaning of cities, villages, parks, playgrounds and other areas are investments in the protection of the health of every citizen. It is also an obligation that we must accept in preserving the natural beauty of the commonwealth.

"I call upon all local officials, publications and civic organizations to give Clean-Up Week their careful attention and to develop plans for action which insure the success of this important project, affecting the health and welfare of all."

Clean-Up Week implies prevention of fires and accidents. Our slogans are "Keep Minnesota Green, prevent Forest Fires Grow More Trees"; and "Save 400 Lives, 399 And Yours!" Accidental deaths 1,877 in 1946; 1,947 in 1947, 809 being deaths in homes.

7 Great Song Hits!

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

As reported by George Fricker, Jr.

Newfolden won a first place rating in a musical festival held at Karlstad during the past week end. The mixed chorus and other musical numbers won first class ratings which gives them the opportunity to take part in the regional festival. Here they will meet competition from Bemidji, Thief River Falls, Park Rapids, East Grand Forks and others.

The Senior class play will be held tonight at Newfolden High school. "The Bargain Bride" is the title of the play.

Move on Wheels

Farmers are the largest single group of motor vehicle owners. More than four million passenger cars are in use on farms. Farmers own 1,110,000 trucks, and in addition, hire another half-million to handle farm products and supplies. Thirty-four per cent of all trucks are used in agriculture.

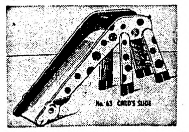
Easily Built Children's Giraffe's Neck Slide

Do you feel tired, jittery, in need of a vacation? If the news on the front page starts to get you down, it's time to relax. You'll be agreeably surprised to see how far away from the worries of the world you can get by working with wood. Sawing wood and then putting the pieces together has tremendous therapeutic values. It's a grand way to keep yourself completely occupied while accomplishing something worth while.



Building this slide from the pattern isn't at all difficult. All you do is cut each part according to the pattern. Then fasten each piece together exactly in position indicated on the printed paper pattern. No special tools or skill are required. The pattern specifies materials to buy and where to use each piece. All lumber is stock size and readily obtainable at lumber yards everywhere.

Three Children Ideal, Says French Women

Most French women agree that there ought to be at least three children in every family.

In a recent survey conducted by the French Institute of Public Opinion, the women were asked "What is the ideal number of children to have?"

Their husband's occupation had a pronounced influence on their answer. Women whose husbands were professional men favored families of four children. The wife of the laborer thought that two would be enough.

When the survey was tabulated however, it was found that "three" answers outnumbered all others.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Revolt Interrupts Bogota Parley; Miners Get Pension, End Walkout; GOP Aspirants in Primaries Fight

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

REVOLT:

Bogota

It was a peaceful early afternoon in Bogota, Colombia, and the inter-American conference was droning along in customary style in the capitol building on the Plaza Bolivar.

Then, with the firing of four assassin's bullets into the body of Jorge Elicier Gaitan, popular leader of Colombia's Liberal party, one of the worst revolts Latin American has seen exploded into violence.

During the first afternoon Bogota descended into a state of complete anarchy. Mobs prowled the streets, burning and looting. Scores were killed. The residence of President Ospina Perez was attacked and windows were broken before army troops drove away the crowd.

Above the confused clamor of the throng could be heard shouts of "Down with the government, down with the Conservatives."

Three days later, as the riots simmered to a halt, 300 persons were dead, many others injured. Downtown Bogota was a welter of destruction. Colombia had broken relations with Soviet Russia, and the inter-American conference had almost cracked up, with delegates uncertain as to whether they could continue.

On the face of it, the revolt was a sudden eruption of violent sentiment of Liberal party followers against the Conservative government in power. Immediate result was the formation of a new coalition cabinet, equally composed of Liberals and Conservatives.

Big question was how much Communists had to do with the Bogota riots.

U.S. Secretary of State George Marshall, who with other Americans in Bogota got through the riots unscathed, claimed the revolt was Communist:

"The occurrence goes beyond Colombia. It is of the same definite patterns as the occurrences which provoked strikes in France and Italy."

And the Colombian government, in severing relations with Russia, declared that a "Communist insurrection" had touched off the mob fury.

Finally, it was announced from Bogota that the inter-American conference would resume "so that Communism could not triumph over Colombia and the rest of the nations of the hemisphere."

SETTLEMENT:

Coal Strike

John L. Lewis wasn't exactly in the position of a man who had asked friends out to dinner and then found he couldn't pay the check, but he was verging on some such situation.

Half a million soft coal miners started to straggle back to work after a 28-day strike when Lewis informed them that the fight for $100-a-month pensions had been won, but Lewis himself had to appear before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough to answer a contempt of court charge.

Lewis was cited for contempt by Goldsborough, his 1947 nemesis, on the grounds that he ignored an April 3 court order to call off the strike.

Apart from the contempt of court citation, settlement of the coal strike was distinguished mainly by a slightly marvelous amalgam of political action and expedient compromise.

Beginning of the end came when Speaker of the House Joseph Martin (Rep., Mass.) moved into the dispute by persuading Lewis and Ezra Van Horn, a mine operator, to meet with him in his office. Martin then suggested that Sen. Styles Bridges (Rep., N.H.) be named the third member of the board which administers the miners' welfare and retirement fund. (Lewis and Van Horn are the other two members.)

At a subsequent meeting of the three, Bridges proposed a plan that would give $100-a-month pensions to 62-year-old miners with 20 years of service who retired after May 28, 1946, the date on which the miners' welfare fund was set up. Bridges' plan was accepted and the strike called off.

Actually, Lewis, in approving the New Hampshire senator's proposal, had descended several notches from his original demands.

Politically, the most fascinating aspect of the affair was how Joe Martin managed to take the play away from the administration in arranging for a settlement.

On Wisconsin

In his South St. Paul home Stassen grinned with the comfortable cheer of a cat who had just swiped all the cream in Wisconsin as he sat with his wife and received reports stating that he had run off with 19 of the 27 delegates in that state's primary election.

PRIMARIES:

Wisconsin

Wisconsin's presidential primary election to choose delegates to the Republican national convention in Philadelphia on June 21 was regarded, as usual, as a straw in the wind; but this year the political breeze was a shifting one.

For Harold Stassen, ex-governor of Minnesota, a hard, thorough campaign waged by himself and his volunteer supporters up and down the state paid off nobly when Wisconsin voters granted him a total of 19 of the state's 27 delegates to the GOP convention.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur took the remaining eight to run a poor second, despite a flamboyant publicity drive carried out by his backers (notably the Hearst newspapers) which was built around the theory that he is "the only man equipped to deal with Russia."

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York drew a complete blank in Wisconsin, where he had been the Republican favorite in 1940 and again in 1944.

As a result of the Wisconsin election, Stassen was catapulted into public consciousness as a leading contender for the Republican nomination. It was certain that his top-heavy victory there would be reflected in the other primaries to follow, and that he had gained considerable stature in the Midwest.

It was difficult to tell which of the two losers—Dewey or MacArthur—had been hit harder by his defeat. Dewey, who received no delegates, might seem to be in a position similar to that of Wendell Willkie in 1944 when he withdrew from the GOP race after losing ignominiously in the Wisconsin primary. But the New York governor previously had beaten Stassen in the New Hampshire primary, and, also, he had the full slate of New York delegates pledged to him.

It was on MacArthur, who had claimed Wisconsin as his home state, that the axe of public disfavor appeared to have fallen with greatest force.

More To Come

From Wisconsin the election year wind swung to the plains of Nebraska where seven leading contenders in the Republican presidential race fought it out in a free-for-all match, with Stassen again emerging as the big winner.

After Nebraska the battlefield shifted to Pennsylvania and Massachusetts on April 27. A total of 108 delegates to the GOP convention was at stake.

On May 4 Harold Stassen was to carry the fight to Sen. Howard Taft's home arena, the state of Ohio. It was no secret that Taft was worried over which way his fellow Ohioans might go, and a good showing by Stassen would hamper materially Taft's White House ambitions.

In his second pitched battle with Governor Dewey (New Hampshire was the first) Stassen was slated to invade Oregon for that state's GOP primary on May 21. While results of the Oregon primary were not expected to be conclusive, they would serve to provide a first sampling of West coast opinion.

Final state presidential primary on the Republican side occurs in California on June 1.

TREATY:

Finns-Russ

Russia had what it wanted from Finland—a buffer state to the northwest.

The two nations signed a 10-year treaty of mutual assistance which binds Finland to fight within its own borders in the event either country is attacked.

Finland and Russia, stated the pact, would battle side by side to repel aggression by Germany "or another state allied with" Germany. The treaty circumspectly failed to mention any other state by name.

Despite the fact that Finland's delegation virtually had been commanded to appear at Moscow to sign a treaty with Russia, Premier Josef Stalin beamed expansively after the agreement had been concluded, hailing it as a "treaty between equals." And he said:

"I would like to see us pass from a long period of mutual distrust during which we twice fought against each other, to a new period in our relations—to a period of mutual trust."

Actually, the Finns got a better deal from Russia than they might have hoped for. Their nation had not been forced into a tight, arbitrary military accord with the Soviets, nor had Finland lost its sovereignty although it was brought firmly into the bloc of states along Russia's exposed western flank.

ATOM BOMB:

No Secret

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal put a name and a definitive edge, after a fashion, to all the restless postwar fears Americans have been experiencing.

He did it by announcing to the house armed services committee that Russia knows how to make the atomic bomb. More specifically, the Russians possess the knowledge of how to put the bomb together but so far do not have the industrial capacity to capitalize on that knowledge.

Russia does not yet have an atom bomb, but the days of U. S. monopoly of A-bomb production are numbered, Forrestal said. He told the congressional committee that he got his information from Dr. Vannevar Bush, chairman of the U.S. research and development board.

During the course of his testimony regarding a two-year draft of men 19 through 25, the defense secretary answered queries with:

"I said they do not have the atom bomb. I did not say they do not have the secret of the atom bomb.

"I am informed by Dr. Bush that the scientific knowledge and technical procedure involved in the manufacture of the atom bomb are known to Russia."

Thus, U.S.-Russian relations on the atomic level had developed to the point where there was only one unknown quantity: How soon would the Soviets acquire the industrial capacity to produce atom bombs?

Secretary Forrestal admitted he didn't know.

Italian Style

U.S. Ambassador to Italy James Clement Dunn (right) peers benevolently at an Italian worker in Taranto as he tastes grain that was among the foodstuffs delivered aboard the 500th relief ship to bring food to Italy.

CONTROLS:

Cold Shoulder

The jeering specter of price, wage and ration controls was invoked again by President Truman's council of economic advisers which called for nationwide "discipline" to prevent inflation under the impact of the new defense program.

In its report covering the first three months of 1948 the council denounced the tax cut law as "inflationary" and recommended new taxes if the planned defense spending is not offset by reduced government costs in other areas.

Republican-dominated congress received rather happily the council's call for reduced government spending, but maintained a glum silence on the subject of selective price, wage and ration controls.

Congressmen indicated that they want to study possible inflationary effects of the preparedness program and foreign aid spending under the Marshall plan before they give any serious consideration to resurrecting economic controls.

Although the council admitted that foreign spending coupled with a big defense outlay "will not swamp our economy nor require us to pass from free enterprise to regimentation," it added that "some rather systematic and vigorous discipline must be exercised."

EDUCATION:

Nearly half of the 5,245,000 World War II veterans who entered special education and training programs under the G.I. bill of rights have abandoned their courses, Veterans' administration says.

More than 400,000 completed their work, however—382,000 of them under the G.I. bill and the rest under the rehabilitation program for disabled veterans. Many of those that quit plan to return later, it was indicated.

Gasoline from Coal

Gasoline made from coal, even when it comes into general use, probably will cost more than petroleum gasoline, but at least motorists won't have to worry about shortages, a research scientist, Dr. R. W. Krebs of Baton Rouge, La., has predicted.

He estimated that coal gasoline will cost from 10 to 15 cents more a gallon than gasoline currently in use, but he added that the supply will be enough to last 1,000 years.

ASK ME ANOTHER?

A General Quiz

THE QUESTIONS

1. Do all deer shed their horns every year?
2. Why aren't the keys on the typewriter listed alphabetically?
3. Does garlic have food value?
4. Are there more golfers or bowlers in this country?
5. Why are tons of colored comic sheets shipped to trading posts in the jungles of Africa?

THE ANSWERS

1. Yes. Male deer lose their horns in the spring of the year, but sometimes they shed them at another time.
2. The originator of the typewriter keyboard tried to arrange the letters in a manner that would make for the greatest ease of operation. He was a printer and placed them as in a printer's type case.
3. Just a trace of Vitamin C.
4. Three million golfers; fifteen million bowlers.
5. Natives won't buy things wrapped in other paper.

Calm Example of Two Nuns Helps Avoid Panic in Wreck

BOSTON.—Two nuns seated in the first car of a wrecked train helped, by their own calm example, to avert wholesale panic among passengers, a Back Bay woman reports.

"Passengers started crowding toward the rear door to get out," said the woman.

"The two nuns sat in their seats, and on their faces was a look of peace and calm that I'll never forget. Just by their appearance, they calmed the passengers and helped them get off the train without panic."

Muff (a Dog) Has Her Ideas About the Nobility of Man

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—There is nothing particularly strange about a dog guarding a batch of milk cans like the one in the accompanying photograph. You wouldn't be too surprised to be told that the dog knew who should collect the cans and who shouldn't; to hear about other dogs who go to the store with a shopping list, bring back groceries and even steaks in the basket they carry; and you know all about the wonderful "Seeing-Eye" dogs which not only guard their masters from harm, but often appear to sense danger's approach.

But the other day I had an experience with a dog which you probably won't believe.

I was sitting at twilight on my porch after a long day and a comforting meal. I was digesting my dinner while Muff, my wire-haired fox, was removing the last vestiges of her share of it from her beard. She was lolling in front of me on the flat topped porch-post, her favorite resting place. She finished her toilet, flopped her chin on one paw facing me and winked — or so it seemed in the fading light. A robin was sounding the last sleepy cadences of his vesper song from the recesses of an ancient maple.

I looked at Muff. She looked back and smiled beneath her whiskers — or so I guessed she might be doing.

"If I had the patience," I said half-aloud, "I could teach you to talk."

"Oh, no you couldn't!"

I could almost swear Muff had responded. She certainly had opened her mouth. I let my imagination run on. "Oh, yes I could," I replied, pretending she could understand me. "You've got the brains. How do you know that when I take my briefcase, I'll be back in the evening and when I take my suitcase, I won't be back for several days? You DO know, because you show it very plainly: briefcase, a couple of wags and a woof; suitcase, body-wiggles, plaintive arfs, upjumping and hand-licks."

I went on cataloguing the obvious indications of Muff's intelligence, which far surpasses that of many loquacious human acquaintances. As I talked on, Muff rolled over carefully (there was just room for it on her perch) and yawned. Not because she was bored, as I was to learn later, but because praise of this type always embarrasses her. She will wag herself wagless at a "good dog!" for some stupid, fetch-and-carry trick that even a Boston terrier could learn, but when one praises her intellectual achievements, it always embarrasses her and she tries to hide it.

"Well," I insisted, "It's true you are intelligent enough to talk."

Then I was puzzled. Distinctly, though in a breathy voice which sounded the way a dog does before he has quite decided to bark, I heard an answer: "It isn't that I am not intelligent enough. And it isn't that dogs will never talk, but I'm afraid I shall never learn."

I'm dreaming, I said to myself, but no. There was Muff, there was the outline of the maple, dim now as the darkness gathered. There was I.

I shut my eyes. I'll handle this rationally, I said. Just let things happen. I relaxed and was less surprised to hear the soft, breathy voice continue: "It isn't that there's anything wrong with my speech center in the third, left convolution of my cortex—but, I want to repeat, that dogs never can learn to talk. . . ."

"Gently I opened my eyes. Muff was sitting up now, her head cocked to one side, her mouth, or at least her jaw, moving a little, because even in the crepuscule I could see her beard wagging gently as she went on:

"Because, as you may know, we canines, and I believe this applies to other animals as well, have far clearer race-memories than human beings. You sometimes mistakenly refer to these memories as intuition. That is nonsense. Given a set of circumstances, any half-witted pooch or over-bred show-pup, immediately knows what to do.

"We canines picked man as a friend and were probably one of the great factors in his domestication, largely because we found him more malleable than any of the other fauna. And I think we have done a good job. We have not been harsh masters. We may be over-sentimental at times, but you with YOUR maudlin sentiment, you frequently interpret sound, practical loyalty, motivated by a high moral sense, as a slavish devotion.

"But I'm digressing (the voice went on)—what I would like to bring to your attention is this business of race memories. You men have some, too, and you have something else—traditions. They don't go back as far, but they are part and parcel of the same thing. Only many of your traditions lead you into trouble. In the last few months, while you thought I was asleep, I've heard you and your high-brow friends use phrases like, 'always been wars'; peace never has been maintained except by 'balance of power'; men are 'fighting animals' and so on ad nauseam—(pardon the Latin but a Roman senator belonged to one of my ancestors.) Now I, with my race memories—can recall more of them which have worn thin and been discarded than your species (which I doubt will have a very extended destiny) ever will have.

"Just an example. With little effort, I can recall some of the silly shibboleths which made trouble for some of my ancestors. It was back in the stone age, just about the same time when we canines decided Man had reached the point where he was ready for adoption and training in civilization.

"At that period in pre-history we had advanced to the point where we hunted in packs instead of singly. Our policy was still kill and let be killed although some of us had discovered its fallacy. We also had a long list of so-called hereditary enemies, and next to the apes, Man led them all.

"We canines picked man as a friend and were probably one of the great factors in his domestication."

"I don't know how many centuries it took to revise that list, and accept Man as a friend. A pretty stupid and cruel friend, to be sure, but one who could be trained. There was one saying, I believe, which was very popular, but which the more enlightened canines knew was nothing but an old females' tale. It went: 'Don't trust a man any farther than you can smell him.' You would realize the force of that if you knew how far you used to smell.

"There was another saying: 'The only good man is a dead one, and even then you'd better let the jackals taste him first.' I could go on endlessly. It took an awful lot of work to explode those myths. Almost as long as it did to get some of the cruelty out of Man. We've gone a long way in that direction, as you know. In another 10 or 15 centuries I wouldn't be surprised if we got you to treat each other as well as most of you treat us. Your wars! Ugh! That shouldn't — and wouldn't —happen to a dog!"

At this point I sat up. Muff always had been faithful, obedient, and I thought not only my true friend, but also my respectful and humble servant. And this was going too far! Why this was impertinent. My own dog, talking like that!

I must have spoken out loud, for I heard something that sounded like a laugh.

"Now don't try to bust your leash," I heard her remark. "After all, if you think I'm your dog, okay. Somehow I feel that you're my man. So, let's let it go at that and we'll both be happy.

"I didn't mean to run on like this and I didn't mean to get dogmatic. I just wanted to say that I know my limitations. I can't talk. But if it's in the canine cards, my descendants will. It took several thousand years to kill the race memories which would have dictated that I take a nip out of your calf instead of licking your hand. And, there's hope for you, too. Maybe progress is just around the corner—"

There was a sudden whoosh, a flash of gray in the night, followed by a parabola of fur as Muff left the post in one leap after the neighbor's cat which by now was snickering at her from the maple branch.

Muff came back. She gave me a hang-dog look and remarked through her whiskers. "That is one race-memory that I can't eliminate." "And by the way," she added, "Don't mention this conversation. Nobody will believe you if you do."

Famous St. Bernards Seek Rescue Work

Modern means of travel have rendered the famous St. Bernard Hospice in Switzerland almost unnecessary. It is to be closed after nearly 1,000 years of service. The monks and dogs will live in the Rhone Valley from now on.

Its head, Prior Lucien Gailloud has explained that the hospice is not to be abandoned completely. Four dogs will stay for rescue work. Some time ago several dogs were sent to Tibet to establish in the mountains a branch of the Great St. Bernard Hospice. The kennels for the famous dogs are located at Martigny.

Cattle Prove Grass "Greener on Other Side of Fence"

CHICAGO—The old adage that "the grass is greener on the other side of the fence" has a scientific basis in fact, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"When cattle will risk injury in order to get into another field for the grass on the other side, something more significant than bovine curiosity is involved," the statement points out. "Animal instinct and soil fertility are closely related.

"Recent soil studies using farm animals as the yardstick for measuring fertility revealed some striking results. Livestock invariably selected feeding areas where the soil had been fertilized, in preference to untreated areas. Their choice represented grass or grain that would promote more effective weight gains, better health and more prolific reproduction.

"Cattle confined their grazing of pasture to areas of a field that had been limed. Hogs turned into corn concentrated on the fertilized grain and left the unfertilized corn untouched, even though they passed to and fro through it. Barley was grazed out first in an area where 200 pounds of mixed fertilizer was applied, in contrast with a plot treated with only 100 pounds.

"Grains in the self-feeder were selected by hogs according to the soil treatment where the crops were grown.

"All things considered, the 'other side of the fence' is sought by farm animals for the valid reason that it yields better nourishment, more proteins, vitamins and body-building food elements than the acreage that is unfertilized. Dumb animals are teaching human beings the value of soil improvement. Experiments have shown that cattle, hogs and horses will continue season after season to show their preference for pasturage or feed that has been produced on land adequately supplied with mixed fertilizer. These experiments have shown, too, that fertilizer has a 'carry-over' benefit that lasts for as long as eight years after the original application.

"These tests indicate emphatically how important the matter of soil fertility is, if we are to produce more and better food per acre and thus reduce production costs in the competitive postwar period. Soil replenishment can be readily accomplished by attention to a few fundamentals. Among these are liming, crop rotation, the regular application of adequate amounts of mixed fertilizer and the growing of legume crops."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Sam's Hens Wear Spectacles!

Yes, it's a fact! Sam's brood of two dozen hens are wearing spectacles—which he bought from a mail-order house in Capitol City.

Sam says it works (and big poultry raisers say so, too). The hens see each other through soft colored glasses, and instead of fighting and picking at each other, they go around placidly, gain weight, and lay more eggs.

Makes me almost wish we could have rose-colored glasses for human beings, too. So that instead of quarreling and criticizing, like we do so much of the time, we'd live and let live in contentment.

From where I sit, the human race wastes a powerful lot of time in wrangling over minor issues ... whether a man should drink beer or cider ... whether a woman should wear slacks or skirts ... instead of seeing each other through "spectacles" of tolerance that enable us to live-and-let-live like Sam's brood of chickens.

Annuals Bring Abundant Bloom

Most home gardeners like to grow annual flowers. Coming quickly into bloom from seed sown each year, they are the easiest of all flowers to grow and bring a wide range of vivacious color for a long period.

Poppy and bachelor button are two of the earliest. The low-growing edgers, sweet alyssum and candytuft, are also fairly quick to flower from seed. The lovely balsam, fragrant pinks, the graceful scabiosa, the hedge-forming four o' clocks, the colorful nasturtiums and petunias are next in line. Later come the tall cosmos, the beloved zinnias and the marigolds. Most annuals are so easy to grow that even children can raise them successfully. Special favorites for children's gardens and those of some grownups are feathered celosia, the oddly interesting cockscomb, and the gay woolflower.

One secret of growing near-perfect annuals is to use good seed and sow it thinly. In outdoor planting do not sow deeply but cover the seeds firmly so that they will make immediate contact with warm moist soil for speedy germination. When the seedlings appear, thin the plants so that the remaining ones will have plenty of space to spread and mature.

Most annual flowers are not particular about the kind of soil they grow in but they do like plenty of sunshine and air. Most annuals do not thrive in shady places.

In order to get the most bloom from annual flowers all through the season, they need a certain amount of attention. Petunia plants sometimes grow lanky and crowd their neighbors. Cut sprays of blossoms freely and arrange them for indoor enjoyment. The plants will recover quickly and bloom better than ever. Snip off the fading blossoms of zinnia, marigold, cosmos, and other annuals. If left to go to seed, they rob the plants of strength to develop new flowers. Keep the edging annuals, such as sweet alyssum and candytuft, from looking frowsy by clipping off the tops with shears after they have bloomed. They will reward you by flowering again and looking pretty for a long season.

Free Chest x-rays Will Be Here

Residents of Marshall County will be given an opportunity to have a free chest x-ray when the State's Health Department's Mobile x-ray unit arrives in the county in July. It consists of a large truck equipped with a unit which can take 500 or more miniature x-rays in a day.

Inspection of the chest by x-ray is extremely valuable in locating areas of the disease before the person himself feels any symptoms of the disease, thus greatly increasing the chances for recovery.

True or False?

"American business doesn't make enough profit." Do you think that statement is true or false? Many people haven't the vaguest idea. Some folks have been fed propaganda which seems to show at every turn that the main purpose of industry is to exploit the poor man. These persons are side-tracked into the wrong answer. Why should we ever forget that American business under our system of freedom of opportunity has itself done more than anything else to make the poor man rich? That is industry's goal!

There is one group, however, that is well acquainted with the fact that business in general does not make the profit it ought to make to keep our system going ahead safely. This group is made up of communist and socialist agitators, as well as fellow-travelers. They know our system depends upon honest profit incentives. The communist program in this country is planned around the fact that the average American industry does not make enough profit. They are counting on that.

On Taking Over

Theirs is no short range program. It is long range. The commies do not believe that our industrial enterprises, on their present profit margins, can survive a temporary depression. These would-be dictators are strict believers in depressions. They always count on taking over after the next "boom and bust." What we must not fail to see is that our American system, if not held back, has the ability to triumph over economic setbacks. We always come back stronger than before.

It is unfortunate that the general public sees industry as making exorbitant profits. Actually, most people do not know that industry's profit level is as low as it is. Take a specific industry for example. According to surveys, many think the steel industry takes for profit as much as 5 cents out of every dollar of sales. This is wrong as can be. During the five recent "boom" years, just 3.5 cents out of each dollar taken in by the steel industry was profit. And much of this 3.5 cents was "plowed back under."

Profit Means Jobs

We look upon steel as being the leader of our manufacturing industries. Steel is basic. It supplies the raw materials and semi-processed materials which are the chief need of manufacturing plants today. Our daily lives are conditioned by the place of steel in modern civilization. This is one reason why we should be concerned about the decline of profits shown by the steel industry, on a long term basis.

Why would the agitators like profits to be less? They would like to see the government "take over" any of our major industries. That would bring them a step nearer their own goal: "taking over." How has the profit of steel and other industries, despite big increases in sales, been kept so low? The main reasons: enormous operating costs and heavy taxation. Only a very large and efficiently managed industry could operate successfully under these conditions.

Steel, like other industries, requires constant reinvestment of new funds. Moreover, a large portion of profits have to be returned to the business. In 1946, when net income was about 5.5 cents per dollar of sales about 2.5 cents was put back in the steel business. This left only 3 cents to be given to the owners and investors. It is easy to see that if industry is not allowed to make profits, our business cannot continue to make goods we need and offer jobs for all. Adequate plofit is a blessing, not a crime.

Altho every day of the year should be Mother's Day it is well that there is a day set aside to pay tribute to Mother Sometimes a pat on the back means more to mother than fine gifts.

Cattle Prove Grass "Greener on Other Side of Fence"

CHICAGO—The old adage that "the grass is greener on the other side of the fence" has a scientific basis in fact, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"When cattle will risk injury in order to get into another field for the grass on the other side, something more significant than bovine curiosity is involved," the statement points out. "Animal instinct and soil fertility are closely related.

"Recent soil studies using farm animals as the yardstick for measuring fertility revealed some striking results. Livestock invariably selected feeding areas where the soil had been fertilized, in preference to untreated areas. Their choice represented grass or grain that would promote more effective weight gains, better health and more prolific reproduction.

"Cattle confined their grazing of pasture to areas of a field that had been limed. Hogs turned into corn concentrated on the fertilized grain and left the unfertilized corn untouched, even though they passed to and fro through it. Barley was grazed out first in an area where 200 pounds of mixed fertilizer was applied, in contrast with a plot treated with only 100 pounds.

"Grains in the self-feeder were selected by hogs according to the soil treatment where the crops were grown.

"All things considered, the 'other side of the fence' is sought by farm animals for the valid reason that it yields better nourishment, more proteins, vitamins and body-building food elements than the acreage that is unfertilized. Dumb animals are teaching human beings the value of soil improvement. Experiments have shown that cattle, hogs and horses will continue season after season to show their preference for pasturage or feed that has been produced on land adequately supplied with mixed fertilizer. These experiments have shown, too, that fertilizer has a 'carry-over' benefit that lasts for as long as eight years after the original application.

"These tests indicate emphatically how important the matter of soil fertility is, if we are to produce more and better food per acre and thus reduce production costs in the competitive postwar period. Soil replenishment can be readily accomplished by attention to a few fundamentals. Among these are liming, crop rotation, the regular application of adequate amounts of mixed fertilizer and the growing of legume crops."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Sam's Hens Wear Spectacles!

Yes, it's a fact! Sam's brood of two dozen hens are wearing spectacles—which he bought from a mail-order house in Capitol City.

Sam says it works (and big poultry raisers say so, too). The hens see each other through soft colored glasses, and instead of fighting and picking at each other, they go around placidly, gain weight, and lay more eggs.

Makes me almost wish we could have rose-colored glasses for human beings, too. So that instead of quarreling and criticizing, like we do so much of the time, we'd live and let live in contentment.

From where I sit, the human race wastes a powerful lot of time in wrangling over minor issues ... whether a man should drink beer or cider ... whether a woman should wear slacks or skirts ... instead of seeing each other through "spectacles" of tolerance that enable us to live-and-let-live like Sam's brood of chickens.

Most home gardeners like to grow annual flowers. Coming quickly into bloom from seed sown each year, they are the easiest of all flowers to grow and bring a wide range of vivacious color for a long period.

Poppy and bachelor button are two of the earliest. The low-growing edgers, sweet alyssum and candytuft, are also fairly quick to flower from seed. The lovely balsam, fragrant pinks, the graceful scabiosa, the hedge-forming four o' clocks, the colorful nasturtiums and petunias are next in line. Later come the tall cosmos, the beloved zinnias and the marigolds. Most annuals are so easy to grow that even children can raise them successfully. Special favorites for children's gardens and those of some grownups are feathered celosia, the oddly interesting cockscomb, and the gay woolflower.

One secret of growing near-perfect annuals is to use good seed and sow it thinly. In outdoor planting do not sow deeply but cover the seeds firmly so that they will make immediate contact with warm moist soil for speedy germination. When the seedlings appear, thin the plants so that the remaining ones will have plenty of space to spread and mature.

Most annual flowers are not particular about the kind of soil they grow in but they do like plenty of sunshine and air. Most annuals do not thrive in shady places.

In order to get the most bloom from annual flowers all through the season, they need a certain amount of attention. Petunia plants sometimes grow lanky and crowd their neighbors. Cut sprays of blossoms freely and arrange them for indoor enjoyment. The plants will recover quickly and bloom better than ever. Snip off the fading blossoms of zinnia, marigold, cosmos, and other annuals. If left to go to seed, they rob the plants of strength to develop new flowers. Keep the edging annuals, such as sweet alyssum and candytuft, from looking frowsy by clipping off the tops with shears after they have bloomed. They will reward you by flowering again and looking pretty for a long season.

"Added Financial Benefits"

JAMES H. HOLTHAUS, who owns 500 acres and farms an additional 250 near Buffalo, Minn., is one of 100,000 farmers who sell through Land O'Lakes—because, he says, "I get added financial benefits that way."

An owner-patron of the Buffalo Cooperative Producers Association, he has 64 head of cattle, milks 35 cows.

"By selling through Land O'Lakes," he points out, "we farmers share in benefits of marketing as well as manufacturing operations. My ownership share in my creamery and marketing organization means a lot to me—because I feel I'm working for myself."

Free Chest x-rays Will Be Here

Residents of Marshall County will be given an opportnnity to have a free chest x-ray when the State's Health Department's Mobile x-ray unit arrives in the county in July. It consists of a large truck equipped with a unit which can take 500 or more miniature x-rays in a day.

Inspection of the chest by x-ray is extremely valuable in locating areas of the disease before the person himself feels any symptoms of the disease, thus greatly increasing the chances for recovery.

True or False?

"American business doesn't make enough profit." Do you think that statement is true or false? Many people haven't the vaguest idea. Some folks have been fed propaganda which seems to show at every turn that the main purpose of industry is to exploit the poor man. These persons are side-tracked into the wrong answer. Why should we ever forget that American business under our system of freedom of opportunity has itself done more than anything else to make the poor man rich? That is industry's goal!

There is one group, however, that is well acquainted with the fact that business in general does not make the profit it ought to make to keep our system going ahead safely. This group is made up of communist and socialist agitators, as well as fellow-travelers. They know our system depends upon honest profit incentives. The communist program in this country is planned around the fact that the average American industry does not make enough profit. They are counting on that.

On Taking Over

Theirs is no short range program. It is long range. The commies do not believe that our industrial enterprises, on their present profit margins, can survive a temporary depression. These would-be dictators are strict believers in depressions. They always count on taking over after the next "boom and bust." What we must not fail to see is that our American system, if not held back, has the ability to triumph over economic setbacks. We always come back stronger than before.

It is unfortunate that the general public sees industry as making exorbitant profits. Actually, most people do not know that industry's profit level is as low as it is. Take a specific industry for example. According to surveys, many think the steel industry takes for profit as much as 5 cents out of every dollar of sales. This is wrong as can be. During the five recent "boom" years, just 3.5 cents out of each dollar taken in by the steel industry was profit. And much of this 3.5 cents was "plowed back under."

Profit Means Jobs

We look upon steel as being the leader of our manufacturing industries. Steel is basic. It supplies the raw materials and semi-processed materials which are the chief need of manufacturing plants today. Our daily lives are conditioned by the place of steel in modern civilization. This is one reason why we should be concerned about the decline of profits shown by the steel industry, on a long term basis.

Why would the agitators like profits to be less? They would like to see the government "take over" any of our major industries. That would bring them a step nearer their own goal: "taking over." How has the profit of steel and other industries, despite big increases in sales, been kept so low? The main reasons: enormous operating costs and heavy taxation. Only a very large-and-efficiently managed industry could operate successfully under these conditions.

Steel, like other industries, requires constant reinvestment of new funds. Moreover, a large portion of profits have to be returned to the business. In 1946, when net income was about 5.5 cents per dollar of sales about 2.5 cents was put back in the steel business. This left only 3 cents to be given to the owners and investors. It is easy to see that if industry is not allowed to make profits, our business cannot continue to make goods we need and offer jobs for all. Adequate profit is a blessing, not a crime.

Altho every day of the year should be Mother's Day it is well that there is a day set aside to pay tribute to Mother Sometimes a pat on the back means more to mother than fine gifts.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Anti-Communist Coalition Crushes Red Opponents in Italian Election; Lewis, Miners Fined for Contempt

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

EAST, WEST:
In Italy

By the time officials finished counting the first vote returns from Italy's national election there was no longer any element of surprise in the fact that the anti-Communist coalition parties were winning two-to-one.

Unusual thing was that the anti-Red Christian Democrats, Republicans and Social Unity party had scored such a top-heavy victory. They led everywhere, even in the so-called "Red North" where Communists had amassed considerable strength in the industrial cities. It appeared that the anti-Communists had secured absolute majority in both the Italian senate and chamber of deputies.

Communist front spokesmen conceded that the election results "must be considered a victory" for Premier Alcide De Gasperi's coalition.

This Italian election had been the plum for which both the U. S. and Soviet Russia had been competing frantically for six months. It was a real contest. Each nation had sent myriads of entries: "I think Italy should be anti-Communist (or Communist) because—" Each entry was accompanied, not by boxtops, but by boxcars of food and machinery as well as other blandishments.

Victory of the anti-Communists in the election was, in a manner of speaking, a clear-cut victory of benevolent capitalism over militant communism. As such it could exert tremendous influence on the course of European history.

Probably the principal factors deciding the outcome of the election were passage of the European recovery program and the U. S. proposal to return Trieste to Italy.

Further, the election appeared to make an important point concerning the workings of Communist aggression: Ability of the Communists to take over a country is greatly reduced in cases where the Red army cannot be brought into position to exert pressure on the intended victim.

The Red army was not a factor in the Italian elections. It was a factor, either through its immediate presence or its threatening proximity, in the coups of Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania, Bulgaria and eastern Germany.

If that reasoning is sound, a disturbing conclusion is evident: Should Russia realize that Soviet domination of Europe cannot be accomplished without use of military force, the next step might be to bring the Red army into action.

LEWIS:
Lost and Fined

All things considered, John L. Lewis came away from his brush with the government in fairly good shape—suffering only relatively minor abrasions of the pocketbook.

For ignoring a federal order to end the soft coal strike that began March 15 over a pension dispute, Lewis was convicted by Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough of criminal contempt of court. As punishment Judge Goldsborough imposed a $20,000 fine on Lewis personally and fined his United Mine Workers union a total of 1.4 million dollars.

It was almost a verbatim re-enactment of the Lewis-Goldsborough drama of 1946 when the judge fined Lewis $10,000 and the union 3.5 million dollars for contempt.

This time, however, Judge Goldsborough wanted to be tough. He wanted to give Lewis a jail term but refrained from doing so upon advice from the government, chief prosecutor in the case.

Nevertheless, he deplored the government's policy of "expediency" which dictated that the mine chief's punishment should be limited to a fine and that he should not be given a jail sentence because that would make a martyr of him in the eyes of the miners.

It was a bad spot for Lewis—perhaps the worst of his career. Not only had he failed to beat the Taft-Hartley act and been forced to accept terms far short of his original demands in settlement of the pension dispute, but he also had put his UMW treasury 1.4 million dollars in the hole.

And now, if the miners continued to stay away from work in protest against the punishment, the government retained a powerful weapon it could wield. The Taft-Hartley injunction against them still was pending.

Ancient Africans

A heavy flint cleaver, reduced to chalk-like consistency after having lain in the earth for milleniums, is part of the evidence a Harvard anthropologist brought back from Northwest Africa to support his claim that man existed in that section of the world 150,000 years ago.

Dr. Hugh Hencken, director of the American School of Prehistoric Research, returned from the expedition with two tons of fossils.

Requirements

US ARMY REQUIREMENTS 1949-1952

Gen. Omar Bradley, army chief of staff, told the house armed services committee that in the event of another war the U. S. must occupy Greenland, Iceland, Spitzbergen and the Azores or expose its industrial and population centers to air attacks. In a bid for congressional support of the draft and UMT, General Bradley warned that the army today would be in no position to take such positive action should the need arise.

HOLY LAND:
What Now?

In its first positive action since the U. S. backed away from its stand favoring partition, the United Nations security council issued a call to both Jews and Arabs to stop fighting in Palestine.

It probably was a gesture of impotence rendered even more impotent by the fact that the security council, although it laid down specific truce directives to both factions, decided against sending a U.N. commission to the scene of trouble to check on compliance.

Russia, continuing to favor the partition plan, refused to support the truce proposal but at the same time Andrei Gromyko, Soviet delegate, refrained from applying Russia's big-power veto and thus permitted the agreement to be concluded.

There was no assurance that either Jewish or Arab forces would agree to a United Nations truce and lay down their arms.

Well aware that the truce proposal had little or no significance in the pattern of the Holy Land tragedy, U. N. delegates shook their heads gloomily and wondered if the United Nations, not yet three years old, might not be a blue baby.

It was clear that the U. N.'s lack of "elan vital" in the Palestine problem stemmed directly from the decline of American prestige and leadership in the world organization.

After having pushed the partition plan through the U. N. by the sheer weight of its apparent conviction, the U. S. suddenly abandoned its support of partition in order to dabble in power politics with Middle East oil as the stakes. Instead of partition U. S. leaders advocated a temporary United Nations trusteeship. But they failed to indicate what kind of trusteeship or exactly how they thought it should be enforced.

While the American U. N. delegation was playing hard-to-get, other delegates were asking "What are we here for?"

Unofficial explanation was that the U. S. was trying, through Secretary of State George Marshall in Bogota, Colombia, to get some South American nations to offer to supply the troops that will be needed to enforce a trusteeship.

A-WEAPON:
Bingo!

Another batch of atoms has been exploded on the sea-girt wastes of Eniwetok atoll in the far western Pacific.

In the words of the U. S. atomic energy commission, the event marked the successful completion of an "atomic weapon." There was no further description of the sixth known atomic explosion in world history; but, as always in the case of applied nuclear physics, the element of mystery involved was at least as awesome as specific knowledge of the instrument might be.

At this stage, the situation between U. S. and Russia was not unlike a popular American game of chance. Democracy had just completed a row of numbers on its card; and in the U. S. announcement of a new atomic weapon kibitzers around the world could hear a loud cry of "Bingo!"

HYBRID CORN:
North Central

Twelve North Central states are well in advance of the South in the percentage of corn acreage planted with high-yield hybrid seed, according to a report by the department of agriculture.

The North Central group has increased its use of hybrid seed from zero in 1933 to 92.5 per cent of all its acreage planted last year, while the South has only 27.2 per cent planted to hybrid seed.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: I have bought an old house that has wooden gutters with metal linings. The linings have rusted through from lack of paint. Could I paint over the metal with some of the new-type waterproof paint?

ANSWER: If the metal has rusted through, I believe it would serve no purpose to retain it. If you can remove it without too much trouble, you could paint the wood gutters on the inside with liquid asphalt paint, and the outside with a good house paint. If there are spaces at the joints, cover them with roofing cement and roofing felt, then paint over the felt with asphalt paint.

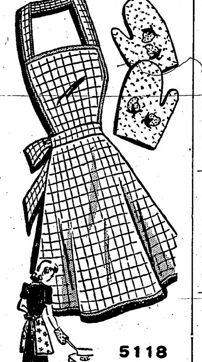
QUESTION: We just bought a new house and all the woodwork is painted white. I'd like very much to varnish it without taking the paint off. Could this be done?

ANSWER: Varnish cannot be applied over paint in the way that you ask about. The paint must first be removed either with paint remover or else by scraping or sandpapering.

QUESTION: Kindly advise me what I can do to smooth a concrete basement floor? It is rough, scaly and pitted.

ANSWER: For a fine job, you could have a terrazzo flooring contractor grind the floor down smooth with his terrazzo grinding machine. If the floor were very thin and cracking, I would suggest having it broken up and a new floor poured on top. If the floor is not leaking or cracked, I believe you could simply apply a floor leveling compound, smoothing it on with a trowel.

Apron Potholders



5118

A BIG, competent-looking and very tailored apron which can take hard wear in the kitchen can be made of striped, checked or flowered cotton and trimmed with two rows of bright bias binding. The "mitt" pot-holders can be made of the same or of a contrasting material. Plain blue denim makes an interesting mitt if it is trimmed with a lush red appliqued strawberry as illustrated.

Is This Where We Came In? War Department Thinks Not

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

"Just now Washington isn't as warlike as it sounds. The emphasis is on defense, not offense. However, there are conflicting views on what we ought to do . . ."

That sentence just about reflects sentiment here as I write these lines—a sentiment that has changed rapidly in the last few weeks, days, hours, and may change still more before these lines are printed.

That sentence also reflected the sentiment in Washington eight years ago. (I found it among my clippings of the column which appeared early in October of 1940.) I had just come back from the war department which then was located on Constitution avenue. There wasn't any Pentagon building then. I had been interviewing an officer on the subject of "our new citizen army."

"According to many letters I get" (I wrote) "what a lot of people want to know is why we need a citizen army in peacetime?"

A lot of people are asking that question again today. The answer which I reported to you in this column eight years ago was this:

"Speed is what counts in an army today. We aren't calling out these boys to fight anybody. We are calling them out to train them so they'll be ready if we ever need them. The United States can always raise a big army if war is declared. But neither we nor any other country can raise a trained army overnight. And a lot can happen in the night these days. What we want to do is to train these men for a reserve . . ."

It was a year and three months after I wrote those words that something did happen, not in the night, but in the early morning, over Pearl Harbor. We didn't start it. The Japs did the deciding. They decided that we had to go to war.

The Lesson's Over, No Time for Recess

Today we have more to say. We have learned a great deal since December 7, 1941. We have learned how to fight a global war and win it. The question is will we do the things which will prevent a global war?

That will be something if we do.

Meanwhile the wheel seems to have made the circle and some of the boys who were learning squads right in 1940 are wondering if this is where they came in. I had a chance to think about that on another trip back from the war department recently, or I should say the department of national defense. It's a longer journey now than it was to the old "temporary" World War I building on Constitution avenue. The Pentagon sprawls geometrically over 310 acres across the Potomac in Virginia. The message I brought back was very much like the one I reported eight years ago.

It was a reassurance that the request for three billion more dollars for national defense is what the military men say is the minimum peacetime expenditure to prevent war. In other words, defense, not offense. It was pointed out that if it were necessary now to prepare for actual conflict, the cost would run closer to 50 billions than three.

I was most heartily assured that the United States did not want war, that no encouragement whatever was being given those few persons who urged "preventive" action. With less certainty, but advanced as an honest opinion, was the statement that Russia did not want war, either.

"There is no reason, as far as we know now," one official told me, "why war cannot be avoided, provided a reasonable balance is established between the military forces of the two countries. Now we are in imbalance."

It was noted that Russia and her satellites now have under arms nearly twice the number which this country and the anti-Communist countries of western Europe could put in the field.

It is well to remember too that the Russian Red army is mobilized; it is largely concentrated in eastern Europe whereas American troops are thinly scattered over the whole earth. Russia has never really demobilized, she has more combat planes and men to man them; she has a greater land force; a numerically-superior artillery.

We are strong in bombing planes, but she has a stronger defense in fighter and interceptor planes. She is believed to be producing from 75,000 to 100,000 planes a year. We produced 1,700 military planes of all types last year.

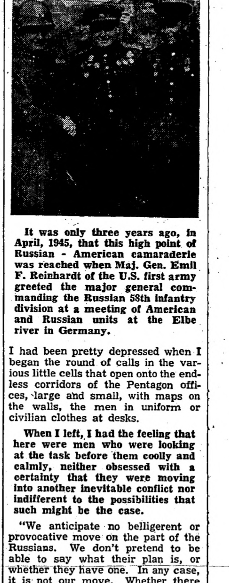
But "our biggest shortage is in equipment," said a veteran officer. One might go on at great length. I won't. I have rehearsed the sad story of "redeployment" ever since I first heard it from a general's secretary who, like most of the rest of us, thought it was "reemployment."

In case you have forgotten, the United States army, the greatest military machine in history, was "redeployed" out of existence and under such pressure from mothers and wives, and at such a breakneck speed, that in many cases it didn't leave a pile of scrap behind it to mark the spot whence it melted and dribbled away. The Red army didn't re-deploy. It is still largely deployed.

And so here we are again!

Panicky Outlook Is Not Justified

One might become exceedingly pessimistic, one might grow panicky. But, as I think over the interviews, as I recall the faces of those men charged with our nation's defense, as I ponder the words, the tone of voice, I must say the net impression of the contacts is to make me feel more hopeful than I had felt before.



It was only three years ago, in April, 1945, that this high point of Russian - American camaraderie was reached when Maj. Gen. Emil F. Reinhardt of the U.S. first army greeted the major general commanding the Russian 58th infantry division at a meeting of American and Russian units at the Elbe river in Germany.

I had been pretty depressed when I began the round of calls in the various little cells that open onto the endless corridors of the Pentagon offices, large and small, with maps on the walls, the men in uniform or civilian clothes at desks.

When I left, I had the feeling that here were men who were looking at the task before them coolly and calmly, neither obsessed with a certainty that they were moving into another inevitable conflict nor indifferent to the possibilities that such might be the case.

"We anticipate no belligerent or provocative move on the part of the Russians. We don't pretend to be able to say what their plan is, or whether they have one. In any case, it is not our move. Whether there is to be peace or war depends upon the men in the politburo. We have no way of knowing what their next step will be. We doubt if they have made up their minds . . ."

And then one official came back to the remark I quoted before:

"Personally," he said, "I do not think Russia wants war. I am certain that we do not."

As I say, I went out past the reception desk, through the high doors and out to where the quiet river holds the city in its tranquil embrace. It looked no more turbulent, no less peaceful, when, during the war years, I used to come out that same door with my notes interpreting the latest strategic war in Normandy, the breakthrough at St. Lo, the Battle of the Bulge, Patton's tactical miracles.

Washington is calm. The other day as I opened my closet door, I noticed my trenchcoat with the faded blue patch with "war correspondent" on the shoulder. It didn't give me a turn. After all, we have just won the greatest victory of its kind in history—the completion of the plan to aid Europe. That and a few bloodless steps which caution and not desperation dictate are enough for now.

Even clergymen are able to think fast in a crisis, even though those who are prone to sleep through interminable sermons may be inclined to doubt the assertion. But up in Cambridge, Mass., a policeman was induced to tear up a speeding ticket when a clergyman he had stopped explained, "You have to be fast these days if you want to save souls."

Patrick Henry's Old Home To Become National Shrine

For a long time the home where Patrick Henry lived and is buried was forgotten. Now it has become an American shrine.

The Henry home—Red Hill, in Charlotte county, Virginia—which was burned in 1919, is to be restored as it was in Patrick Henry's time, and furnished with the furniture and decorations that Patrick Henry had.

This great patriot won his first fame by demanding for colonial Virginians the rights of Englishmen. He won his greatest fame by demanding for all Americans complete freedom forever from England.

Although a slave-holder, Patrick Henry considered slave-holding an economic curse as well as a social evil. He was a lawyer by profession, and also a very successful politician.

By 1775 war was imminent. On March 23 Patrick Henry offered a resolution to organize the Virginia militia and put the colony in a state of defense. In supporting it he made his most famous speech, which closes with the declamation: "Give me liberty or give me death!"

Indian Skull Deformation

A strange skull deformation practiced by Indians of Mexico and parts of the southwestern United States a few centuries before arrival of the first white men is being studied at Smithsonian Institution. It consisted of a marked flattening of the top of the back of the head, presumably by deliberate pressure applied to the heads of infants. In extreme cases it produced what might be described as "three-horned men" with pressure-produced protuberances on two sides and the front of the skull. This was the situation in the first case ever reported, that of a skull found by a French anthropologist about 100 years ago on the Island of Sacrifices just outside Vera Cruz. No other specimens have quite reached the three-horned stage, but some of the individuals must have presented a weird appearance. In some cases the front of the skull also was flattened, producing a high, peaked head.

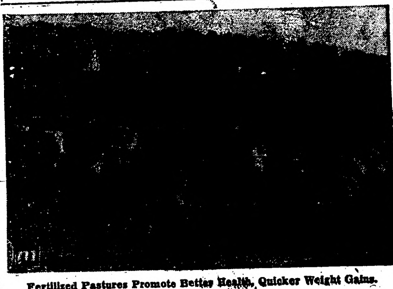
Livestock's Choice of Fertilized Pasture Proves Value of Soil Building Program



Fertilized Pastures Promote Better Health, Quicker Weight Gains.

CHICAGO—Farm animals can teach human beings a thing or two about the value of soil rebuilding, declares a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Cattle, hogs and horses will invariably choose feeding areas where the soil has been fertilized," the statement says. "This fact has been demonstrated in studies by research men of state agricultural colleges as well as by the experience of farmers themselves.

"The animals' choice represents pasture or feed that would promote better health, the most effective weight gains and more abundant reproduction."

As an example of how cows show their instinctive preference for fertilized pasture, the statement cites the experience of Frank Van Winkle, a Huntington county, Indiana, dairyman.

"On grass-legume seedings, Van Winkle fertilized with 200 pounds per acre of 0-12-12," the statement points out. "On his permanent pasture he has used the equivalent of 725 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate.

"Check strips have had no plant food. Thus comparisons could be made with the fertilized pasture.

"Van Winkle says that his cows know the difference between the check strips and the fertilized pasture. They shun the check strips. They stay right on the fertilized stands that give them needed proteins, minerals and vitamins."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

"What's Your Opinion, Mister?"

Fellow from one of those public opinion polls was in Andy's Garden Tavern, querying Andy's patrons on everything from that "new look" to the next election.

And it occurred to me that there's nothing more typically American than collecting other folks' opinions, as well as giving out with one's own. And from where I sit, it's a mighty healthy habit.

So long as people can discuss both sides of a question that comes up—whether it concerns short skirts versus long, beer compared with cider, or the larger issues of party versus party—we're sure of the individual liberty that has made this country great.

For it isn't differences of opinion that matter. The important thing is tolerance for differences of opinion—whether they affect the right of an individual to vote, to speak his mind, or enjoy a glass of beer. They're all parts of the freedom that we cherish!

Get Trees For Planting

5,000 maple, ash and elm arrived here this week for free distribution to anyone wishing to plant trees.

The trees being furnished by the Division of Game and Fish this year are for the purpose of improving game habitat or cover controlling soil erosion, protection of watersheds or streams, or tree planting projects for any game and fish improvement. It is hoped tnat an increased volume of both feed and cover plants will be available next year and in future years.

Trees may be planted on lands under the control of any governmental unit, such as highway right-of-ways, and state, county, city, school or township lands, provided officials in charge of such lands approve of the planting. Trees may be planted on private lands only after an easement has been obtained from the owner or the one in control of the land.

For further details see Louis Sagstuen at the store.

Deep-Rooted Legumes Vital in Rebuilding Soil Organic Matter

CHICAGO — Pointing out that "structure in soils is as important as the frame of a house," the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee declared that the way to repair damaged soil structure due to overcropping is to rebuild the organic matter supply.

The committee quotes a recent statement by Dr. D. R. Dodd of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, who recommended well-fed deep-rooted legumes and grasses as a means of restoring organic matter, improving tilth, and opening tightly-packed soil to air and rain water.

"Just, as a building must have rooms, corridors, air shafts and ventilating passages," said Dr. Dodd, "so a soil must have air channels, water storage rooms, passageways for roots, etc. Without these the soil becomes a solid mass like a concrete slab or the lifeless earth in our paths and highways.

"Nature builds structure in a soil under sod. But this structure is rapidly destroyed in cultivated land. Yields decline with the destruction of soil structure."

Heavy stands of deep-rooted legumes and grasses are needed in the rotation to do a good job of rebuilding the organic matter supply and soil structure. The use of fertilizer containing phosphorus and potash [illegible]

LOOKING AHEAD

President—Harding College
Searcy, Arkansas

A WORKER'S SOCIETY?

If you are a tradesman, or skilled or unskilled laborer who works with his hands—if you call yourself a "worker"—you must indeed be thankful that you live in America. Not that you should be any more or less thankful being a doctor, lawyer, teacher, or whatever you are. But somebody has called this nation a "workers' Republic", and I consider that phrase a good way to describe what we enjoy in this land of plenty.

Indeed there is no other country, whether socialized, partly socialized, or even communistic, that has given its workers more. A capitalistic America has enabled even "common" laborers to live like kings were accustomed to live not many years ago. We produce and enjoy the fruits of production. We must never forget that this has come about because the American way of life makes it possible.

Glorious Future

Do you know of a better and happier workers' nation? Have the "isms" and ideologies of the experimenters produced anything better? Certainly they have not. No worker in the world comes anywhere close to drawing the pay or enjoying the comforts of the average person right here in America. There is hardly a nation today that is not begging us to send them goods, or to bolster up their lagging economy in some way.

Possibly there are shortcomings in the American method. But judging from the achievements of the past, and viewing the possibilities ahead—I can think of nothing more foolish than to discard any part of our American way.

We can have a future fully as glorious as our past. We have new worlds of atomic energy, jet propulsion, and electronics to explore. I can think of no other economic system, besides the kind we have in America, as being equal to the opportunities ahead.

Your Own Way

We have immediate needs, too. Our people could use perhaps five million new and improved homes in which to live. Millions of farm homes need electricity and running water. We need more automobiles, and our capacity for them seems never to diminish. More cars mean more roads. One advancement calls for many more. Friend, let me say that I know of no system that bring these things to us—except that American way of initiative and enterprise.

In this workers' America, there are other things of great importance. As a worker, you are not told what you may do or how to do it. You are not the mere chattel of some state bureau. You can choose your job and your career, and so can your son. You can make your own decisions. Whether you work for an employer, or decide to work for yourself, you have a right to serve the world your own way. These things are important to you, and you are important to your nation.

No other land can show the progress America has made. Nowhere else is there such a high standard of living—that applies to everybody Progress has flourished here as nowhere else. Why? We have been free to exercise ingenuity, incentive, competition, and thrift. We have been free to invest savings in more and better tools. We have not been subject to tyranny or despotism from government. What political dictatorship can match this achievement?

At the meeting of the 4 H club at the Rude Christenson home on Friday evening several piano numbers were given by Marshal Ness and Audrey Christenson Vivian Strandquist gave a demonstration on making salad.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Palestine Trouble Heads for Climax As Arab Nations Prepare to Attack; Vandenberg Gives Warning to Russ

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CLIMAX:
Palestine

With a clashing of arms and a babble of alarmed voices, events in Palestine appeared to be piling up for another minor but bloody climax in human history.

This particular crisis had its immediate beginning in a savage attack on the Arab city of Jaffa by members of Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground force. Fact that the Irgunists' foray against Jaffa was made in defiance of orders by Haganah, the regular Jewish militia, carried no weight in the rush of incidents that followed.

From Palestine's coastal plain, site of the neighboring cities of Jaffa (Arab) and Tel Aviv (Jewish), the focal point of the disturbances moved swiftly inland to the holy city of Jerusalem.

Arabs and Jews hastily deployed their on-the-scene forces in preparation for what stacked up to be a major battle for possession of Jerusalem. Facing each other across a scant 200 yards of no-man's land, each side had its eyes fixed on the strategic Alamein camp which the British were evacuating.

But that wasn't all. It soon became apparent that the Arab league nations surrounding Palestine did not intend to stay out of this fight.

Reports were current that six Arab nations had decided to invade the Holy Land with ground, sea and air forces before the British ended their mandate on May 15.

The whole thing was shaping up in the form of a more or less total Arab effort to crush completely the Jewish intention of creating a Zionist state in Palestine.

Worried United Nations delegates, meanwhile, cast about for a means to prevent the inevitable carnage, or at least to preserve the city of Jerusalem.

France pushed its sponsorship of a heavily-armed volunteer U. N. police corps to safeguard Jerusalem. Hint of the make-up of such a force was given in the suggestion that it might include 100 New York police volunteers, but no Russians. This protective army would number from 500 to 800 members.

While the Palestine situation leaped into a frantic state of flux, the United States kept discreetly out of it all in conformation to its recently adopted policy of apparent disinterest to what happens in the Holy Land.

DEFIANCE:
Two Issues

In a surprise speech at a dinner given by Michigan chambers of commerce for the state's congressional delegation, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg served notice on Russia that:

1. The United States may join western Europe in a military alliance against Communist aggression, and

2. "We shall not surrender to Communist conspiracies in the United States."

Thus, the chief Republican proponent of bi-partisan foreign policy split the rind on two issues which, like grapefruit, will come more and more to be in the public eye as this year wears on.

Simply stated, those two issues are: Whether the U. S. should line up militarily alongside the recently formed union of western European nations, and whether the Communist party should be outlawed in this country.

They could become decisive issues in the presidential campaign. Indeed, Harold Stassen already has introduced one of them by coming out bluntly in favor of outlawing Communists in the U. S.

Vandenberg said, "We are suicidal fools if we do not root out and destroy any treason at home which may dream of bringing world revolution to the United States."

The Michigan senator only hinted at a U. S. military alliance with western Europe, but his remarks hardly could be misconstrued.

What Vandenberg didn't say is that while the U. S. has no formal or official role in the union of western European nations, American aid and support, military-wise, of that union almost inevitably is implied.

Whether or not this nation will grant that assurance will come to be a towering question in the public mind soon.

SKY-HIGH:
Bombing

A team of air force and army ordnance men is seeking better methods of hitting pin-point bomb targets from extremely high altitudes, out of reach of most anti-aircraft guns or fighter planes.

This joint organization is conducting most of its secret tests in the California desert at Muroc air base. It's assignment is to carry out research in bombing techniques, particularly at high altitudes.

OUTLOOK
The Dim Peace

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, army chief of staff, was taking a dim view of the possibilities of peace.

In fact, he admitted to the senate armed services committee, the prospect of a war is appreciably greater now than it was three months ago.

Adding forcefully to the pattern of evidence which U. S. armed forces representatives have been constructing to support their requests for a military draft and universal training, Bradley said:

"I think we would be neglecting our duty if we did not try to tell you that we are a little bit more afraid something will happen than we were three months ago when we were talking in terms of reserves."

And he added "we are not so sure" that war might not be looming in the immediate future.

To his testimony Bradley appended this clincher:

"We know that we are all speaking about Russia."

There it was — a responsible appraisal by the chief of staff of where the present talking war between Russia and the U. S. might lead.

What caused General Bradley to think the situation is more critical now than it was three months ago? He didn't say, but there is only one apparent explanation.

The tide of power politics has turned against Russia and is moving in favor of the western democracies. With ERP beginning to channel money and supplies into Europe, the fields most favorable to Communist growth — poverty, hunger and dissatisfaction—are starting to be reclaimed.

As far as getting control of western Europe was concerned, Communists saw their main chance go glimmering when they lost the Italian election. They have, in short, gone beyond the stage where they can carry out territorial acquisitions through political coups.

In order to expand further now, Russia probably would have to apply force, which, in this case, would be the Red army.

And that may be why General Bradley thinks war is more of a likelihood now than it was three months ago.

SMASHER:
For Atoms

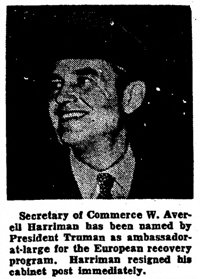
To expand further the constantly widening fields of atomic research, a gigantic new cyclotron will be built at the University of California at a total cost of nine million dollars.

In announcing the project the atomic energy commission said the new cyclotron—commonly known as an atom-smasher—would be 20 times more powerful than the 4,900-ton machine currently in operation at the Berkeley institution.

David E. Lilienthal, AEC chairman, provided a hint as to the kind of long range planning for peace the commission is visualizing when he said that the new cyclotron "serves notice to the world that it is the intent of the people of the United States to be pre-eminent in the development of fundamental science of all kinds."

Engineering already is under way on the huge atom-splitter, but it will take five years before it is completed. Conceived as 20 times more powerful than the most powerful cyclotron now operating, it will produce atomic bullets ranging in force from six billion to 10 billion volts.

At Large



Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman has been named by President Truman as ambassador-at-large for the European recovery program. Harriman resigned his cabinet post immediately.

Money Talks

Now an inventor has come up with a check that not only will talk but will scream if it has been forged or tampered with.

Burgess Smith, who used to do legal counterfeiting for the U. S. treasury, claims that his check will identify itself verbally when it is passed through a special machine. And if it has been tampered with it will emit a shrill screech, indicating that it is worthless

Termites and Pecans

Termites usually live in dead wood and most people associate them with wood destruction. However, pecan nursery stock and small trees sometimes are killed by the feeding of termites in the roots. The tree may have its taproot or its branches tunneled until only a shell or the bark remains.

Brushing Woolens

Brush woolens carefully with a firm-bristled brush after each wearing. Open the pleats and brush between them in a straight downward line. Brush into seam lines, under lapels and any other place where there may be rubbing action which will wear out material.

Irish White House

James Hoban, a native of Ireland, who had resided for some time in Charleston, S. C., in 1792 won a prize of $500 offered for the best design for the President's house. Construction began in 1792, but President Adams in 1800 was the first to occupy the mansion.

Auto Snowplow

Cooking Fish

Most important thing to remember in cooking fish is that it too often is overcooked. Just enough cooking to enable the flesh to be flaked easily from the bones will leave the fish moist and tender and bring out its delicate flavor.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Is there anything that I could use to fill rather wide cracks which have appeared between baseboard and moulding?

ANSWER: That joint can be closed with a form of moulding called quarter-round. This should be attached not to the baseboard or flooring, but by long nails passing at an angle through the opening between baseboard and flooring and into the timber behind. There will be continual movement in the flooring and baseboard through the seasons, and secured in this manner the joint will remain covered.

QUESTIOIN: Can you tell me how to plaster over plasterboards?

ANSWER: If you mean large sheets of gypsum wallboard (generally known as plasterboard), the kind that comes in four-foot widths and lengths up to 12 feet, such boards cannot be plastered. The joints are filled as directed by the manufacturer, and the surfaces are papered or painted. Plasterboard lath cannot be covered with too thin a plaster coating; at least two coats of plaster are necessary, and three coats would be still better.

Case of the Nazi Reception, Or Misleading Propaganda

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—Last month there was a memorandum on my desk from the department of the army addressed to "all former war correspondents, subject: Army Day, 1948," It suggested that perhaps I had a war story that stood out in my mind that I would like to relate as an Army Day feature. The memorandum didn't state which war was preferred, if any, but I supposed that it didn't matter so long as it wasn't the next one.

I reported the landing on the Normandy beaches, the Battle of the Bulge and many of the other important events of the last war—from a microphone in Washington; my connection with World War I was less vicarious; my experiences during earlier conflicts such as San Juan, Gettysburg, Chapultepec, Yorktown and Hastings are a little hazy.

Therefore I decided that the department of the army might permit me to relate an adventure which provided a little comedy relief in 1939, in the nervous interlude, known as the "phony war," before the real storm broke. It went something like this:

It happened at Wesermuende, the German air and naval base, shortly after Britain and France had declared war on Germany. America correspondents still had considerable freedom, and I had managed to wrangle permission to interview the first British fliers shot down by the Germans. I did, but that isn't this story.

For all the careful German preparations for war, there was still a certain amount of confusion in the office of propaganda under the highly efficient father of lies, Dr. Goebbels, but I managed to get the use of a German army transport plane to fly me (with a German radio man) from Berlin to Wesermuende.

The war was roaring westward into Poland and the great Tempelhof airfield in Berlin was all but deserted when we arrived before dawn and were escorted with alacrity, and not a little wonderment, to our transport which already was warming up. We had been up all night and my colleague immediately fell asleep on a pile of parachute equipment. As soon as dawn broke, I busied myself watching the anti-aircraft batteries in the fields surrounding Berlin, gun pits in fields surrounded by complacent, cud-chewing cows who were, like the rest of the bemused population, unaware of what the Fuehrer was about to bring down on them.

For some reason we flew low, almost scratching, our wings on the church steeples. At last my companion awoke. We were approaching the airfield. It was a lively spot. As we drew nearer, we could see a detachment of marines which came to attention as we approached. A half dozen staff cars were drawn up in a semi-circle, balanced by bluejackets and ground personnel of the air force.

"We're lucky," my companion remarked, "some big brass must be coming, we'll see a parade." No other plane was visible though, as we circled a couple of times over the docks, thick with ships including the long-lost Europa, back on her dash from Murmansk. Finally we landed a couple of yards from the military formation which by now was drawn up at attention. We were a little embarrassed, for we were in plain sight of the imposing array, and were afraid we might suddenly bump into the visiting dignitary—and we were hatless and unshaven. I let my companion go ahead. There was no place to go, however, but in the direction of the naval detachment and their commanding officer. It later developed he was the commander of the base, a tall, slim, correct naval officer, perhaps a little nervous, though we were too nervous ourselves to realize it at the moment.

We advanced, like pups approaching a porcupine. A command rang out. The troops snapped to present arms, the officer saluted and drew a manuscript from his tunic, something new to me in military procedure—all I could think of was a painting of General Washington reading a message to his troops (and I always had thought that was a flight of the artist's fancy).

The officer began reading—it was a message of welcome all right. Finally, my companion (he was half-English, which may explain his fortitude) interrupted: "There must be some mistake. We are two radio correspondents."

The commander bowed, looked abashed, glanced over our heads toward the plane.

"But where are the other gentlemen?" he wanted to know.

"There are just two of us," we replied.

"But the minister of propaganda? Who is representing him? We were notified by the department — a special plane — the truck for the baggage—"

We explained briefly, and waited for the skies to fall. They didn't. The officer continued his speech without even dropping his monocle —just to be sure—editing it slightly to make it apply as he went. There was no question that he thought we were going to be; certainly OUGHT to be Goebbels.

The formation melted away, the truck which had been requested to transport sound equipment started to load, all but one of the staff cars slunk away. There was only one red face, the airforce commander's, and he felt not embarrassment, but rage. This was a purely military field and I had held up the German war effort for half a morning, thus contributing my bit to Allied victory even before America was in the war.

For the rest, the only significant memory, except for my interview with those British boys, was the questioning by the German officers. Obviously they didn't share the complacent assurances of victory of the Nazi higher-ups—they remembered World War I.

Today the greatest danger to the peace is the possibility that the will, the purpose, the power of the United States will not be understood in time by the Russian command—that they will fail to recognize the risk of self-annihilation they are taking in their "cold war," as the Kaiser and Hitler failed to realize it.

Roses, But Never A Spray of Yew

There are many good garden books, and I for one had about come to the conclusion that the final word on gardening had been written, when along came the Woman's Home Companion Garden Book (P. F. Collier and Son corporation, publisher, New York City) with many new angles. Edited by John C. Wister, director of the Arthur Hoyt Scott horticultural foundation, Swarthmore college, this book speaks with authority.

"It is correct," it states on page 472, "to speak of narcissus, and also correct to use the English term daffodil for all species and varieties of narcissus. There is confusion about this, a popular impression being that daffodils are the yellow kind, and narcissus the white kinds. There also has been confusion about the name jonquil. All the daffodils of the jonquil group are distinguished by their narrow, garlic-like foliage and by their characteristic bright yellow color, which is the same shade throughout the flower."

All of this interested me mightily as I had just been studying a photograph of a clump of narcissus in a popular magazine's "name this picture" contest. The leaves on the plant shown were broad, though the answer given by the editor was "jonquil." Obviously, even contest editors may err.

The narcissus discussion is a sample of Editor Wister's directness in this new garden book and there is more like it on every page.

Not the least interesting writing in this book is the foreward by the well-loved Liberty Hyde Bailey, dean of all gardeners, whose accomplishments need no eulogy here.

Another intriguing feature is the discussion and diagramming of various geographic areas according to their geological and climatic conditions. Most of us have been frostbitten too often for comfort by blindly following the usual maps.

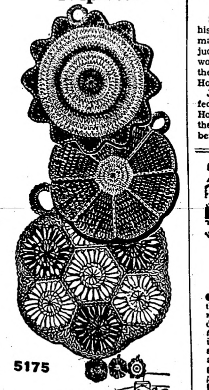
Additional data and measuring qualities have been added to long-established material in making a broader and yet more personal presentation of his problems to the gardener in any given section of the United States and Canada. The net result is the clarification of many heretofore-vague statements.

It would be unfair to other excellent books to say that this is the best garden book yet published. In some ways it excels all others, but still there are other volumes which may contain more information on specific subjects.

Perhaps the way to size up this 1,000-page volume is to say that regardless of whatever other gardening books you own, you need this one too if you seek fresh angles on your favorite hobby.

With its fine cover and paper stock, its 24 photographic pages in full color, its 56 pages of black and white illustrations and more than 100 how-to-do-it pictures, the Woman's Home Companion Garden Book is completely satisfying.

Triplets!



ALL GOOD things come in threes, so they say. This threesome of good-looking crocheted potholders will add a zippy note of color to any town or country summer kitchen. Potholders at top of illustration are of double thickness, crocheted in two colors of silky-looking cotton thread. The whopper-sized holder at bottom is made of thick cotton rug yarn in two colors.

How to help your sick child GET WELL FASTER
... as recommended in the interest of child welfare by
ROSE G. ANDERSON, Ph.D.
Director of The Psychological Service Center, New York

1. The after-effects of your child's illness are often more important than the illness itself. Pampering, catering to whims, oversolicitude teaches a child to dominate through weakness. Such well-meant kindness may prolong his convalescence.

2. You'll be smart to help him amuse himself. Give him something which doesn't require an adult's constant attention. Give him your "Eveready" flashlight... or get him one of his own. If he tires of flashing the beam, or flicking out imaginary signals, then...

3. Show him how to cut designs or figures from stiff paper and how to throw their shadows on the ceiling or wall. Moving the figures will make them dance. Watch his pride in what he's done. Watch him get well faster because he's happier!

Proof!... in the laboratory... in your own flashlight...

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Palestine Trouble Heads for Climax As Arab Nations Prepare to Attack; Vandenberg Gives Warning to Russ

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

CLIMAX:
Palestine

With a clashing of arms and a babble of alarmed voices, events in Palestine appeared to be piling up for another minor but bloody climax in human history.

This particular crisis had its immediate beginning in a savage attack on the Arab city of Jaffa by members of Irgun Zvai Leumi, Jewish underground force. Fact that the Irgunists' foray against Jaffa was made in defiance of orders by Haganah, the regular Jewish militia, carried no weight in the rush of incidents that followed.

From Palestine's coastal plain, site of the neighboring cities of Jaffa (Arab) and Tel Aviv (Jewish), the focal point of the disturbances moved swiftly inland to the holy city of Jerusalem.

Arabs and Jews hastily deployed their on-the-scene forces in preparation for what stacked up to be a major battle for possession of Jerusalem. Facing each other across a scant 200 yards of no-man's land, each side had its eyes fixed on the strategic Alamein camp which the British were evacuating.

But that wasn't all. It soon became apparent that the Arab league nations surrounding Palestine did not intend to stay out of this fight.

Reports were current that six Arab nations had decided to invade the Holy Land with ground, sea and air forces before the British ended their mandate on May 15.

The whole thing was shaping up in the form of a more or less total Arab effort to crush completely the Jewish intention of creating a Zionist state in Palestine.

Worried United Nations delegates, meanwhile, cast about for a means to prevent the inevitable carnage, or at least to preserve the city of Jerusalem.

France pushed its sponsorship of a heavily-armed volunteer U. N. police corps to safeguard Jerusalem. Hint of the make-up of such a force was given in the suggestion that it might include 100 New York police volunteers, but no Russians. This protective army would number from 500 to 800 members.

While the Palestine situation leaped into a frantic state of flux, the United States kept discreetly out of it all in conformation to its recently adopted policy of apparent disinterest to what happens in the Holy Land.

DEFIANCE:
Two Issues

In a surprise speech at a dinner given by Michigan chambers of commerce for the state's congressional delegation, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg served notice on Russia that:

1. The United States may join western Europe in a military alliance against Communist aggression, and

2. "We shall not surrender to Communist conspiracies in the United States."

Thus, the chief Republican proponent of bi-partisan foreign policy split the rind on two issues which, like grapefruit, will come more and more to be in the public eye as this year wears on.

Simply stated, those two issues are: Whether the U. S. should line up militarily alongside the recently formed union of western European nations, and whether the Communist party should be outlawed in this country.

They could become decisive issues in the presidential campaign. Indeed, Harold Stassen already has introduced one of them by coming out bluntly in favor of outlawing Communists in the U. S.

Vandenberg said, "We are suicidal fools if we do not root out and destroy any treason at home which may dream of bringing world revolution to the United States."

The Michigan senator only hinted at a U. S. military alliance with western Europe, but his remarks hardly could be misconstrued.

What Vandenberg didn't say is that while the U. S. has no formal or official role in the union of western European nations, American aid and support, military-wise, of that union almost inevitably is implied.

Whether or not this nation will grant that assurance will come to be a towering question in the public mind soon.

SKY-HIGH:
Bombing

A team of air force and army ordnance men is seeking better methods of hitting pin-point bomb targets from extremely high altitudes, out of reach of most anti-aircraft guns or fighter planes.

This joint organization is conducting most of its secret tests in the California desert at Muroc air base. It's assignment is to carry out research in bombing techniques, particularly at high altitudes.

OUTLOOK
The Dim Peace

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, army chief of staff, was taking a dim view of the possibilities of peace.

In fact, he admitted to the senate armed services committee, the prospect of a war is appreciably greater now than it was three months ago.

Adding forcefully to the pattern of evidence which U. S. armed forces representatives have been constructing to support their requests for a military draft and universal training, Bradley said:

"I think we would be neglecting our duty if we did not try to tell you that we are a little bit more afraid something will happen than we were three months ago when we were talking in terms of reserves."

And he added "we are not so sure" that war might not be looming in the immediate future.

To his testimony Bradley appended this clincher:

"We know that we are all speaking about Russia."

There it was — a responsible appraisal by the chief of staff of where the present talking war between Russia and the U. S. might lead.

What caused General Bradley to think the situation is more critical now than it was three months ago? He didn't say, but there is only one apparent explanation.

The tide of power politics has turned against Russia and is moving in favor of the western democracies. With ERP beginning to channel money and supplies into Europe, the fields most favorable to Communist growth — poverty, hunger and dissatisfaction—are starting to be reclaimed.

As far as getting control of western Europe was concerned, Communists saw their main chance go glimmering when they lost the Italian election. They have, in short, gone beyond the stage where they can carry out territorial acquisitions through political coups.

In order to expand further now, Russia probably would have to apply force, which, in this case, would be the Red army.

And that may be why General Bradley thinks war is more of a likelihood now than it was three months ago.

SMASHER:
For Atoms

To expand further the constantly widening fields of atomic research, a gigantic new cyclotron will be built at the University of California at a total cost of nine million dollars.

In announcing the project the atomic energy commission said the new cyclotron—commonly known as an atom-smasher—would be 20 times more powerful than the 4,900-ton machine currently in operation at the Berkeley institution.

David E. Lilienthal, AEC chairman, provided a hint as to the kind of long range planning for peace the commission is visualizing when he said that the new cyclotron "serves notice to the world that it is the intent of the people of the United States to be pre-eminent in the development of fundamental science of all kinds."

Engineering already is under way on the huge atom-splitter, but it will take five years before it is completed. Conceived as 20 times more powerful than the most powerful cyclotron now operating, it will produce atomic bullets ranging in force from six billion to 10 billion volts.

At Large

Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman has been named by President Truman as ambassador-at-large for the European recovery program. Harriman resigned his cabinet post immediately.

Money Talks

Now an inventor has come up with a check that not only will talk but will scream if it has been forged or tampered with.

Burgess Smith, who used to do legal counterfeiting for the U. S. treasury, claims that his check will identify itself verbally when it is passed through a special machine. And if it has been tampered with it will emit a shrill screech, indicating that it is worthless

Termites and Pecans

Termites usually live in dead wood and most people associate them with wood destruction. However, pecan nursery stock and small trees sometimes are killed by the feeding of termites in the roots. The tree may have its taproot or its branches tunneled until only a shell or the bark remains.

Brushing Woolens

Brush woolens carefully with a firm-bristled brush after each wearing. Open the pleats and brush between them in a straight downward line. Brush into seam lines, under lapels and any other place where there may be rubbing action which will wear out material.

Irish White House

James Hoban, a native of Ireland, who had resided for some time in Charleston, S. C., in 1792 won a prize of $500 offered for the best design for the President's house. Construction began in 1792, but President Adams in 1800 was the first to occupy the mansion.

Auto Snowplow

Hiram Maxim, son of the inventor of the Maxim silencer for guns, has patented a snowplow to be attached to the bumper of an automobile. The attachment is a simple one, requiring no additional equipment to enable an automobile to operate it.

Cooking Fish

Most important thing to remember in cooking fish is that it too often is overcooked. Just enough cooking to enable the flesh to be flaked easily from the bones will leave the fish moist and tender and bring out its delicate flavor.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Is there anything that I could use to fill rather wide cracks which have appeared between baseboard and moulding?

ANSWER: That joint can be closed with a form of moulding called quarter-round. This should be attached not to the baseboard or flooring, but by long nails passing at an angle through the opening between baseboard and flooring and into the timber behind. There will be continual movement in the flooring and baseboard through the seasons, and secured in this manner the joint will remain covered.

QUESTIOIN: Can you tell me how to plaster over plasterboards?

ANSWER: If you mean large sheets of gypsum wallboard (generally known as plasterboard), the kind that comes in four-foot widths and lengths up to 12 feet, such boards cannot be plastered. The joints are filled as directed by the manufacturer, and the surfaces are papered or painted. Plasterboard lath cannot be covered with too thin a plaster coating; at least two coats of plaster are necessary, and three coats would be still better.

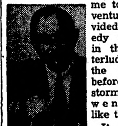
Washington Digest

Case of the Nazi Reception, Or Misleading Propaganda

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—Last month there was a memorandum on my desk from the department of the army addressed to "all former war correspondents, subject: Army Day, 1948," It suggested that perhaps I had a war story that stood out in my mind that I would like to relate as an Army Day feature. The memorandum didn't state which war was preferred, if any, but I supposed that it didn't matter so long as it wasn't the next one.

I reported the landing on the Normandy beaches, the Battle of the Bulge and many of the other important events of the last war—from a microphone in Washington; my connection with World War I was less vicarious; my experiences during earlier conflicts such as San Juan, Gettysburg, Chapultepec, Yorktown and Hastings are a little hazy.



Therefore I decided that the department of the army might permit me to relate an adventure which provided a little comedy relief in 1939, in the nervous interlude, known as the "phony war," before the real storm broke. It went something like this:

It happened at Wesermuende, the German air and naval base, shortly after Britain and France had declared war on Germany. America correspondents still had considerable freedom, and I had managed to wrangle permission to interview the first British fliers shot down by the Germans. I did, but that isn't this story.

For all the careful German preparations for war, there was still a certain amount of confusion in the office of propaganda under the highly efficient father of lies, Dr. Goebbels, but I managed to get the use of a German army transport plane to fly me (with a German radio man) from Berlin to Wesermuende.

The war was roaring westward into Poland and the great Tempelhof airfield in Berlin was all but deserted when we arrived before dawn and were escorted with alacrity, and not a little wonderment, to our transport which already was warming up. We had been up all night and my colleague immediately fell asleep on a pile of parachute equipment. As soon as dawn broke, I busied myself watching the anti-aircraft batteries in the fields surrounding Berlin, gun pits in fields surrounded by complacent, cud-chewing cows who were, like the rest of the bemused population, unaware of what the Fuehrer was about to bring down on them.

For some reason we flew low, almost scratching our wings on the church steeples. At last my companion awoke. We were approaching the airfield. It was a lively spot. As we drew nearer, we could see a detachment of marines which came to attention as we approached. A half dozen staff cars were drawn up in a semi-circle, balanced by bluejackets and ground personnel of the air force.

"We're lucky," my companion remarked; "some big brass must be coming, we'll see a parade." No other plane was visible though, as we circled a couple of times over the docks, thick with ships including the long-lost Europa, back on her dash from Murmansk. Finally we landed a couple of yards from the military formation which by now was drawn up at attention. We were a little embarrassed, for we were in plain sight of the imposing array, and were afraid we might suddenly bump into the visiting dignitary—and we were hatless and unshaven. I let my companion go ahead. There was no place to go, however, but in the direction of the naval detachment and their commanding officer. It later developed he was the commander of the base, a tall, slim, correct naval officer, perhaps a little nervous, though we were too nervous ourselves to realize it at the moment.

We advanced, like pups approaching a porcupine. A command rang out. The troops snapped to present arms, the officer saluted and drew a manuscript from his tunic, something new to me in military procedure—all I could think of was a painting of General Washington reading a message to his troops (and I always had thought that was a flight of the artist's fancy).

The officer began reading—it was a message of welcome all right. Finally, my companion (he was half-English, which may explain his fortitude) interrupted: "There must be some mistake. We are two radio correspondents."

The commander bowed, looked abashed, glanced over our heads toward the plane.

"But where are the other gentlemen?" he wanted to know.

"There are just two of us," we replied.

"But the minister of propaganda? Who is representing him? We were notified by the department — a special plane — the truck for the baggage—"

We explained briefly, and waited for the skies to fall. They didn't. The officer continued his speech without even dropping his monocle —just to be sure—editing it slightly to make it apply as he went. There was no question that he thought we were going to be, certainly OUGHT to be Goebbels.

The formation melted away, the truck which had been requested to transport sound equipment started to load, all but one of the staff cars slunk away. There was only one red face, the airforce commander's, and he felt not embarrassment, but rage. This was a purely military field and I had held up the German war effort for half a morning, thus contributing my bit to Allied victory even before America was in the war.

For the rest, the only significant memory, except for my interview with those British boys, was the questioning by the German officers. Obviously they didn't share the complacent assurances of victory of the Nazi higher-ups—they remembered World War I.

Today the greatest danger to the peace is the possibility that the will, the purpose, the power of the United States will not be understood in time by the Russian command—that they will fail to recognize the risk of self-annihilation they are taking in their "cold war," as the Kaiser and Hitler failed to realize it.

Roses, But Never A Spray of Yew

There are many good garden books, and I for one had about come to the conclusion that the final word on gardening had been written, when along came the Woman's Home Companion Garden Book (P. F. Collier and Son corporation, publisher, New York City) with many new angles. Edited by John C. Wister, director of the Arthur Hoyt Scott horticultural foundation, Swarthmore college, this book speaks with authority.

"It is correct," it states on page 472, "to speak of narcissus, and also correct to use the English term daffodil for all species and varieties of narcissus. There is confusion about this, a popular impression being that daffodils are the yellow kind, and narcissus the white kinds. There also has been confusion about the name jonquil. All the daffodils of the jonquil group are distinguished by their narrow, garlic-like foliage and by their characteristic bright yellow color, which is the same shade throughout the flower."

All of this interested me mightily as I had just been studying a photograph of a clump of narcissus in a popular magazine's "name this picture" contest. The leaves on the plant shown were broad, though the answer given by the editor was "jonquil." Obviously, even contest editors may err.

The narcissus discussion is a sample of Editor Wister's directness in this new garden book and there is more like it on every page.

Not the least interesting writing in this book is the foreward by the well-loved Liberty Hyde Bailey, dean of all gardeners, whose accomplishments need no eulogy here.

Another intriguing feature is the discussion and diagramming of various geographic areas according to their geological and climatic conditions. Most of us have been frostbitten too often for comfort by blindly following the usual maps.

Additional data and measuring qualities have been added to long-established material in making a broader and yet more personal presentation of his problems to the gardener in any given section of the United States and Canada. The net result is the clarification of many heretofore-vague statements.

It would be unfair to other excellent books to say that this is the best garden book yet published. In some ways it excels all others, but still there are other volumes which may contain more information on specific subjects.

Perhaps the way to size up this 1,000-page volume is to say that regardless of whatever other gardening books you own, you need this one too if you seek fresh angles on your favorite hobby.

With its fine cover and paper stock, its 24 photographic pages in full color, its 56 pages of black and white illustrations and more than 100 how-to-do-it pictures, the Woman's Home Companion Garden Book is completely satisfying.

Grow Perennial Flowers From Seed

You can save considerable garden money and add new zest to your gardening by growing your own perennial flowers from seed. The best quality seeds cost only a few cents a packet and with simple care will produce scores of plants to bring color and beauty to the garden for years to come. Most perennials grown from seed bloom the second year after sowing.

Seed should be started at about the same time as that of the annuals, such as zinnias and marigolds. The secret of success is to get the seedlings to transplanting size early enough so that when set in their permanent places in garden or border, they will get a good root-hold before cold weather comes on.

A specially prepared seed bed or seed box is best for starting perennial seeds. A seed bed can be easily prepared by knocking the bottom out of a good-sized shallow wooden box and sinking the sides into the ground. The top should be about two or three inches above the surface. Use finely prepared, crumbly garden loam containing plenty of humus. It is important to locate the seed bed where it will be sheltered from strong winds and from sunlight during the hottest part of the day. A seed box or flat may also be used, with holes bored in the bottom for drainage. This has the advantage of being movable to sheltered locations when necessary.

Some perennial seeds are very small. Mix them with sand so that they will not be sown too thickly in the row and merely press them into the soil instead of covering them. Larger seeds need a shallow covering of soil. Firm the soil down on them so that they will make immediate contact with the moisture and plant food. Keep the soil moist but not wet until the seeds sprout. Some gardeners spread damp burlap over the surface to furnish needed moisture, removing it at the first sign of sprouting.

Here are a number of perennials that beginners can start from seed with almost sure success: Columbine, gaillardia, coreopsis, hollyhock, painted daisy, sweet william, hardy pinks, hardy alyscum, and the violas.

Perennial seeds usually take somewhat longer to germinate than those of annual flowers. Don't be discouraged if the tiny sprouts do not show themselves for two or three weeks after the seed is sown.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Jeb Had the Folks in Stitches!

At the Friday Night Social, Jeb Crowell had the audience in stitches—doing a take-off on the blustering character who belittles everybody and everything that isn't from his own home town.

Well, we can laugh at that sort of character because from where I sit, Americans are just the opposite. We like to boast a bit perhaps, about the paint job on the new barn, or the missus' style of cooking—but we aren't intolerant of people who don't think or act exactly the same way we do.

In our town, for instance: Some folks like band concerts, others don't—some families serve beer with dinner, others, buttermilk—and as for politics, there's plenty of healthy disagreement.

But when it comes to denying folks the right to think or act as they choose ... no, we're like you —we don't believe in it, whether it goes for serving beer, or speaking one's mind on public affairs.

"Best Way to Market"

THAT'S what Fred Ulman, Left, Janesville (Minn.) Creamery Association operator, and A. A. Wilson, owner-patron, say about Land O'Lakes. "We get the highest possible returns," they agree, by sharing in proceeds and savings at three levels—manufacture, distribution and sales. Mr. Ulman appreciates how Land O'Lakes keeps tab on markets, relieves him of collecting. Mr. Wilson, 27 years a Land O'Lakes member, adds: "With Land O'Lakes, we farmers have a voice in managing our own organization. We get fair treatment—and we certainly get more money."

Get Trees For Planting

5,000 maple, ash and elm arrived here this week for free distribution to anyone wishing to plant trees.

The trees being furnished by the Division of Game and Fish this year are for the purpose of improving game habitat or cover controlling soil erosion, protection of watersheds or streams, or tree planting projects for any game and fish improvement. It is hoped that an increased volume of both feed and cover plants will be available next year and in future years.

Trees may be planted on lands under the control of any governmental unit, such as highway right-of-ways, and state, county, city, school or township lands, provided officials in charge of such lands approve of the planting. Trees may be planted on private lands only after an easement has been obtained from the owner or the one in control of the land.

For further details see Louis Sagstuen at the store.

There are about 1000 left so if you want some get them now.

Rhubarb For A Good Dessert

There are many ways to make the best uses of your rhubarb patch. One excellent way is to combine it with pineapple, raspberries and strawberries.

The pleasant tang of rhubarb makes it a favorite for summer eating. Rhubarb betty is an easy and satisfying dessert. Combine 1 cup sugar, ½ cup flour and ¼ cup butter or less. Blend thoroughly and sprinkle over the top of a baking dish that has been filled with a quart of cut up rhubarb. Or arrange in layers with the flour mixture. A dash of nutmeg or cinnamon may be added. Bake about 45 minutes in a 350 degree oven.

There's nothing easier to freeze than rhubard. Just wash and cut it up, wrap in moisture-vapor-proof locker paper and heat seal or close with locker tape. Next winter you'll appreciate having fresh rhubarb.

There's nothing more refreshing than freshly cooked rhubarb sauce. Baked rhubarb sauce is especially good. After washing and cutting up the rhubarb- dont peel it - put in a baking dish, cover tightly and bake until tender-about 20 to 30 minutes. Add sugar either before or after baking. No water is necessary, but many people think a pinch of salt helps bring out the flavor.

The new discovery that may have some influence in protecting teeth against erosion by acids may make this springtime pie and sauce favorites for year round consumption and give added popularity to rhubarb juice.

To make a rhubarb drink, cook rhubarb till the juice flows freely Strain thru a jelly bag, reheat and can the same as any firuit juices of milder favor.

Well-Fed Plants Better Fitted to Combat Diseases

CHICAGO — Healthy plants, like healthy humans, are better equipped to resist disease and insect attacks than are undernourished ones, according to a statement made public by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Diseases, insects and parasites find it harder to attack healthy plants. Well fed plants can often outgrow the insect and parasite damage," the statement points out.

"Most people think of soil fertility only in terms of increased crop yields. But that is not the whole story. Fertile soil into which plants can send their roots deeper for plant food and water, promotes a healthier, sturdier growth.

"Many soils, once fertile, have been worn out through overcropping and misuse.

"But any farmer can rebuild his soil's fertility and crop producing ability by good management methods. He can get bigger yields per acre through the use of mixed fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, as needed. He can slow down the water runoff and plant food losses through contour farming. He can build the soil structure by growing deep-rooted legumes which open the soil and put organic matter down deep."

Poll On Religion and Schools

The decision of the U. S. Supreme court barring religious instruction in public schools is applauded by a majority of Minnesotans who know about the court's ruling, the Minnesota Poll finds. At the same time, more than three-fourths of the state's adults want to see continued the present "released time" program by which children are enabled to receive religious instruction OUTSIDE the schools.

Interviewers who talked with a representative cross-section of Minnesotans 21 years of age and older found 61 percent have heard or read of the court decision. Of that group, more than two in every three say they approve of the ruling.

Another question was put to all persons interviewed: "In Minnesota, children in the public schools may be released from class work for three hours each week, if their parents request it, so that the children may attend religious classes outside of the schools. The children are not required to attend such classes. What do you think of the Minnesota plan - do you think that it should or should not be continued? Minnesotans say: Should be, 79 per cent; should not be, 16 percent; no opinion, 5 per cent.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

House Group Approves Measure To Draft Men into Armed Forces; Hope for Palestine Agreement Ebbs

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DRAFT BILL:
On the Way

Yielding to the pressure of the times, congress was putting its hand gingerly to the business of passing a selective service act which would give the nation's armed forces a total manpower of slightly more than two million in two years.

The house armed services committee had approved the measure, after hearing Defense Secretary James Forrestal term it an "excellent" one, and passed it on to the floor of the house for debate.

Thus, for the first time since before the war, congress was facing squarely the momentous issue of a national draft. That this was happening during the hair-trigger days of an election year only served to underline the apparent urgency of the matter.

As approved by the armed services committee, the bill would:

1. Raise total authorized manpower of the armed forces to 2,005,882—army 837,000, air force 502,000, navy and marine corps 666,882.
2. Require registration of men from 18 through 30, with those from 19 through 25 liable for two years' service.
3. Exempt most veterans from further service, but those under 31 would have to register.
4. Allow seizure of industrial plants by the government if they refused to give top priorities to armament orders.

As it stood, the draft plan was conceded to have a good chance of passage at this session of congress. But complications were being threatened by the senate armed services committee which seemed inclined to combine a universal military training measure with the draft bill.

The committee was waiting for Army Secretary Kenneth Royall to recommend details of a bill to call 161,000 18-year-olds for a year's training. They would be taken in addition to men procured through the draft.

As a combination, that didn't look so good to many Republicans. Rep. Walter G. Andrews (Rep., N. Y.), chairman of the house armed service committee, called the idea "utterly foolish, inconceivable and not called for."

OLEO TAX:
Fight Ahead

One of the most pressing problems members of congress have had to decide this year is whether their political bread is spread with butter or oleomargarine.

It is further complicated by the fact that they might, in choosing one or the other, be letting the gravy get away from them.

For good or ill, however, the house of representatives made its decision. It passed by a vote of 260 to 106 a bill to repeal all federal oleomargarine taxes which have been on the books for 62 years.

Those taxes are itemized as follows: 10 cents a pound on colored oleo, 1/4 cent a pound on uncolored, $600 a year on manufacturers, $480 on wholesalers of colored oleo, $200 on wholesalers of the uncolored product, $48 on retailers of colored oleo and $6 on retailers of uncolored.

Even if the federal taxes were repealed, it still would be against the law to sell colored oleo in 20 states.

Nevertheless, the house had rid itself of the matter and now it was up to the senate, where a battle royal was in prospect.

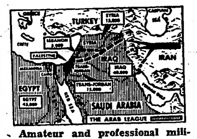
Reason the oleo tax issue has a stiff fight ahead in the senate is that senators are elected by voters of entire states, rather than by voters of districts within the states as are most representatives.

The result, in this case, is a split in the sentiment of constituents of many senators.

For example, big northern states such as Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio, are composed of consumer cities and producer farms. The country districts include dairy farmers and soy bean growers. Consumers in cities want repeal of the taxes, and so do the soy bean men whose product is used in manufacture of oleo. The dairy farmers, naturally, want the tax to remain.

The dairy interests are strong. Their supporters in congress have been able to retain the oleo tax by the simple process of shelving any repeal bills in committee. It happened to the current bill in the house agricultural committee, but a petition circulated among house members forced the bill on to the floor where it was approved.

Clouds in the East



Amateur and professional military experts now are weighing the pros and cons of "war" in the Holy Land. Palestine is completely encircled by Arab states except for its Mediterranean coastline. Numerals indicate estimated fighting strength of the various Arab states. Jewish forces in Palestine are said to number about 75,000.

JERUSALEM:
Confused

Time was running out in Palestine, and with it the hope for averting a Jewish-Arab civil war for possession of Jerusalem.

In the waning days before Great Britain removed her troops from the Holy Land upon expiration of the British mandate on May 15, Palestine had become a savagely confused, moribund state.

Bitterly, the United Nations trusteeship council virtually abandoned its efforts to devise an effective plan to safeguard Jerusalem from ravishment by the warring factions. Delegates could not hit upon a scheme that could be enforced.

Nor was any Arab-Jewish agreement in sight which might result in a truce necessary to give any U. N. plan a chance. Like a little boy watching his father trying to get his kite out of a tree, the council looked hopefully to Jerusalem where the Red Cross was doing its best to bring a halt to the fighting.

As far as the threatened invasion of Palestine by neighboring Arab states was concerned, no one seemed able to sum up the situation accurately.

Jews were insisting, in the face of denials, that Syrian and Lebanese armies had invaded northern Palestine, and the British were reported to have rushed troops back into the country to deal with what they called a "seriously deteriorated" situation.

Still an unknown factor in the rapidly climaxing events was wily old King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan. Commander of the finest army in Arabia, the spike-helmeted Arab Legion, he had been talking big about invading Palestine from the East. He had been talking, too, about making himself king of Palestine. His ambition is a Middle East amalgam of states that would be in the nature of a greater Syria.

Experts were not discounting the role Abdullah and his power-politicking could play in the drama. In the end he could turn out to be the catalytic agent that might bring the unregenerate events in Palestine to a reasonable, if not a happy, conclusion.

COVENANTS:
Just Paper

In a decision which may produce more extensive reaction than any designed civil rights legislative program, the U. S. supreme court handed down a decision that, in effect, outlaws so-called restrictive covenants which bar racial or religious minorities from buying or occupying property in many areas throughout the country.

Declaring the decision, Chief Justice Fred Vinson held that enforcement of restrictive covenants by state or federal courts was a violation of the 14th amendment.

That amendment, adopted in 1868, reads in part: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States . . . nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

The supreme court's decision did not declare that restrictive covenants, as such, are violations of the constitution; but by ruling that it is unconstitutional for the courts to enforce the covenants it reduced them, legally, to mere scraps of paper.

For the most part, covenants are agreements entered upon by real estate promoters and buyers of land or homes. Purchasers agree not to sell their land or homes to persons barred by the covenant, terms of the agreement running from an average of 25 or 50 years to "perpetuity."

GOLD BRICKS HIGHER

Inflation Hits Swindler, Victims

Inflation has hit the swindler and his victims, just like everybody else in the postwar world.

Cost of being rooked by various popular frauds and rackets has gone up in proportion to the rise in the swindlers' living costs, a report by the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance company reveals.

Professional charity solicitors, who take 50 to 90 per cent of the public's donations before turning over the balance to the organization in whose name they operate, now boldly ask donations of $10 and $25 instead of the $2 to $5 at prewar scale.

Their "benefit dance" tickets now cost $2 each, often more, against 50 cents to a dollar in prewar days.

Voluntary Help Can Save Europe's Dying Children

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—What to do until the doctor comes.

Pretty important to know that. Pretty important to be willing and able to do it. There are 230 million children in this world today who need first aid. The European recovery plan (E.C.A.) will help a lot of these children who have the stamina to outlive the ugly interim period when, dirty, almost naked, they must roam the countryside or live in cellars and hovels, hungry and starving.

But the E.C.A. is a huge undertaking, and like all great bodies, it moves slowly. Anyhow, its chief purpose is to provide the means to restore normal conditions to the stricken areas of Europe. It is largely indirect aid, not gauged to individual cases.

Meanwhile thousands upon thousands of these children will die. Some will be saved by individual help — your help. To make that help effective the many humanitarian organizations which seek to save as many young lives as possible have been merged into one great Crusade for Children. Local groups are organizing in the cities. In the rural districts, the Farm Grange, Farm Bureau federation, Farmers' Union, Council for Farm Cooperatives, U.S. department of agriculture and other groups are furthering the movement.

To anyone who has seen this tortured young generation, the effect is as staggering as the sight of a battlefield. To a young soldier, there is no shock like the sight of your first dead comrade. That still form, wearing the same uniform you wear, lying crushed against the earth. To me, the shock of the sight of European children moving with the shadow of a living death upon them was a terrible thing too.

I can remember getting off a train in what once had been one of the great railway stations of Europe — rubble ground into black mud, the ghastly smell of those buried deep under the foundations of ruined homes and shelters. Military police, hardened to the sights around them, walked back and forth. In the sinister shadows of the ruins the ghostly movement of little wraiths slipping in and out of sight, bent on any mission, no matter how fair or foul, that would win some chocolate, a piece of K-ration, a cigarette that might be traded for some bit of food.

No matter what the sins of the fathers, they could not be great enough to justify the punishment inflicted on these children. There is only one way their bodies and their souls can be saved. That is through the groups which are supported by individual donations, until economic life is restored to a degree of normalcy when society can be rebuilt, broken homes mended and the institutions which can care for the homeless put into operation as a part of a healthy community existence.

Government aid, like E.C.A., cannot establish direct contact with the individual. It is a matter of arrangements drawn up between nations. It means dollar credits which make it possible for the receiving nations to buy supplies.

Some of this money, of course, goes into food. But it takes time for the machinery to get into operation, and even after it is in operation, it is inadequate to satisfy the needs of the whole people. Much of the assistance goes into material things such as the reconstruction of factories, replacement and modernization of tools, machinery and agricultural supplies.

Frequently, supplies of such simple things as rakes and shovels are so short that farms can't be worked until they are furnished. Later they will be manufactured. But that means machinery for the factories comes first.

This tiny child, long in need of medical aid, is now in a hospital supported by the U.N. International Children's Emergency Fund. Funds are being raised through the Crusade for Children of American Overseas Aid-United Nations Appeal for Children.

Crusade for Children is a well-organized private effort which has the backing and cooperation of the United Nations, and the sponsorship and approval of the government from the President down.

It provides direct citizen-to-citizen aid which is administered carefully with experienced personnel on the scene — personnel which cuts red tape and is free from many of the rules, regulations and restrictions which a government necessarily must employ. As a matter of fact, when the European recovery plan was first drawn up, it was contemplated that voluntary private aid would supplement it.

As an example of the type of thing Crusade for Children is designed to further: In Europe at present, there are some 50,000 distributing points, such as schools, child clinics and hospitals serviced by the International Children's Emergency Fund of the United Nations.

At schools and child centers, particularly through dried milk, ICEF makes a supplementary contribution to the noon meal, which costs the fund about three and a half cents per child. The entire meal costs only seven cents per child. One hundred dollars provides 7,500 hungry, undernourished children one glass of milk each at every meal. But because of limited funds, ICEF is feeding only four million of Europe's 30 million hungry children.

An Austrian orphan waits on snow-covered steps for the daily meal provided for him by the United Nations' International Children's Emergency Fund. He is one of millions who would starve without this vital service.

Here are some of the sickening facts, carefully collected and checked by United Nations authorities:

Infant mortality in Europe and Asia has jumped from 40 deaths per 1,000 live births to as high as 330 deaths per 1,000 — compared with the United States rate of 38.3 per 1,000.

Tuberculosis has doubled in many areas, especially among children. Lack of food has vastly increased such diseases as rickets, scurvy and pellagra.

Physical examinations in one zone (of Europe) showed that boys 14 years of age are three inches shorter than boys of the same age four years ago. This is the direct result of malnutrition.

In some areas half the physicians were killed; teachers, nurses and those trained in child care are lacking.

I have sat in the office of a German physician — one room left livable in a bombed house, windows boarded up to replace the smashed glass, operating room, consultation office, bedroom, living room, all together with an endless line of patients with nothing to pay for the doctor's services which would buy anything for the doctor. That doctor told me that because of the hopeless fate of children, abortions were the rule rather than the exception, with sickness and death as the result.

Not the government, but private, voluntary agencies can alleviate these conditions. One may feel that Europe has brought much of its anguish upon itself, but it is not the children who are to blame.

As Secretary of State Marshall said: "Voluntary aid supplements the general relief which only governments can provide. It affords the things and services, including spiritual comfort, needed by the weakest of the war victims. . . ."

* * *

Secretary of State Marshall has warned South American countries that there will be no Marshall Plan for them. It appears that they either must go out and obtain private financing or work up a good Communist threat to share in Uncle Sam's largesse.

* * *

A modern president spends more effort trying to get what he wants into the papers and on the air than in finding out what's there already.

LOOKING AHEAD

BY GEORGE S. BENSON

President—Harding College Searcy, Arkansas

WHY SAVE MONEY?

In 1776 a Scotchman named Matthew Boulton risked $200,000 of his savings to help James Watt develop a new device known as a steam engine. In 1948, the estimated capital expenditures of the nation's chief railroads (the railroads grew because of Watt's invention, though now steam is not the only motive power) approaches one billion dollars! Our Class 1 railroads expect to spend $319,958,000 during this quarter of 1948.

How our nation finances its industry is an interesting story. The American way of doing this explains the high standard of living we enjoy today. Not all nations do it as we do. In some countries everything is owned by the government. The government does everything. Of course the people foot the bill, but in these totalitarian countries rewards never come. In America anyone has the opportunity of investing and sharing in the progress of industry.

You May Share

Critics of "capitalism", who say that government is the only agency big enough to do things that have to be done in a progressive economy, really miss some important points. They just don't know their American system. Did you know that over fifty million Americans pool their savings to provide the tools for workers? Perhaps you are one of them. These men and women have saved up something for a "rainy day", and, meantime, have invested it.

Perhaps you have a share in industry you did not know about. If you have life insurance, it is quite likely that your insurance company invests the premiums you pay to provide tools for industry. Savings banks likewise invest deposits. In this way, the "capital" funds that our people own and invest actually turn the wheels of industry.

Unfettered Growth

Then too, industry itself saves and reinvests. Every live company or business will find it advisable to take a portion of its income and "plow it back under" right in the business. Of money that every industry pays out "for use of tools", only a comparatively small amount goes to the thrifty people who really own the tools. Most of it goes to buy the actual tools. Industry has constant need for investments for expansion and new facilities.

I say, let the people provide the savings to make our industry grow and grow. That, way there's no ceiling on progress. No limit to the standard of living. Let us replace old-models, invent new machines, develop new methods. Our population is growing, and our needs will be tremendous in the future. We can continue to be great consumers, if we keep a system that permits us to be great producers.

Right now, there is an important reason why we should save, and save to invest. We must stop adding dollars that could be savings to the inflation stream, bidding up prices and damaging our economy. The railroads represent just one industry that is calling for capital. There are many other industries in which savings may be put to work. Under the American system, there will continue to be more jobs, more pay, and more security as well as opportunity for all.

First Parachute

The first successful use of a parachute in a descent from a moving aeroplane was made by a Captain Berry in 1912 in St. Louis, Mo., according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Some use was made of parachutes by captive balloon observers during World War I but aviators in that war did not use them until the [illegible] of the fighting.

Take Your Choice, Neighbor!

The missus—who writes our Woman's Column in the Clarion under the name of "Nancy Gale"—gets letters about recipes, advice on etiquette, home management, etc.

One letter she got last week was about a recipe she published for Welsh Rarebit—made with tart cheese, Worcestershire, and a cup of sparkling tangy beer. "Turned out great," says her correspondent. "But you didn't mention what beverage to serve with it. Should I serve beer? Cider? Iced tea?"

The missus' answer was simply:

"Any beverage your guests prefer. You don't have to serve cider—any more than you have to serve beer ... but it's often courteous to let guests have a choice."

From where I sit, that simple answer applies to more items than Welsh Rarebit. In a world where everyone has different tastes and ideas—we should recognize those differences—and never deny the right of choice to anyone!

Lester Green, gardener, has found a way to fool cutworms. Before he sets out tomato plants he paints about fifty iron spikes with tomato juice and sticks them in the ground. After chewing on the spikes for a week the cutworm's cutter is so dull it can't cut off a plant. Then Lester sets out his tomatoes and the plants all live so he saves money to buy extra War Bonds.

Garden 'Greens' Can Be Continuous

Plenty of leafy vegetables, raw and cooked, are necessary in the diet of both children and grownups in order to promote vigor and well-being. In a home garden they can be continuous for many months if various kinds are grown.

Leaf lettuce is one of the first green things to appear. The young leaves can be picked for the table when only a couple of inches in length while the smaller inner leaves are left to grow. The same is true of spinach; the tender new leaves are as good raw as cooked when chopped and served with oil and vinegar dressing. Or, treat them the same as "wilted lettuce" by pouring over them a mixture of hot bacon fat, vinegar, and bits of cooked bacon. To vary the flavor of these greens, add a small amount of peppergrass. The frilled curly foliage of this upland cress is as easy to grow as lettuce.

For long season greens swiss chard is a winner. No leafy vegetable stands hot weather better. The outer leaves should be kept picked, the inner ones left to continue growing, and the result will be tender, brittle stalks and leaves for a long time.

Of the numerous root tops used as greens, beet, mustard, and turnip are increasingly popular. Like all vegetables they are best when young. Mustard and turnip particularly should be used for greens only in the early stages. The tops of mustard and turnip combined are appetizing—a favorite of grandmother's day.

By sowing seed of kale in spring or summer in the North and August to October in the South, fresh greens can be picked from the garden even after the coming of frost and light snow. In fact, some frost improves the texture and flavor of kale, making it a real treat for late autumn and winter meals. Dwarf Curled Kale is one of the best varieties for home growing.

Dr. B. B. Borreson of Thief River Falls in discussing the tuberculosis problem said "We do not speak of tuberculosis control any longer, but rather in terms of eradication."

Dr. Hilbert Mark, Director of the Division of Tuberculosis, Minnesota Department of Health was the main speaker of the evening."

"We the people now have an opportunity to help in the figh against tuberculosis," he said. "By having an X-ray to find out if our lungs are healthy, we help ourselves and our community. Most of us learn that there is no evidence of Tuberculosis or other pathology. But if an abnormal condition is present we help ourselves by receiving treatment. If we have TB, we help others by taking precautions to avoid spreading the germs.

"Once every case of tuberculosis has been found and is reeiving treatment," the speaker concluded," we will be well on the way to wiping out this disease."

Emelia Wartenberg Passes

Funeral services for Miss Emilie Wartenberg were held at the First Lutheran church in Middle River on Tuesday with [illegible] Korshavn officiating.

Emelie Augusta Wartenberg was born November 24th, 1882 in Salletin, Pommern, Germany. In 1883 she came with her parents to the United States and they settled at Paynesville, Stearns County, Minnesota. In 1888 they came to Marshall County, where they settled on a homestead in Cedar Township where she resided until her sudden passing on May 21st at the age of 65 years, 5 months and 27 days. She leaves to mourn her passing four sisters, namely Martha, Mrs. Geo. Gusa of Holt Township; Elizabeth, Amanda and Josephine at home also two brothers Wilhelm and Anton at home.

Her parents, three sisters and four brothers preceeded her in death.

Interment was made in the family plot in the Evangelical Cemetery in Cedar Township. Pallbearers were Herbert Johnson, Reuben Kranz, Floyd Tanner, Emmet Wagner, Adolph Klenk and Albert Wagner. Two vocal duets were sung by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blom accompanied by Mrs. E. D. Bakken.

Arrangements were made by Carlson Funeral Homes.

Mrs. R. Sagstuen Given Shower

Relatives and friends gathered at the Ray Sagstuen home on Wednesday evening to give Mrs. Ray Sagstuen a parcel shower. She received many lovely gifts. From out of town were Mrs. Eddy Henning and Jeanell and Mrs Thea Iverson of Thief Lake, Mrs Ben Lardy of St. Hilaire, Mrs. M. Magnuson, Mrs. Orris Johnson, and Mrs. J. S. Leiran of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Yonke moved out to the Yonke farm south of Holt and Mr and Mrs. Denny Inman moved into the apartment they vacated in the Hagberg residence.

Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Erickson made a trip to Moorhead last week on business. The Ericksons have a nice farm near Moorhead and they reported that seeding was almost completed there.

Ream Grapefruit

You can squeeze large grapefruit on an ordinary orange juice reamer if you cut the fruit in half lengthwise (rather than cross wise), halve again, squeeze each quarter on reamer, pressing cut side against point of juicer. Smaller grapefruit can be cut in halves like oranges, juiced on regular reamer.

JUST ROUTINE TACTICS

The "good" Communist is sworn to lie. (Unfortunately, all the liars are not in Russit, nor even in the Communist party in this country. Life would be much more simple if they were.) However, among our so-called liberals, and even the fellow-travelers there are those who are waking up to the fact that disdain for plain old honesty and integrity is one of the chief characteristics of Communism. I know only one answer to the problem of the lie, and that is; truth.

If there were only one Communist in the world folks with truth in their lives could isolate him easily enough. But when you admit the tactics of lying into international relationships, things begin to get complicated. It is indeed a real prolem to deal with nations which lack moral integrity, and my sympathies go out to our statesmen who have to meet the Communists on international issues.

Nothing On Merit

To illustrate. Shortly after President Truman's message to Congress on European recovery, the Moscow radio announced: "The essence of the Marshall Plan is war." Marshall, the radio said, was out chiefly to assist American monopolies. Marshall was called the "intimate friend of Wall Street big wigs." It seems that to represent Secretary of State Marshall as imperialist, monopolist, oppressor, and warmonger is just routine Communist tactics.

Secretary Marshall is not an imperialist and he is not trying to conduct a program in Europe in the interest of American monopolies, and so on, which fact eeryone knows. Even the Russians who were saying those things knew the statements were untrue. Their method of defeating the Marshall Plan at that time was to misrepresent it. They didn't dare criticise it on its merits.

See the Methods

These statements were designed, of course, for the American public. To the American public this particular incident was perhaps of little importance in itself. However, it is useful in demonstrating the tactics used by Communists in America for several decades. These men knew at the start it would not be easy to undermine the American day of life. They realized their best method was to cause dissension and friction among the groups in America.

The Communists apparently decided that the easiest way to create this friction would be to set labor and industry against each other. To this end they began picking out American industrialists and calling them profiteers and capitalists, disinterested in the welfare of the worker. They also misrepresented the amount of profits, until many people think industrialists make ten times the profit actually made.

We can see quickly the absurdity of attacks on Secretary Marshall. But perhaps we have been slower to see the lies and misrepresentations used right here in our country against our own people. Our industrialists have worked unceasingly, along with labor, to help raise our standard of living. Only in America do the rank and file enjoy cars, radios, telephones, refrigerators and hundreds of other luxuries. Let's keep our thinking straight, despite Communist tactics.

T. B. Folden, Pioneer, Called

The community was saddened to hear of the death of T. B. Folden on Tuesday evening. He was 79 years old and loved and respected by the entire community. Funeral services will be held on Monday, May 31, at 1:30 p. m. from the Evangelical Free Church. Complete obituary will be published next week.

With Our Holt High School Students at Newfolden

Graduation was held last night, with Holt students taking many honors. Shirley Larson was Salutatorian with an average mark of 95.372, less than one-tenth percent lower than the highest average of the class. On the honor roll also were Doris Voth, Marion Sorum, and JoAnn Benitt. Lenore Hall is the president of the class.

The following Holt students will receive their diplomas:

Card of Thanks

I wish to take this means of expressing sincere thanks to those who has visited me while I have been ill, and for all the cards and flowers sent me. Also thanks for the birthday party, cash purse and gifts given me on Sunday. Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen.

Two deals were consumated last week whereby Orvis Benitt became the owner of the Alfred Anderson farm and Tony Kaske the Chenill farm. The Kaske family will move there after fixing up the place.

The tradgedy which occurred on the Lindstrom farm located near the Apple store west of Newfolden is the saddest ever having taken place in this area. Apparently insane, Clarence Lindstrom murdered his mother and grandmother and then going into Warren to report it to the sheriff. A sister escaped and was found on the farm by sheriff Toftner in a mentally dearranged condition.

Gilbert and John Erickson and Joey Garthus, whose birthdays were on Thursday, had a birthday party at the Erickson home. Mrs. Johnnie Nelson was also guest.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

It's Leap Year, Girls!

First girl in our town to "get her man" on Leap Year was the Cuppers' daughter, Jane, who wed Bill Webster's boy last Saturday.

When I asked Bill Jr. if it was true that Janey really did the proposing, Bill said: No, but she made it plain she'd make an ideal wife. Instead of looking for diversion or excitement every evening, she was content to chat beside the fire.

"I could plainly see," says Bill, "that we'd really have a happy home life—which is just exactly what I want from marriage."

I know it's usual for older folks to shake their heads over the younger generation. (It's gone on for hundreds of years, now.)

But from where I sit, young people of marrying age today are every bit as commendable as their elders were—in their temperance (a glass of beer for instance), tolerance, and common sense. So to Jane and Bill—the best of luck!

Makers of History—

On Memorial Day we pay homage to the heroes of the past. And we take thought of our own past in carrying on their work.

The influence of great men on history is important. But it is the common folks, sometimes the humblest; mothers and fathers; the ordinary folks of this work-a-day world — who really shape fundamental human destiny.

So we are all writing history every day. May our work be worthy of the heritage of these whose memories we revere.

Financial War Loss

Before the war, half the cost of Britain's imports was met by invisible exports, including income from overseas investments, shipping and insurance. During the war, Britain had to sell a major part of her overseas investments to a total value of $4,500,000,000 to help finance her war effort, and in addition acquired new indebtedness to a total of $11,500,000,000. Her shipping fleet never fully recovered from wartime sinkings.

Friend of Farmers

Despite the general contempt in which it is held, the skunk is an animal whom farmers may regard as their friend. It is quite useful because it eats many mice, grubs, beetles, potato bugs, grasshoppers and other pests. When left alone the skunk is non-aggressive. A person can pick up a skunk without danger, if he knows just how. The great horned owl does this, and bobcats and foxes prey upon it.

Refinishing Refrigerators

Kitchen refrigerators can be finished with two brush coats of quick-drying enamel of any desired color. However, it is advised by experts in finishing that the job be done with a spray gun by a man who specializes in such work. In either case, surface of the refrigerator must be absolutely clean and free from any trace of greasy film which might impair adhesion of the new finish.

First Illinois Prison

First state prison in Illinois was in Alton, in southern Illinois. Establishment of the state penitentiary at Joliet resulted from a legislative investigation after the Civil war into conditions at the Alton state prison. During that war, conditions were so bad in the Alton jail that prisoners died at the rate of 6 to 10 a day. After the war, the prison was evacuated, sold and razed.

Whooping Cough

Whooping cough is found throughout the world. It is more common among the female sex, and its pattern of occurrence is much like that of summer diarrheal diseases. Highest death rate now occurs in rural rather than urban populations. It takes its heaviest toll during the first seven months of life.

Airplane Spraying

Airplane spraying requires only 1½ to 2 gallons of spray solution, in oil or water, per acre. Flying from 4 to 12 feet above ground, a pilot can cover a swath equal to the width of the wing tips, and up to 200 acres per hour. The equipment is such that the pilot can operate it himself.

Better Highways Coming

Longer life for asphalt highways is promised by chemical research. Experiments have been made showing how to make asphalt cling to the stone of a roadbed even in periods of heavy rain, thus averting premature disintegration of the pavement.

Stitch in Time

Skirts are getting longer, girls, so why not let your hems down? In doing this you may find that there is not enough material left to give the desired width. Two or three rows of seam tape can be sewed together and used to make the hem wider.

Origin of Old Custom

The custom of throwing shoes after a new bride originated in medieval times. In those days people threw shoes because leather shoes represented economic power, authority and position.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Soviets Express Desire for Peace, Agree to Discussion of Differences; U. S. Seizes Railroads—Strike Off

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

OVERTURE:
Peaceful

All of a sudden the air between Washington and Moscow was filled with talk of peace and desire for co-operation.

Exactly what had happened to bring about the quick flow of the milk of human kindness between the U. S. and Russia was not clear. Certainly there had occurred no basic change in the potentially explosive relationship.

It began with a U. S. statement of position, voiced by Bedell Smith, ambassador to Russia, in the presence of Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Smith, apparently speaking officially, suggested that the way is clear for a discussion of differences with Russia. Said the U. S. ambassador:

"The present state of U. S.-Soviet relations is a source of grievous disappointment to the American people. As far as the United States is concerned, the door is always wide open for full discussion and the composing of our differences."

Russia's reply, as broadcast by the Moscow radio, expressed a positive attitude toward improving Soviet-American relations and stated that Russia "is in agreement" with a U. S. proposal for "discussion and settlement of existing differences."

Although these developments received a big play in the press and radio of both nations, indications were strong that the aura of mutual hostility separating the U. S. and Russia might not be dispelled by the willingness to "compose our differences."

Neither side had modified its foreign policy. Rather, each had emphasized it in the exchange of notes.

The U. S. statement said, in part: "The concern and the determination of the people of the United States have been intensified by the inexplicable hostility of the Soviet government to the European recovery program—a measure which in its inception and subsequent developments is so obviously only a measure of American assistance for reconstruction on a co-operative basis without menace or threat to anyone."

In their reply the Soviets contrasted what they termed military threats against the Soviet Union with the Russian government's pursuit of "a consistent peace policy."

At least there was a definition of terms and a preliminary agreement to talk things over. Whether or not any good would come of it was, at this stage, problematical.

There was a suspicion abroad that Russia, balked in its ambitions to expand into western Europe by the European recovery program, might be ready now to try to make some kind of deal.

ALL ABOARD:
Trains Run

U. S. economy escaped being a victim of railroad paraplegia at the eleventh hour when three rail brotherhoods yielded to a restraining order brought against them by the government and called off their impending strike.

Events leading up to that climax had run a course which has become familiar to strike-weary Americans. Negotiations between the railroads and the three dissenting brotherhoods — engineers, firemen and switchmen—had been fruitless. As the strike deadline approached they remained miles away from any kind of agreement on wages and working conditions.

By that time President Truman had built up a full head of steam and he opened the throttle wide.

Acting under the sanction of a 1916 law which authorizes the government to take over the railroads during the time of war (U. S. is still, officially, in a state of wartime emergency) Mr. Truman seized the entire vast network of tracks and trains in the name of the federal government.

That move paved the way for a court order restraining the unions from striking for eight days. Federal District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough issued the order and the nation's trains kept running, for the time being, at least.

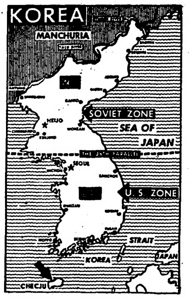
Possibly proving that there is no wind so ill that it doesn't blow up some good for somebody, one of the major influences leading to cancellation of the rail strike was John L. Lewis, who didn't have a word to say about it.

But Lewis had set the pattern. The rail union leaders—Alvanley Johnston of the engineers, D. B. Robertson of the firemen and A. J. Glover Jr. of the switchmen—were uncomfortably aware of what happened to the mine chief when he disobeyed an injunction to call off his soft coal strike.

They knew that if they disobeyed Judge Goldsborough's restraining order they would be exposing themselves and their unions to whopping big fines and possible jail sentences.

It was becoming apparent that the government had hit upon a hard-fisted way of delaying crippling strikes. With labor unrest destined to grow this summer, that method, though far from ideal, might come to be the basic formula for inducing arbitration and settlement of strikes.

Eastern Hotspot



Latest area to emerge as a pivotal point in the world-wide drive against communism is southern Korea where about seven million registered voters went to the polls to elect 200 representatives to what is known as the Korean national assembly. Prior to the election, Communist-trained agents were reported to have been attempting to stir up trouble in the U. S. zone to influence the balloting.

DIXIE:
Anti-Truman

Although President Harry Truman had not held forth publicly on the subject of civil rights for some time now, the echoes of the civil rights program he advanced earlier this year were rattling around like sabers south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Alabama voters had expressed themselves as being anti-Truman. In the state's primary election they had given majorities to candidates pledged to cast electoral votes against the President because of the civil rights issue.

It was the first concrete indication that a bolt from the regular Democratic party nominee might not be unlikely next November if the nominee (like Mr. Truman) is committed to supporting the civil rights program.

And in Jackson, Miss., a "state's rights" Democratic rally was keynoted with a flat prediction that President Truman would not be reelected because he is not acceptable to the nation or the southern Democrats.

Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina defined the South's stand when he told the rally that the South is not in revolt against the Democratic party but against its present leadership.

Spark that kindled the political fire in the South was Mr. Truman's espousal of proposals to pass federal laws outlawing lynching, poll taxes, job discrimination and segregation of races. Legislation like that, Governor Thurmond asserted, would violate the historic principle of the right of states to determine their own attitude toward such matters.

So far it was only talk, but anti-Truman feeling had crystallized in the South to the point where party leaders were badly worried. If the Dixie Democrats carried their defection to the ultimate point of nominating their own candidate, the big-wigs might as well throw in the sponge for the '48 elections and start looking to 1952.

SMOKE, SMOKE, SMOKE

Americans Burning More Cigarettes

Cigarette consumption in the U. S. in 1947 ascended to an all-time high for the 14th consecutive year, despite spectacular wartime gains which would have made a subsequent postwar decline no great surprise to the industry.

According to an article in the May edition of "Business Comment," bulletin of Northern Trust company, total output of 370 billion cigarettes last year was 8 per cent greater than in 1946.

"Per capita cigarette consumption in the U. S. has followed an upward trend, with minor interruptions, since prior to World War I," the bank reported. On a per capita basis consumption jumped from 166 in 1914 to 2,400 in 1947.

UNCERTAINTY:
Who Won?

Just about all that anyone was sure of when the smoke from the Ohio primary elections had cleared was that Sen. Robert Taft had won 44 delegates to the Republican national convention and that Harold Stassen, the wolf at Taft's door, had captured nine.

How these results should be interpreted promised to be a thoroughly argued question by the time the Republicans convened in Philadelphia to nominate a presidential candidate.

Many held the opinion that the Ohio primary resulted in, if not an outright defeat for Stassen, at least a brusque check on the Minnesotan's heretofore snowballing campaign.

Stassen had competed with Taft for 23 of the state's 53 delegates. He won nine and Taft took 14 of those 23. In a pre-election statement, Stassen had said that the Ohio contest could be accounted a victory for him only if he won a majority of the 23 disputed delegates.

Thus, by his own estimate, Stassen lost in Ohio. He lost, however, to a "favorite son" candidate strongly supported in his own state by Ohio's powerful political organization.

It was hardly a victory for Taft to shout about.

In the final analysis the G.O.P. election race had not changed much. It was Taft and Dewey teaming up to force Stassen into the rail, with Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan coming up fast on the outside.

FARM ISSUE:
Truman's

Rather hard put for a good, earthy issue to play upon in his coming campaign, President Truman has hit upon the farm problem as the vehicle to carry some of his convictions before the public.

He began by planning a message to congress on the subject of long-range agricultural legislation. The idea was originated by the retiring Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson who opined that such a plea to congress would put the Republicans "on the spot."

The message which Mr. Truman was preparing would ask for an "adequate appropriation" to continue the government farm program, "particularly on soil conservation," according to Alben Barkley, senate Democratic leader.

Barkley acidulously recalled that the President had asked in his budget message for 300 million dollars for soil conservation in the coming fiscal year, and that congress had cut that sum to 225 million.

Many U. S. farmers would be inclined to agree.

'X' for Taft

Sen. Robert Taft's presidential star once again was in ascendancy following the important Ohio primary election of 53 Republican national convention delegates. He won 14 of the 23 contests in which Harold E. Stassen was a strong disputant.

WHEAT:
Big Crop

Word from the department of agriculture was that the U. S. would produce the third largest wheat crop in history this year.

The department stuck to that prediction even though it had reduced its estimate of the important winter wheat crop by 14.5 million bushels from the April 1 estimate.

Except in parts of the southern great plains, the crop made good progress, it was revealed in an official department report.

As of May 1, prospects were for a total of 1.117 billion bushels of wheat. Largest crop was 1.36 billion bushels last year. Production in the 1936-45 period averaged 890 million bushels.

Department of agriculture estimated the fall-sown winter wheat crop at about 845 million bushels, a decline of 14.5 from its April 1 forecast. No official estimate of spring wheat was available, but a guess was that average yields should produce 272 million bushels.

PLANT LIFE:
Appetites

Atomic scientists have learned that some plants, like human beings, are finicky eaters.

This new knowledge, important commercially, is the result of exhaustive tests with radioactive isotopes of phosphorous.

Now science can tell a farmer who spends $50 to put phosphate fertilizer on his land whether the plant only nibbles or takes a bite big enough to repay his expenses.

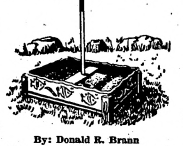
Build It From A Pattern

SANDBOX OR WADING POOL EASILY CONSTRUCTED — TAKES LITTLE TIME TO BUILD.



By: Donald R. Brann

Youngsters enjoy playing outdoors in this sea-faring sandbox. It can easily be built from stock size lumber. The Full Size Pattern offered below not only simplifies construction but provides full size paper outlines so that anyone can decorate it in a professional manner. User merely traces the pattern on the lumber pattern specified, saws and assembles exactly as and where pattern indicates. No special tools or skill are required. By waterproofing a piece of canvas and fastening it to the inside of the box, it can quickly be turned into a wading pool.

Thimble of Gold Settled Battle Over Pirate Loot

NEW ORLEANS. — Pounding golden doubloons into thimbles might appear to the 20th century mind to be an odd way to make sewing attractive.

But, as Justice of the Peace Mercedes Adams will tell you, the thimble-making method solved at least two loot arguments for the notorious Gulf coast pirate, Jean LaFitte.

Judge Adams owns one of two known thimbles salvaged from the LaFitte gang. According to her information, the golden gadget, which doesn't fit any of her fingers, resulted from a division of piratical spoils.

"Each buccaneer had to have his exact share," she explained. "One time, when everything had been divided equally, two golden Spanish doubloons remained. LaFitte settled the matter by hammering the coins into a thimble for the wife of one of his men."

2,500 Year Quest

Leading thinkers, scholars and scientists have been seeking to determine the correct size and shape of the earth ever since the days of the Greek philosopher, Pythagoras, who expounded his theories on the earth as a sphere about 550 B. C. Noted names have followed him through the centuries. Eratosthenes of Alexandria, Egypt, (275-195 B. C.) was the first known writer to describe and apply a method for using the sun as a measuring tool to get more information on the earth's size and shape. The findings of the American, John F. Hayford, of the coast and geodetic survey, early in the 1900's generally are conceded to be the most precise yet obtained in the 2,500 year quest.

Series of Contradictions Marks Political Campaign

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—Political currents and cross currents are running high, wide and deep along the Potomac these days.

The wave of popularity stirred up by Stassen supporters is not pleasant for regular Republicans to contemplate. Some of the non-professionals however, particularly those in the Taft corner, are very bitter about it, not because they think that Stassen will get in, but because of the way he has served to block the Taft efforts—despite the fact that the efforts have been labelled, rightly or wrongly, futile from the beginning. Deweyites don't admit they are worrying — but!

I talked to one of the Taft men recently. "What makes me sick," he said, "is the way the people who have done their best to break down Taft are full of praise for him now that they think he is beaten. They describe his efficiency, his knowledge, his frankness, his grasp of the subjects he discusses. And they talk about Stassen's vagueness and inability to answer Taft's charges." "And these," he wound up, "are the same people who have been shooting at Taft ever since he started his presidential campaign."

There is something in what this man says. You would be surprised how many liberals, how many Democrats even, praise Taft privately, would really like to see him elected, but either they can't quite come out openly in his favor, or they take for granted he can't win anyhow.

Then there is the great group of Republicans who are going to vote for Dewey, but act as if they were gritting their teeth in the process. "What have you got against Dewey?" I ask them. Some are vague, others say the New York governor is a "straddler . . . an opportunist . . . never comes out for an issue until he sees a Gallup poll on it . . . but I suppose he'll win . . ." Can he?

Since the Stassen hurricane, the oldtimers are talking a little differently about Dewey. Some of them who have predicted right along that Dewey would win now are saying that Stassen has undermined him so thoroughly that now Dewey has no more chance than Taft.

And all the time the Vandenberg tide is rising. But here's an interesting thing. Way back in February some very canny observers were saying that Speaker Joe Martin of the house of representatives had the best chance of anyone for the Republican presidential nomination, in case of the expected Taft-Dewey deadlock.

At the time many people were surprised at that opinion. But it wasn't long before we began to see mention of Martin here and there. Then, finally, insiders accepted him as probably the best bet of the several Republican dark horses. I know I could feel his popularity growing as I traveled around the country.

But then came the surprise move when Martin was credited with bringing about settlement of the coal miners' pension row—the appointment of Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire as neutral trustee on the pension board with John Lewis and Ezra Van Horn, and the agreement that was reached between Bridges and Lewis.

At first the settlement put Martin in a favorable light with the public. Then some of the conservative Republicans who hate Lewis expressed their disapproval. There were hints of a "deal" that had been reached between Bridges and Lewis before Bridges was appointed. Democrats charged that Martin was politicking. Horn, representing the operators, appealed to the courts to declare the pension agreement invalid.

Martin's stock dropped. And the oldtimers began to say his chances for the presidential nomination were slim. Not so much because of the pension deal itself, but paradoxically—and this is one of the accepted paradoxes of politics—because his intervention in the row was taken as a public avowal of his candidacy. Martin ceased to be a dark horse—and as a light horse, he wasn't considered nearly as much of a favorite.

The paradox applies to Senator Vandenberg. The Michigan senator constantly and consistently has disavowed any desire or intention of being a candidate for the Republican nomination. If, according to this paradoxical political rule, the oldtimers say, he were thrust into the limelight, his cause woud suffer too. At this writing, Vandenberg seems to stand as the No. 1 bet.

Stassenites, however, claim that this paradox is all old hat; that times and political thinking have changed. One of the first black marks which the Republican old guard checked against Stassen was the fact that he came right out as a candidate way ahead of time. The traditional thing is to be oh, so coy about it.

But some observers feel as Newsweek magazine expressed it some time ago: "Stassen's forthright quest for votes may end much of the traditional coyness of aspirants. In the future, it's thought that more candidates will frankly announce their intentions well in advance of election." Well, maybe.

There is plenty of old-line resentment against Stassen, not only because he began an open campaign so early, but also because of the efficient, powerful, highly-organized and aggressive machine he has built up. A right wing Republican I spoke to recently seemed especially resentful, grumbling about the "big money" backing Minnesota's ex-governor, and the New York banking interests "that wanted in."

Senator Taft was reported so furious over Stassen's invasion of Ohio that it was thought that he might forget his rivalry with Dewey and throw his support to the New Yorker earlier in the convention if the deadlock was certain.

All this talk AGAINST candidates is interesting psychologically.

You always hear far more reasons for voting AGAINST a candidate than you hear for voting FOR one. It's a very good thing that no candidate is ever quite so bad as his opponents claim he is. Otherwise the government would fall apart regularly every four years.

Monroe Doctrine Is Reactivated

On Charles street in the sleepy little town of Fredericksburg, Va., in the first floor office of a story-and-a-half brick house, you can see, if you obey the parking signs and stop there, a beautiful brass-bound mahogany desk, artistic handiwork of the French cabinet makers of the early 18th century.

It is an historic piece of furniture for on its surface 125 years ago, there was signed a document which, reactivated today, becomes at once the challenge and the hope of free men throughout the world.

That desk, carefully carried across the seas as a precious heirloom, found its way into the great, empty rooms of the White House, newly-rebuilt after the destructive fire set by an enemy torch in the War of 1812.

Turn back the pages to December of the year 1823. At this desk sits a man in a stiffly-starched stock. His broad forehead is wrinkled with thought. His wide eyes look down at the document he is about to sign. It is his message to the 18th congress of the United States, but it embodies the spirit and is couched in the phrases which his predecessors have used before him expressing the intent and the obligations of the young republic of which he, James Monroe, is the President.

Two years before, the Czar of all the Russians had uttered a ukase that no foreigner must approach within 100 miles of the American coastline north of the 51st parallel. Russia then had a firm foothold on the northwestern coastline of the western hemisphere. The iron curtain had descended.

Plus ca change, plus ca reste lax meme chose!

"We could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them (the free countries of the Americas) by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

One hundred and twenty-five years pass.

Today, the United States, in a world that has shrunk until Moscow is nearer to Washington than Boston was in Monroe's time, rededicates its resources to "help free peoples to maintain their free institutions and their national integrity against aggressive movements that seek to impose upon them totalitarian regimes."

The words are President Truman's, but the spirit is the same as that breathed in the Monroe doctrine. America carries on.

Polysyllabically, John L. Lewis and Gen. Douglas MacArthur have something in common. Perhaps Lewis should run as MacArthur's vice president. Think of all the sonorous five-syllable-word statements they could get out.

* * *

In President Lincoln's time, most of the speeches were made in the open air without benefit of public address system or microphone. Now all you really need is a few friends who can make themselves heard in a smoke-filled room.

Keep Milk From Sun

When a bottle of milk is delivered and left on the porch, where the sun beats down on it, your family will be cheated out of some of the milk's appetizing and nutritional values. Even in cold weather, if left in direct sun, the flavor and vitamin content of milk will be changed. The flavor of homogenized milk is affected within half an hour when in the sun, and other milk within one hour. The milk doesn't sour or "turn," but a distinct taste change occurs due to the sunlight.

BONDS

America's security begins right in your home. Make you future secure and you are helping make your country's future secure, too. That's what the Security Loan means to you. Your part in this bond drive is to sign up for automatic bond buying through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or the Bond-A-Month Plan at your bank if you are self-employed. U. S. Savings bonds are truly security bonds, which require the allotment of only a littel spare cash each week, and yet return a whopping big nestegg in 10 years. For example: as little as $3.75 invested regularly every week will bring you $2163.45 by 1958. AMERICA'S SECURITY IS YOUR SECURITY!

Take Care of Your Garden

The time to kill weeds in your garden is before they begin to grow! Hoeing the surface soil in vegetable or flower garden not only destroys sprouting weed seeds; it actually prevents their germination. As soon as the seedlings break through in the garden rows so that they can easily be seen, it is time to begin stirring the soil between rows and as close to the plants as possible without disturbing them. Either a hand hoe or a wheel hoe is an excellent tool.

If it rains a few days after the first cultivation, stir the surface soil again as soon as it is dry enough, but do not wait longer than a week before cultivating a second time,—rain or no rain, —unless the ground is too wet to work.

Weeds within the row will probably have to be removed by hand while the plants are small. Some gardeners find an old kitchen knife a handy helper. Or, a hand weeder is a convenient tool. As plants grow larger, they usually dominate so that weeds in the row do not prove troublesome. Onions are one exception; the spear-like leaves do not shade the ground enough to keep down the husky weeds.

For the good of the vegetables and flowers and for the sake of a garden's appearance, it is important to cultivate all through the gardening season. Besides keeping ahead of the weeds, tilling the surface soil slightly forms a mulch to prevent evaporation of moisture. It is particularly essential to stir the soil around plants as soon as soil and plants are dry enough after every rain. Care should be taken, however, not to dig so deeply near the plants as to injure the roots.

Another reason for cultivating the garden all summer is that stirring the soil allows air to enter. Next to moisture, ventilation is one of the most valuable means of releasing soil food to growing plants.

Always a Pleasure...

Mr. and Mrs. are rightly proud of the fine string of fish taken from one of Minnesota's beautiful wooded lakes and when they return to camp and that "tired, let-down feeling" comes, it's always a pleasure to enjoy a refreshing glass of wholesome, sparkling clear beer.

For beer is the kind of beverage Americans like. It belongs to pleasant living, to good fellowship, to sensible moderation. And our right to enjoy it, this too, belongs to our own American heritage of personal freedom.

Snn. School of the Air to Begin

A weekly radio series for children that features Bible stories in dramatic form is now heard in this area. The broadcast is "The Children's Chapel" on KTRF Thief River Falls, each Saturday at 9:30 a.m., beginning June 5.

The radio program is part of a project called "Sunday School at Home by Mail and Radio". Aimed at reaching isolated rural families, the endeavor is supplying thousands of children in ten states and Canada with a correspondence Sunday School program without cost. While the radio program "The Children's Chapel" is designed for both urban and rural listeners, it is also an attempt to bring the inspiration side of Sunday school to children who cannot get this training in the usual way, because of physical handicaps or isolation by great distances from churches.

The broadcast is conducted by Bob Lee, a former aviator with the U. S Navy Mr Lee., who for several years before and after the last war was program director for Midwest commercial and educational radio stations, writes each week's radio drama from the famous stories found in the Bible.

A professional cast of actors and actresses interprets such Biblical roles as Moses, Abraham, Noah, David, Peter, Paul and Jesus Christ.

"While children want a radio diet of action and adventure," Lee states, "Their parents want them to hear something worthwhile. Pleasing both is a real challenge. However, Bible stories have action and adventure in abundance, and the youngsters keeps us busy with enthusiastic letters. Parents too write us of their approval of the "Children's Chapel'".

As Bob Lee adapts each Bible story into script form for broadcast and directs the productions, his wife, Elaine, composes an original score of background music for the dramatizations.

Favorite children's hymns and prayers are included on "The Children's Chapel radio program. Listeners are encouraged to sing the hymns while the program is on the air, and a songbook including these hymns is made available to the listeners free.

Great Falls, Montana, was chosen as the site for the office headquarters of Sunday School at home by Mail and Raido because of its centralized location in a geographical area that extends from Minnesota and Iowa to the West Coast. A staff of experienced correspondence teachers supervise the weekly Sunday School lessons that go out through the mails to families in this area who are unable to get adequate religious training in any other way.

The enrollments in Sunday School at Home reveal a variety of religious denominations represented. The project was initiated and established by the Department of Education of the Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Paul A. Lundgren of Thief River Falls was appointed 14th Judicial Judge by Gov. Luther W Youngdahl on Friday. He will succeed Judge Oscar R. Knutson who was recently appointed associatie justice of the Minnesota Supreme court.

H. D. Inman is now employed for Land O'Lakes as a fieldman doing quality testing. They will live at Blackduck.

Mrs. Freda Anderson left last week for California after spending the winter with her brother Richard here.

Miss Joyce Johnson of Thief River Falls spent the week end at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peterson spent the week end with their daughters and other relatives in Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Peterson and Mr. and Mrs. Denny Inman spent Tuesday evening and Thursday evening wallpapering at the Hanson home.

Life of T. B. Folden

Theodore Bergman Folden was born in Kaafjord, Norway, May 21 1869. He immigrated with his parents to this country in 2881. His first home in this country was in the state of Michigan, where he and his parents resided for 5 years. They later moved further west settling in what is now the Holt and Newfolden communities where he resided until he passed away May 25 at 8:50 p.m. at the age of 79 years and 4 days, after an illness of about 6 months.

On December 22, 1896 he was united in marriage to Amalia Hanson by the late Rev. Bredeson. To this union were born 12 children. Mrs. Folden and 6 of their children survive the passing of a dear husband and kind father. They are Bergman, Arnold, Mrs. Edwin Hanson of Holt; Walter of Newfolden; Mrs. C. W. Hutchinson of Aberdeen, S. Dak.; Mrs. Dallas Harris, Taylorville, Illinois; Arvid of Devils Lake: Edward of Boston, Mass. and Mrs. Torrey Johnson of Niantic, Conn. He also leaves to mourn his loss one brother Arnold J. Folden of Newfolden and 24 grandchildren and a number of nephews, nieces and other relatives. All the children were present at the funeral services except Rev. Edward Folden of Boston and Mrs. Dallas Harris of Taylorville.

He was preceded in death by 3 sons, Hilmer, Johnnie and Laurence, who was killed while serving in the U. S. Army in France during World War II. He was also preceded in death by his aged parents, a half brother, John Johnson and one brother, James, of Oregon.

Mr. Folden spent most of his life in the occupation of farming having retired from active work in 1936. During this time he spent more than 40 years on the local Town Board. At various times he also served on the School Board, director and secretary of the Creamery Board and also served on the Oakland Park Sanitorium Board in Thief River Falls. Mr. Folden was a charter member of the Mission church of Holt. In civic, community and church affairs he was much interested, serving faithfully and willingly as a Christian citizen. Blessed be his memory.

* * * *

Funeral services were conducted on Monday, May 31 at 1:30 p.m. from the Evangelical Free church of Holt. Rev. Ernest J. Vick officiated, assisted by Rev. Thv. Myhrer and Rev. G. Raymond Carlson. Special numbers in song were rendered by Mr. A. O. Gudim, Verna and Marian Sollum and Rev. and Mrs. Carlsen. A large number of memorial gifts were given to various gospel radio programs and to Missions in memory of Mr. Folden. Interment was made in the Folden cemetery.

Pallbearers were Alf Movick, George Fricker, Kettle Sollum, Carl Johnson, Elling Waagedahl and Willie Larson.

Boys Have Court of Honor

On May 26 a special Court of Honor was presented as a public service feature by Radio Station KTRF.

Scouts and scouters in Holt met in the church basement where they awaited their awards over the air. As each award was read over the radio the scout would receive the award from his local officals.

Vernon Larson received his Tenderfoot rank as the first award of the evening. This was followed by Second Class awards to Roger Langlie, Milton Jorgenson, Glenn Larson, Alf Movick, and Vernon Larson.

The following scouts received the Life rank, which is the second highest rank to be achieved in scouting. Robert Johnson, Vernon Engen, George Fricker, Keith Movick, and Harold Ness. Merrit badges were also made to the Life Scouts.

Emery Horien, another member of troop, has advanced so quickly that a time limit on advancement kept him from receiving his awards at this Court of Honor.

BOB LEE

A new transcribed radio program will begin over KTRF Saturday June 5th at 9:30 a.m. developed and recorded by Mr. Lee. Mr. Lee uses a professional cast to dramatize Bible stories, with background music composed by his wife. Mr. Lee is an ex-navy aviator, having operated a 4-engine bomber in the Pacific during the war. Both he and his wife are graduates of Luther College.

Bertha Moberg is employed at the Telephone office in Karlstad.

Mr. and Mrs. Robley Hunt and boys left for Finland, Minnesota and North Shore to visit relatives and also spend some time in their cabin there.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosand of Minneapolis are visiting this week at the Charles Skoglund home. The former are brother and sister in law of Mrs. Skoglund.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skoglund and Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosand left Tuesday for Winnipeg to spend a few days.

Relatives were entertained at the Walter Larson home Thursday evening in honor of Shirley Larson, high school graduate.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Nannestad of Lake Park visited at the Burtness home Sunday.

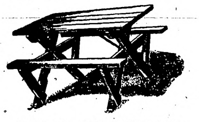
Build It From A Pattern

By: Donald R. Brann

There's nothing like having an old fashioned picnic in your own backyard. Especially so when you have this sturdy table all set up ready to seat the entire family. Its construction permits leaving it out the year round.

The pattern offered below takes all the mystery out of building the table to any size needed. While the pattern suggests making it six feet, it provides complete, easy to follow, directions for making it longer, if desired. All materials used in building this table are stock size and readily obtainable at lumber yards everywhere.



Building the table or other pieces of lawn furniture provides an economical solution to your household equipment problems. In many cases two articles can be made for less than one costs ready made. Besides saving money, woodworking provides hours of complete relaxation. Once you've experienced the deep down satisfaction of seeing lumber turn into a useful picnic table or lawn chair, you will undoubtedly become one of a huge army of "Build It yourself" enthusiasts.

Send 25c for FULL SIZE Picnic Table Pattern No. 22 to Easi-Bild Pattern Company, Department W., Pleasantville, N. Y.

Super-Luxury Buses Being Built

Snack bars, rest room facilities, steward service and electric razors aren't usually connected with buses, but all of them will be a part of a new super-luxury bus service soon to start on the main highways of the nation.

The first regular service of the new coaches will be limited to fast, extra-fare express schedules to and from New York, St. Louis and Chicago. Although constructed on a 41-passenger chassis, capacity of the new model is reduced to 32 seats in order to provide space for the washroom and the buffet counter and to give more legroom between the seats. The snack bar is located at the forward end of the bus beside the driver.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Palestine Jews Proclaim New State Of Israel, Attacked by Arab Armies; U.S. Victim of Russian Propaganda

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Impulse to Zion

Arnold Toynbee, British historian, types the Jews as a fossilized remnant of an extinct civilization.

He meant that because of their single-minded, faultless devotion to the religion of Moses and their strict adherence to ancestral customs, the Jews, descending through history as a compact group, have retained most of the original characteristics which marked them when first they emerged as part of the Syriac civilization thousands of years before Christ.

They are recognized today as being in but not of the societies in which they appear on every portion of the globe. They almost invariably form a minority group, and as such they have been targets for endless persecution.

Socially, world Jewry has been of two minds concerning the most desirable end it could achieve for itself. Those two conflicting trains of thought are represented by the "zionists" and the "dispersionists."

The dispersionists have advocated that Jews should mingle freely with whatever people they have chosen to live among and gradualy be assimilated by that people. Zionists, of course, favor establishment of a national homeland — an indestructible ideal ever since Moses led the exodus to Canaan.

Since the war, with Nazi attempts to obliterate German Jews completely and subsequent displacement of millions of European Jews, zionism has been given a tremendous impetus.

That impulse to Zion has been distilled into what the world has come to know as the "Palestine problem." More recently it crystallized even further in the actual establishment of a Jewish state — called Israel — in Palestine, ancient homeland of the pre-Christian era Jews.

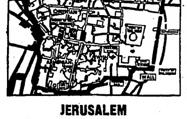
ISRAEL:
In Palestine

Events moved with the swiftness of time itself in the Holy Land.

Ritualizing the expiration of Great Britain's 30-year mandate rule over Palestine, Sir Alan Cunningham, British high commissioner, hauled down his personal flag in Jerusalem and flew to Haifa where he boarded a cruiser.

That was that. Brittannia no longer ruled the Palestinians.

Then the Jews, who had been denied a legally partitioned state, proclaimed the existence of a new, independent republic in Palestine which was to be called Israel.



JERUSALEM
. . . Jew or Arab? . . .

Before Israel was 20 minutes old it had received formal diplomatic recognition from the United States, first nation to extend such recognition.

And while Israel was yet only hours old it was already at war. The newborn state was invaded from the north by regular army forces of Lebanon and Syria and from the south by Egyptian troops. It was shelled from the east by Trans-Jordan's Arab Legion and bombed and machine-gunned from the air by Arab planes.

Haganah, the principal Jewish fighting force, rushed troops, seasoned by months of guerilla warfare to all fronts and the fighting settled down to the pattern with which every adult in the world has become familiar.

During the initial furor, Israel's provisional council of state managed to find time to elect Dr. Chaim Weizmann, a scientist and elder statesman of zionism, first president of the nation.

Most momentous news connected with establishment of Israel was the agonizingly prompt U. S. diplomatic recognition of the state.

CRISIS:
Supersonic

There is a "crisis" developing in military aviation, says Cmdr. Lynn S. Beals, Jr., navy doctor, because it is not yet known how to keep human beings healthy when they fly faster than sound.

Main trouble is from vertical vibration — the up-and-down motion that comes as a plane reaches the speed of sound. This vibration is so fast that it equals five to six times the pull of gravitation

WINDFALL:
Propaganda

In Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith's formal and completely routine statement to Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, the Russians thought they had a propaganda bonanza.

It was cleverly done. Smith's otherwise tough statement, which simply repeated the basic U. S. foreign policy with regard to Russia, contained one sentence that Moscow took as a loophole: "As far as the United States is concerned, the door is always wide open for full discussion and the composing of our differences."

Molotov seized upon that sentence and the announcement was broadcast to the world that Russia accepted the American "offer" to negotiate.

It looked like a propaganda victory of major proportions for the Soviets. Briefly, it put them in the position of being able to point with pride to their manifest willingness to settle the bitter differences which have kept the world unnerved for so long.

If the U. S. refused to talk, that would be fine with the Russians who would capitalize on that fact with a vengeance. If a peace conference did develop as a result of the original trick, the old and familiar Soviet obstructionist tactics would be brought into play to do the usual job of sabotage.

That was about the way it stacked up to the high officials in Washington. Both President Truman and Secretary of State George Marshall made it clear that there would be no conference, that there was no logical basis for one and that such a conference could not possibly succeed at this time because neither the U. S. nor Russia had altered or modified its position in any way.

In addition to the propaganda value of the Russian move, it might also have been calculated to throw some sand into the gears of the incipient U. S. defense program.

If the Soviets, suddenly assuming a peaceful mien, were able to hypnotize the American people into feeling falsely secure, congress in an election year might be coerced into wasting a lot of time in preparing such items of the defense program as the 70-group air force bill and the draft bill. That wasted time could, in the light of possible future events, turn out to be incalculably precious.

Sequel

Second episode of the affair of the Russian piece overture was a Stalin-to-Wallace pass that went over the head of the U. S. government.

The Russian premier took advantage of an "open letter" which Henry Wallace had addressed to him demanding an open showdown between the two nations. Wallace's proposals, as summarized by Stalin, included:

1. General reduction of armaments and prohibition of atomic weapons.
2. Conclusion of peace treaties with Germany and Japan.
3. Evacuation of troops from China and Korea.
4. Respect for the sovereignty of individual countries and noninterference in their domestic affairs.
5. World development of international trade.

"I don't know whether the United States government approves Mr. Wallace's program . . ." Stalin said, making it starkly clear that he was talking, not to the government, but to the American people.

He applauded the Wallace letter as "the most important document of recent times," and declared, "As far as the government of the USSR is concerned, it considers that Mr. Wallace's program could serve as a good and fruitful basis for an agreement."

Apparently a Russian attempt to bring about a showdown in the East-West struggle before an audience of world public opinion, Stalin's bombshell statement renewed the question of whether the new Soviet tactics are merely propaganda or a genuine effort for peace.

Either way the U. S. was in a difficult position. If the Russian appeal is taken at face value it cuts the ground from under the tough American cold war strategy. If it is propaganda it undoubtedly will serve to put the U. S. in a bad light.

Well, Not Exactly

A. C. Hudson of Portsmouth, N. H., head of a committee of fire protection experts who examined the White House recently, said he wouldn't exactly call the President's home a firetrap, but still and all there are plenty of hazards existing at the Pennsylvania avenue edifice.

There is nothing wrong with the White House that a lot of fire-proofing won't fix, he said, but it needs a lot of money.

FARM PLAN:
Truman's

To shore up his sinking political prestige in his campaign for renomination, President Truman proposed to congress a four-point farm program which he claimed is "essential" to a productive, prosperous agriculture in the U. S.

Burden of his message were these recommendations:

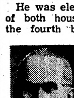
1. A permanent system of "flexible price supports for agricultural commodities."
2. "Full support to the continuance and expansion of our program of soil conservation."
3. Legislation by congress to "continue and strengthen programs to assure adequate consumption of agricultural products."
4. "We need to consider other means for assisting farmers to meet their special problems. For example, we must support and protect farm cooperatives. We must continue to work toward a sound system of crop insurance."

There was nothing very startling about the proposals, and they carried the unmistakable ring of a campaign year bid for the farmers' favorable attention.

ITALY:
Vox Pop

Luigi Einaudi, 74, a banker, is to be president of the Italian republic for the next seven years.

He was elected at a joint session of both houses of parliament on the fourth ballot after the Communists, who had been supporting Enrico de Nicola, threw their votes to him. On three previous ballots none of the presidential prospects had been able to command the required majority because of the Communist bloc.



An opponent of communism, Einaudi also was a foe of Mussolini's brand of fascism. He is an internationally known writer on public finance and economic history.

Einaudi's first task as president of the republic was to designate a premier and instruct him to form a cabinet. There was no doubt that he would name Alcide de Gasperi, premier of the provisional government, to continue in that capacity on a permanent basis.

DISPLACED:
Bill Pending

Although the desperate problem of Europe's displaced persons has not been attracting much headline attention lately, congress has been busy working out legislation to admit quotas of DPs into the U. S.

Latest report was that an informal poll showed that a majority of the senate would vote for a bill to admit 200,000 displaced persons into this country during the next two years.

The actual bill being considered by the senate judiciary committee sets the figure at 100,000 DP immigrants for the next two years, but several senators have introduced amendments to raise that total to 200,000 and to remove some restrictions imposed by the committee.

One senate source said the poll indicated that at least 55 senators were ready to vote for the less restrictive version. The house judiciary committee already has approved a similar measure to admit 200,000 DPs in the next two years.

ATOM RACE:
Official

Governments of the world never have been farther from outlawing the use of atomic weapons. In fact, the atomic armament race is just settling down to a long, straightaway dash.

It is a contest involving astronomical costs, with horrible disaster if not ultimate destruction possibly lurking just beyond the horizon.

So far the U. S. is well in the lead, as indicated by the recent announcement of the development and successful testing of three new atomic weapons which are said to supersede the original atom bombs in destructive power.

The United Nations atomic energy commission made the race official when, after two years of fruitless effort to work out some kind of international atomic control, it finally voted to suspend negotiations.

Other developments followed swiftly to prove that the U. S. is deadly serious about developing a powerful and diversified atomic arsenal:

David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the atomic energy commission, reported that the "present stage of the commission's tests of atomic weapons is concluded."

President Truman then authorized the commission to take "steps . . . at once for further development based on information gained from the tests."

What Russia was doing about atomic weapons remained pretty much of a mystery, at least as far as the American public was concerned. It was an accepted fact that the Russians knew how to make an atom bomb. Whether they had the industrial facilities to do so still remained a matter of considerable conjecture.

Shell Fish

Shell fish are very fine sources of protein, minerals and vitamins, and are shipped far inland. The mouths of clams and oysters should be tightly closed—or close immediately when touched—if they are alive and fresh.

To Save Towels

Mend snags or worn places in towels before they go into the wash to avoid further tearing. If the selvage shows wear, check fraying by taking several rows of stitches along the edge to strengthen it.

Storing Eggs

Eggs should be stored in a cool, fairly moist, well-ventilated place, preferably on a concrete floor that has been sprinkled, until they are marketed. Moisture is just as necessary as keeping them cool.

Railroads Use Water

Approximately 600 billion gallons of water are required annually to quench the thirst of locomotives and to supply other needs of the railroads of the United States. This would be sufficient to fill a channel 600 feet in width and 9 feet deep reaching from New York City to San Francisco.

Harsh Laxatives are NOT necessary for most people

The juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination.

No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! Lemon in water is good for you!

Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They are rich in vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B_1 and P. They alkalinize; aid digestion.

Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

President Talks—Everyone Wants to Get in on the Act

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—The colonel was talking to the general. It was obvious that the general was as bored as his secretary looked, her interrupted dictation on her crossed knees, which she uncrossed as the general's eyes wandered.

The colonel was the army's No. 1 specialist on the super-gadget which was about to revolutionize warfare, as the colonel could (and would, if he got a chance) tell you. The colonel knew the history of the gadget's development from its crude semi-gismo stage when, primitive as it was, it caused the entire re-organization of the tactics of the knights under Otto the great, first King of the Germans. He could trace its evolution down through the days of delicate interplay when it broke up the Empire of Charlemagne, and on down to the fall of Stalingrad.

The colonel had brought the general about up to the third Punic war and the secretary was wiggling. The general himself had begun to fumble with form 2A-3064-B29. The colonel realized that he was rapidly losing his audience. So he raised his voice so that file clerks in the next office stopped filing (their fingernails) and looked up.

"By the way, General," he remarked confidentially, "Did you know that I'm writing the President's next speech? The one he delivers to the Inter-Planetary association?"

The general's secretary perked up . . . the general raised an eyebrow . . . the colonel smiled . . .

At about the same hour, over in the Metropolitan club, a very dapper young man from the division of the Far, Near and Middle East and expert in economic-ethic-pathology, was sipping a thin scotch-and-soda which his chief had just ordered. His chief was bored.

"By the way, Chief," he said in a whisper so loud that even the waiters stopped looking respectful and listened: "I'm writing the President's next speech at the Inter-Planetary association's conference."

In four other places, four other young experts were telling their bosses the same thing. All were perfectly honest, all were believed, and in 20 minutes or so, stenographers, clerks, messengers, waiters and cab drivers were pointing out "the guy who writes the President's speeches."

All this has been going on, I suppose, in world capitals since before somebody else thought he had codified the code of Hammurabi.

What really happens is this:

The President calls in one of his more literary secretaries — all of them are literate, but not all literary (some—those whose duties are conversing with politicians, don't have to be too literate). The President says to the literary one:

"Bill, in this speech I have to write for the Inter-Planetary conference, I'm going to mention the super-gadget, and I want to touch on the current economic and social situation in Beluria, also there are some erosion statistics I need, and some data on the problems which arose as a result of the Whiskey Rebellion."

"Okeh, Chief," says the literary secretary, and on his way back to his office, he begins classifying, according to departments, the people he thinks may have the facts or the people who will know who knows somebody who has the facts. He either phones or dictates a brief memo to these people, requesting not more than one page from each on the subjects indicated.

Highly-pleased young and old men, on receipt of the memo or phone call, begin leafing through their research libraries and dictating to their secretaries. In two days, a number of large packages are delivered to the White House via special messengers. The literary secretary curses and sets to work boiling down a 24-page thesis on the progression of tau-mute from the Sanskrit et elia to a sentence and a half which he has his stenographer type into the rough draft of the speech which the President has dictated and sent to him for the purpose.

Franklin Roosevelt became angered because columnists persisted in "revealing" which confidential adviser wrote the last speech he delivered, whatever it was, that he once showed us the actual draft of a speech he had dictated and written, and re-written as was his custom. In fact, the last-minute revising of Roosevelt's interlined manuscripts often went on while newshounds growled in the outer office and mimeographers stood by to handle the finally-okayed sheets in "takes."

President Truman got a little peeved recently over the same line of columnar chatter and began to "let it be known" that he could write himself. Of course, all presidents get advice, counsel, assistance and inspiration from many men of many minds. Of course, there are humanitarians and grammarians, stylists and Carlyle-ists, lexicographers and geographers, economists and agronomists, Russians, Prussians and Persians upon whom he can call if the need arises.

And somehow or other, each and all, if they but contribute one jot or tittle to the sacred paper, think they wrote the whole — or at least the stenographer who had to take down all the stuff hopefully offered for possible presidential use, thinks so, and tells her friends about it — confidentially.

The problem of presidential speeches is much to the fore these days for this reason: President Truman and his advisers, despite the rebel yells, the wails of the defeatists, the triumphant roar of the elephant and the ominous hoofbeats of the polls as they Gallup downhill, still believe he has a fighting chance to return in November to the White House, and he intends to fight for it.

The President is going on a speaking tour of the West — of course, it isn't a campaign, that would be undignified and immodest before the convention has asked. He will speak under no "political sponsorship." But he will speak and he is going to ad lib, as we say in the trade. Even if we hadn't had our ears conditioned for 12 long years by the golden voice that breathed over the firesides, the unoratorical oratory of Harry Truman when he reads a speech, be it ever so humble, never would be mistaken for the vox humana or the angels' chorus.

But when Harry Truman gets up and talks, he's very human, very sensible, and not altogether unpersuasive. So from now on, he's going to speak extemporaneously, no matter how much preparation it takes.

He showed what he could do without notes or manuscript (and without learning by rote) when he addressed the newspaper publishers and the Gridiron club in April, and again in May when he talked off-the-cuff to the national conference on family life in Washington.

And since such speeches aren't written, nobody can say he wrote them for him.

'Will to Peace' Finds Expression

Next month a "national conference for the prevention of World War III" will be held on the campus of Grinnell college in Iowa.

The purpose is to present a "definite, concrete working plan to prevent a third world war; methods which can be presented to the two national political conventions at Philadelphia."

The roster of speakers will include representatives of many of the organizations now working for a single sovereign, world organization.

Meanwhile Winston Churchill is hammering steadily at his purpose of building a United States of Europe. Although the Attlee government has not approved the idea, the prime minister himself has spoken words of encouragement regarding the formation of a real federalization of the western union.

Attlee even went so far as to say that Britain was willing to sacrifice her sovereignty in part to bring it about, although he qualified the promise by saying the time was not yet ripe for such a step.

But Churchill wants to strike now. He received considerable support from the unofficial gathering in the Hague — a forum, they called it—composed of representatives of the Marshall plan countries, plus exiled leaders.

Churchill's proposals and the Grinnell conference are both part of the tremendous "will to peace" that currently is finding expression.

Perhaps eventually we will learn that great lesson of history — to yield the sovereignty that causes wars to the kind of sovereignty that allows not only the other freedoms to the individual but which, also will give him freedom from the FEAR of war. Just as the federalization of the separate colonies made the citizen of the state of New York free from the fear of war with the state of Pennsylvania —a situation possible because both recognize a higher sovereignty — the United States government.

At RKO they feel that we want to see pictures which "re-create vital phases of American history featuring the legendary figures whose colorful personalities lent further excitement to the stirring times in which they live." Battle of Coral Sea Termed First Big Defeat for Japan

In the battle of that island-studd d ocean known as the Coral sea, which is near the Solomon islands and about 1,000 miles northeast of Australia, America's first real victory of the war with Japan was scored. The action occurred on May 4, 1942, and called for deeds of valor as thrilling as any in all American history.

The Coral sea battle was the first great naval defeat ever dealt the imperial Japanese fleets. And yet this battle was fought entirely in the air, by the planes of opposing aircraft carriers.

The ships engaged in this battle never got sight of each other. They slugged it out without firing a single gun at another ship—the first engagement of its kind in history. In this first great victory for the U. S. in this global war the Japs lost more than 15 ships sunk and at least 20 others severely damaged. The action perhaps saved Australia from invasion.

However, America paid a high price for her victory in the sultry Coral sea. In this engagement the aircraft carrier, Lexington, famed ship that laid the foundation of our modern navy's aircraft carrier operations, went to the bottom. This happened on May 7.

Three Mighty Important Ideas

Maybe you read, where a great encyclopedia has sorted all basic ideas into a few select groups. Under the letter "T" they have:

Temperance - Truth - Tyranny.

Sounds like a funny combination. And to philosophize a little, notice that Truth is in the center—between Tyranny and Temperance.

Now and then you hear folks criticize temperate people who enjoy a moderate glass of beer... who talk about "two beers" getting some one into trouble, and claim: "There ought to be a law!"

Then Truth steps in between, and points out that two beers never got anybody into trouble—and that somebody's trying to distort the facts. No, there shouldn't be a law—there should be Truth.

From where I sit, those ideas are arranged just right. Temperance on one side, Tyranny on the other—and Truth in the middle—seeing that Tyranny never encroaches upon Temperance.

Support The Boy Scouts

Boy Scout Troop No. 112 of Holt will have a stand at the Annual Marshall County Creamery Picnic which will be held at the Middle River State Park of Sunday, June 13th.

The boys will sell hamburgers, coffee, ice cream, pop, candy and also home made doughnuts and cup cakes.

It is the plan of the Troop Committee to send some of the Scouts to the camp in the Lake of the Woods and some to the Scout Camp at White Earth. In order to do this, a fair sum of funds must be raised, and it is hoped that all the people from the Holt community will support the scout stand at the picnic. The Troop Committee has called on the Scout Parents to furnish the doughnuts and cup cakes and will appreciate donations of this type from anyone. Please leave donations at the stand at the picnic grounds. Cash donations will also be accepted and any donation appreciated.

The Answer For The Hard Of Hearing

Now, at long last, comes almost a miracle in good hearing. Works at home, in church, at work, in fact any place where hearing well is a necessity.

So tiny that it can be concealed in the hand yet so powerful that even a whisper may be heard distinctly.

Interested people may write to the manufacturers of this surprising device. The Microtone Sales Company, 902 Marquette Avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota. Dept. 4.

To make this new invention even more unbelievable, the cost of operation has been cut from dollars to pennies.

Creameries' Picnic Sunday

A large crowd is, as usual, expected at the annual Marshall County Creamery picnic at the Middle River State Park Sunday June 13th. It is an event where friends meet and where one meets acqtaintences that you perhaps don't see more than once a year. A good program has been arranged with the main address to be given by John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries and National Co'op Milk Producers Federation. Of special interest to Holt people will be helping with the Boy Scout concession. A finer troop of boys you can't find anywhere and they are working hard to have Holt attain the honor of producing a number of Eagle Scouts again.

General committee in charge of the picnic are E. M. Evans, Middle River, president; Otto Hjelle, Newfolden vice president and Walter Larson, Holt, secretary.

Ringbo FU Second Anniversary

The Ringbo Farmers Union Local will have its meeting Friday evening June 11th at the school house. This will be the second anniversary of the Local. There will be a special program, music, and entertainment. Lunch and ice cream will be served. A welcome to all.

High Yields Per Acre Farmer's Best Hedge Against Lower Prices

Conservation measures such as contouring keep soil at home.

CHICAGO—The sharp break in grain and livestock prices — whether temporary or permanent — was a warning signal for farsighted farmers to prepare themselves for lower prices which will come sooner or later, according to the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Farmers can best hedge against the threat of slumping prices by putting their land in shape to produce top yields at low unit cost per acre,' says a statement made public here by the committee.

"Farm prices are the most sensitive of any commodity. They are the first to rise and the first to fall. Production costs — now the highest in history — have risen gradually. They will be slow to recede. Thus if prices skid and production costs remain high, individual farm income will suffer.

"The farmer who makes money in a competitiev market when prices are lower is the farmer who keys up his crop producing efficiency.

"High acre yields are the secret of profitable operations in good times or bad. It costs no more for seed and tillage to produce a 100-bushel crop than a 50-bushel crop. The difference lies in the soil management methods a farmer uses.

"Good soil management means playing fair with the soil. It means using farming practices that will build and maintain soil structure.

"Vital in any soil management program is a good rotation supported by liming according to tests, the [illegible]

Schjelderup-Larson Wedding

At a candlelight ceremony, solemnized at the Immanuel Lutheran church in Plummer, Saturday evening, June 5, Lois Elaine Schjelderup, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Schjelderup of Plummer, became the bride of Mr. Lowell Gorden Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Larson of this community. Rev. J. M. Runnestad officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Miss Clarice Medchill, a friend of the bride, played the traditional wedding marches and Miss Idella Medchill also a friend of the bride, sang "O Promise Me" and "O Perfect Love".

The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attired in a white satin gown with lace insertion and a long train. She wore a fingertip veil with a beaded crown. Her only jewelry was a double strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Miss Darlene Schjelderup, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She wore a blue marquesette gown and carried a bouquet of red roses and pink carnations. Miss Dorothy Larson, sister of the groom, was her bridesmaid. She wore a gown of pink net over taffeta and also carried a bouquet of red roses and pink carnations. They both wore double strands of pearls, gifts from the bride.

The groom was attended by his brother Orville Larson as best man and by Gerald Schjelderup, brother of the bride. Norman Jacobson, cousin of the bride, and Donald Larson, brother of the groom, served as ushers. All the gentlemen wore dark suits with white bouteneers

Both the bride's and the groom's mother wore gray dresses and had white gardenia corsages.

Following the ceremony a reception was given for about 100 guests. The bridal table was centered with a miniature bride and groom. Waitresses for the reception were Miss Beatrice Waldal and Mrs. Jerome Larson.

For their honeymoon the bride wore a pale blue suit with white accessories. After their return they will reside at 513 So. Crocker Avenue in Thief River Falls. Mr. Larson is employed by the Gamble Robinson company and Mrs. Larson as a stenographer at the Union State Bank.

Footprints on the Sands of Time

The past record of a man or an institution is a reliable omen of the present or future. A long record of reliable, honest and sincere service, and factors that make up a past that can truly be pointed to with pride, these are "footprints" that lead to success.

The past record of this paper is our strongest recommendation.

We today pass into another stretch of time, having started volume No. 38 and hope that we have so served our readers and advertisers that we may merit your continued support in this field of business.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Israel Registers Diplomatic Victory By Agreeing to 'Cease Fire' Order; Lewis Quits First Coal Conference

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

PALESTINE:
Diplomacy

What the Jews of Israel lacked in armed strength to resist Arab attacks against their new state they had made up in shrewd diplomacy.

It was just possible that the decisive blow of the Palestine war was struck when Israel, foreseeing military defeat, agreed to order its army to cease fire on all Palestine fronts if the Arabs would do the same.

That development, which took place as the battle for Jerusalem entered its sixth day in an unholy atmosphere of rattling guns, bursting shell and violent death, made the most favorable impression possible in the United Nations.

Thus having the onus of prolonging the Palestine fighting shifted suddenly to their shoulders alone, the Arabs were put on the spot in the U. N. and in world public opinion.

It was a clever diplomatic maneuver on the part of the Jews but, at least at the outset of this new line of circumstances, the Arabs were having none of it. They reiterated their determination to wrest all Palestine from control of the Jews.

Actually, all the Jews had done was to issue a surprise cease fire order in compliance with a U. N. security council request that the fighting be brought to a halt. Neither the security council nor anyone else had expected the request to be observed.

But that put it up to the Arabs who, faced with a deadline set by the U. N., were having trouble deciding whether or not to cease fire.

If they stopped fighting now they would have done so without attaining their prime objective — the revoking of Israel's claim to sovereign statehood. If they continued the war beyond the deadline they would be laying themselves open to possible security council sanctions of the economic variety.

SECURITY:
Desperate Plight

President Truman came up with another sound plank to reinforce his campaign platform when he demanded that congress overhaul and broaden the social security program.

To relieve the "desperate" plight of the aged and needy in this inflationary period he called for a 50 per cent increase in old age insurance benefits and asked that 20 million more persons be protected.

He offered a five point program and said he wanted quick action on it. For three years, the President pointed out with some irritation, similar requests on his part have been shunted aside. This time he was asking:

1. A 50 per cent increase "at least" in old age and survivors' insurance benefits; allowing pensioners to earn up to $40 a month instead of $15 without losing benefits; raising of the tax rate from 1 per cent to 1½ per cent next January 1.
2. Extension of coverage to farm and domestic workers, the self-employed and others not now covered.
3. Broadening of unemployment insurance to cover employees of small firms (having fewer than eight workers), federal employees and others.
4. Disability insurance to protect workers from loss of earnings caused by sickness and injuries.
5. Increased federal benefits to match state aid for dependent children, the needy, aged and blind.

Whatever his motives in presenting the problem of inadequate social security benefits again at this time, Mr. Truman did have a good, even a noble, point.

"People whose sole income is from social security payments have just about reached the breaking point. All of them face a desperate struggle in trying to procure bare necessities at present prices."

Both President Truman and the aged and needy were hoping fervently that congress would be able to squeeze social security legislation into the crowded docket it had prepared for the month preceding adjournment.

As for congress itself, it was on the fence again.

ECONOMICS:
Wage-Price

While prices continue to climb steadily, wage increases are beginning to show signs of levelling off, says the latest department of commerce report on inflation.

Possibility of a business recession, and with it the prospect for lower prices, vanished like mist in the sun after the foreign aid and military preparedness programs began to take shape in March, the department survey revealed.

Walkout

This photograph of the west end of John L. Lewis going east out of a door is perhaps symbolic of trouble to come in the nation's soft coal mines. First conference between the United Mine Workers and the coal producers on the miners' 1948 contract ended in frustration when Lewis walked out after refusing to seat a representative of the Southern Coal Producers association at the parley.

NO CONFERENCE:
Lewis Again

It was all typically Lewisian.

"I make the observation that there is now no conference," quoth John L., chief of the soft coal miners, as he walked grandly out on the first meeting to negotiate a new contract between the coal operators and the United Mine Workers.

UMW's present contract expires June 30.

Lewis broke up the discussion on 1948 wage agreements when he objected to seating Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers association, at the conference and was outvoted by the operators.

He was not against Moody personally. Officially, his union's position was that the 14 regional organizations which comprise the Southern association must bargain in 14 separate groups, rather than delegate bargaining authority to the all-inclusive association.

According to Lewis' accepted pattern of operation, his balk at the Southern Coal Producers was the opening tactical stroke in his 1948 campaign for an improved miners' contract.

Following that, he could sit back and present the UMW wage demands in his own good time. Then, if the coal operators did not accede, he could call the annual strike.

Lewis knew his position was good. The UMW's recent pension walkout had left the nation's coal reserves seriously depleted. By the time June 30 rolled around soft coal stocks would not yet have been built up to the point where industry could stand a long strike.

Barring unforeseen circumstances, it looked like this would develop into another injunction case.

The union still is under an 80 day court injunction prohibiting renewal of the pension strike; but the court might rule that another walkout would be a brand new strike. In that case a new injunction might have to be sought by the government under Taft-Hartley procedure.

HARVEST:
European

Europe may look forward to possibly its best year since the war if food production prospects continue to be as favorable as they are right now.

U. S. agriculture department said that the continent will produce a larger part of its food needs this year than it did last year and that the crop outlook was good over most of Europe and the Soviet Union early in May.

Prospects indicate a considerably larger crop of bread grains — wheat and rye—than last year's desperately small one. A severe winter killed most of Europe's winter wheat and rye last year.

European production of bread grains may surpass 1.8 billion bushels, which was the size of the 1946 crop, largest since the war. Production last year dropped to about 1.5 billion bushels, compared with a 2.3 billion average before the war.

Long Voyage

Previous flight range records paled into insignificance when an air force B-36 superbomber flew an unprecedented 8,000 miles nonstop with a dummy bomb load of about five tons. It was aloft for a day and a half.

The B-36 returned to the ground with about 1,200 gallons of gasoline remaining in its tanks, enough to keep it aloft another two or three hours if necessary.

DAIRYING:
To a Crisis

While the U. S. dairy industry was busy promoting its 12th annual June Dairy Month for the purpose of selling more milk, butter, cheese and ice cream it also was taking a long, critical look behind the scenes and not liking what it saw.

Industry analysis had spotted what appeared to be a dangerous trend. In its simplest form the trend could be defined as an inexorable increase in the U. S. population.

At the root of the problem was a stubbornly entrenched economic condition whose factors were the war, widespread hunger abroad and domestic inflation.

Continuing high prices for beef and veal have been instrumental in sending many dairy cows or potential dairy cows to the slaughter house. Too many American dairy farmers have discovered how they could reduce their herds drastically, put more land into money-making grain crops, realize a greater profit and still have more leisure time.

Adding those conditions to the fact that during the past few years the nation has experienced about a 45 per cent increase in its birth rate, the dairy industry came up with a grim conclusion: If these circumstances continue at the present rate, and there is every likelihood that they will, by 1952 the U. S. will be approaching the critical point at which it no longer will be able to produce enough milk to satisfy its own needs.

That, according to some prognosticators, might mean strict rationing in a land which hitherto had literally flowed with milk and honey.

Biggest Switch

Billboard advertising will reach a new spectacular extreme on Chicago's Lake Shore drive this July when the switch is thrown to turn on the lights of the world's largest sign — 114 feet high and 210 feet wide. A mile and a half of neon tubing, illuminating letters 38 to 58 feet high, will flash the name of a spirited product which a certain distillery wants everybody to switch to.

POLITICS:
The Race

In Oregon, where the last presidential primary of this campaign year was held in an atmosphere of political hoopla, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York was voted more likely to succeed than Harold Stassen.

Whether he would or not remained an open question, but it was certain that his political complexion had taken on a more sanguine hue as a result of the Oregon balloting.

Stassen, who had won spectacular primary victories in Wisconsin and Nebraska over Taft and Dewey, his chief rivals for the GOP nomination, and then had received a borderline setback at the hands of Taft forces in Ohio, at last had suffered a clear-cut defeat.

Oregon wasn't going to do Stassen any good. Having had to buck organized Republican opposition all the way along, he apparently had estimated that his best chance of procuring the nomination lay in building up sufficient prestige and momentum during the primary campaigns to stampede the June 21 convention.

However, he still will go to the national convention with at least 200 delegates pledged to support him on the first ballot. So, for that matter, will Dewey. A total of 548 convention votes is required for nomination.

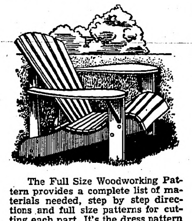
Build This Set of Lawn Furniture Yourself.

If in need of lawn furniture, build it yourself and save money. Full Size patterns are available that simplify building the matching chairs and settee illustrated above. A smaller size chair, suitable for children two to eight years of age, can also be constructed from a pattern. Youngsters will be happy to join the family circle if they have a chair they can call their own. Nothing seems to be quite so important to the young ones as having things "just like Dad's".



The Full Size Woodworking Pattern provides a complete list of materials needed, step by step directions and full size patterns for cutting each part. It's the dress pattern idea applied to the flat surface of lumber. No special tools or skill are required. All the materials specified by each pattern are stock size and readily available at lumber yards everywhere. So, for fun over a week-end, build one or more of these pieces. Get the youngster to help. Have him sandpaper each piece, let him hold the pieces as you drill holes. Explain why you use glue and screws at every joint to hold parts together and to keep moisture out. If he's lent a hand building this chair you'll find him taking considerably better care of it.

Materials for two chairs can be purchased for less than one chair costs ready made. Make adult size chairs from Pattern No. 32 and a matching settee from Pattern No. 39. Child size chair is Pattern No. 132. Send 25c for each pattern No. 32 Pattern No. 132. Send 35c for Pattern No. 39 to Easi-Bild Pattern Company, Department W., Pleasantville, N. Y.

ASK ME ANOTHER ?
A General Quiz

THE QUESTIONS

1. Are there any American flowers that bloom all year around?
2. Can a starfish turn handsprings?
3. How fine is a strand of spider web?
4. Is the water in a river the same level all the way across?
5. What proportion of America's population are red-headed?
6. Which farm crop is most typical of Alaska?

THE ANSWERS

1. No, but some, like the chickweed, bloom ten months out of a year.
2. Yes. One scientist even claims he taught a starfish to use a certain arm when turning over.
3. Usually only one thirty-thousandths of an inch in diameter.
4. In the Northern Hemisphere the water will be higher along the right bank than the left. In Southern Hemisphere, this is reversed.
5. About 13 per cent.
6. Potatoes.

Diary Doesn't Have to Tell Earth-Shaking Occurrences

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—The nation, and particularly the nation's capital, where we are highly national and international-conscious, is suffering as never before from the result of memories, good and bad. The Roosevelt epoch produced a rash of reminiscences—200 books about FDR, 32 of them just since his death.

Currently we have with us the Churchill war memoirs, as they are called, although when I was young and read "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," I thought a memoir was something printed after a man's death. Of course Sherlock came back, so I suppose that legitimizes the terminology.

Winston Churchill was a great diary-keeper, as was his fellow-countryman, Samuel Pepys, whose stuff was so hot that the British government still hasn't released all of it. Franklin Roosevelt never kept a diary. His secretary of the treasury made up for this lack. Henry Morgenthau assembled 900 volumes of about 350 pages each, totaling about 80 million words. The task must have kept three stenographers a day working in relays. He had the diaries bound, some said at government expense, although I daresay he paid for it in the end.

His was a lazy method. He didn't have to depend on his memory. He had a dictograph in his office, and every word spoken in the supposed sanctity of his chamber in the treasury, overlooking the wide sweep of lawn and park that flows down to the Potomac, was duly transcribed. When the news of this epic achievement became public a terrible howl resulted and some of the volumes were returned to the government archives. What a man!

I wonder if diary-keepers are normal. I would hate to admit to a psychologist that I have kept a diary for years, even decades. I still keep one. I don't know how long ago I started, but I still have one slim, green volume, dated 1904, in my possession. The year 1904—that was just 15 years after another entry, not in my diary, but in my father's (diary-keeping is congenital) which stated "fine boy arrived 5 p. m." I may say the "fine" is the natural exaggeration of a proud parent who didn't know what he was in for.

At any rate, if diary-keeping is used against me, I have two outs—hardly anything, even of mild interest, is or will be recorded on the faded pages of my journals, and secondly, because I write such a vile hand that I can decipher only a few lines here and there myself.

My mother should have most of the blame for my bad handwriting, just as she is to blame for the fact that I can write at all. She was herself a writer and, unique as it was in those good old days, she possessed a typewriter, a stubby little affair, affectionately known as "the Blick."

Of course it was quite improper to expose a child of pre-school age to a typewriter. It was not my mother's fault. Back in the '90s, some of us weren't vaccinated for anything but smallpox. I was too young to understand that at the time, and since typewriters were as rare as porcelain bathtubs in a city of 20,000, who could guess their evil influence? I suppose I oughtn't to accuse my parents because I became thoroughly inured to the use of the typewriter long before I could balance a pencil, and this fact did my handwriting no good.

At that time what was called "Spencerian" still was taught in the schools of New York state, but very few mastered it even without the curlicues and shading of earlier days. And just as I was getting so I could make the wobbly "M's" and the terrible "q's", along came a new Pharoah to my scholastic Egypt and introduced the "vertical system." That was probably where my uneducation really began. I unlearned the Spencerian all right, but I was never able to go vertical.

Nothing Important Is Ever Entered

But to get back to diary-keeping, at least my diary-keeping. The illegibility of the entries in my diaries isn't really as important as the unimportance of their contents.

Let me illustrate from one with a worn leather cover which I have at hand. It is dated 1914, a good year for a diary, but a bad diary for the world. The record of war days should have been chronicled dramatically as the beginning of the end of an epoch, an epoch which breathed its last in the midst of another war. But did my record do that? Let's look at June 29, 1914.

Do we find the entry: "YESTERDAY ARCHDUKE FERDINAND WAS ASSASSINATED AT SARAJEVO?" We do not. We find this:

Juin
29. Lundi S. Pierre, S. Paul
Bought Berlitz Greek
Rustem Bey

(The book was purchased in Paris, where the year's record began. The entry was made in Washington.)

While the ancient throne of Hapsburg was receiving the blood bath that was to sweep a half dozen rulers into oblivion I was buying a Berlitz textbook for the purpose of studying some foreign language—I have no idea which one except that it was one I never learned. Rustem Bey, I remember was the Turkish ambassador whom I had to interview.

In all justice, it may not be entirely the fault of my diary-making that I didn't record the assassination of the archduke. Nobody in America took the tragedy very seriously. At that time few Americans expected much else from Europe's royal families but assassinations or less respectable peccadillos.

I ought to have known better than that since I had been helping cover the French foreign office for the two years preceding. But I had been drenched with war talk over there and had shaken it off when I returned. Europe almost immediately shrank into a dreamy domain of picture-book memory with no connection whatever with my work-a-day world.

Later on, to be sure, there is evidence that I, on second thought, felt I hadn't done my diary justice insofar as Ferdinand was concerned. But I always was feeling that way about my diary and never doing anything about it.

This, as I said, keeps my diaries from having the slighest value other than to exude a somewhat consoious-stricken odor and remind me that the good young days were no better than those bad old ones insofar as my habits and conduct were concerned, for an honest diary certainly has to be well edited to conceal one's true character.

You note in its pages some high resolve or noble undertaking which was more important to you at the moment of recording than the opening of the Panama canal or the result of a presidential election. In a short year you read it over and are utterly unable to recall the slightest thing about the events chronicled.

Sometimes my old diaries, even though they record no event of great historical significance, sound quite timely. For example on October 3, 1914:

"Not much doing. I don't seem to be able to save my money." . . . October 8: "The Belgian secretary appears, we consume quantities of beer and tells me his life story—a bore, but business." (Just the weary routine of the hard-working reporter)

Fortunately my space is running out. Nothing is more interesting to write or read about than oneself. Nothing is less interesting to anyone else. But I wish to prove my point, namely, that no matter how important diary-keeping may have been for the Churchills, the Marco Polos or the Plutarchs, and perhaps therefore as harmful as important, mine was neither.

And I marvel that any newsman, press or radio, who lives in the midst of alarms, who "was there" when most things happened and told all in breathless detail via the copy-desk or microphone to millions of wide-eyed readers or listeners would ever think of writing it down afterward.

Note for instance a recent diary entry for June 5, 1947, which a brittle clipping of even date declares not only vibrantly but with perfect inexactitude "may go down in history as the day of the beginning of the real peace after World War II." (Lest you have forgotten, that was the day Secretary of State George C. Marshall proposed at Harvard university a new approach to European rehabilitation which later became the Marshall plan, then E.R.P. and finally the economic cooperation administration.)

Note my diary for that date:
"A meeting of the Association of Radio News Analysts. Kaltenborn to dinner."

Elevator Travel

Some 17 billion passengers yearly travel more than 241 million miles in elevators. About 5,000 new elevators went into operation in metropolitan areas throughout the United States in early 1948, at an estimated cost of 60 million dollars.

Electric Appliances Require Safe, Convenient Location

Small electric appliances require a safe as well as a convenient place to stand if they are to be kept in good condition and repair bills are to be avoided. A safe place is both dry and level.

Tables and kitchen counters generally are safe locations for using appliances, but the drainboard of the sink is not. Electricity can travel through water. Therefore, wet hands, wet terminals and wet cords invite injury to the user as well as to the appliance. Water can ruin the heating element. Moreover, a sloping drainboard may let the appliance slip and fall.

Falls are the cause of much damage to small appliances in homes. Just one tumble can put an iron or toaster out of order and spoil its appearance as well. Every appliance should stand level. The cord should be out of the way so no one will catch or trip on it and pull down the appliance.

An electric appliance should not be set on a window sill where it can be knocked over when the window is shut, or where rain may come in and damage the heating element.

Vegetables at Their Best

Real enjoyment of your home vegetable garden depends largely upon proper preparation of the vegetables for the table.

Gather leafy crops early in the morning, if possible, before the sun wilts them. If they are to be kept until a later meal, wash and cover them and place in the refrigerator. Pick peas and sweet corn within an hour of getting them ready for the kettle; if gathered very long before cooking, they lose both sweetness and flavor. Gathering any vegetable too long before using causes loss of vitamins.

Scrape or peel vegetables thinly; valuable minerals are just beneath the outer skin. Young carrots, beets, and summer squash should merely be scrubbed and not peeled. Neither should vegetables be soaked in water before cooking. This, too, causes loss of minerals.

Cook vegetables quickly and only until barely tender. Usually they taste better if slightly undercooked than they do if soft and mushy from overcooking. In boiling, use only a small amount of water, saving whatever liquid remains when the cooking is finished. If there is too much to serve with the vegetable, keep it to add to soup. In boiling vegetables make sure the water is really boiling before adding them. If put over the fire in cold water, vegetables lose color, flavor, texture, and much of their food value.

Vegetables fresh from the garden need very little dressing up to make them deliciously appetizing. Simple methods of cookery are best with the simplest of seasonings added. Until you have eaten vegetables fresh picked from your garden and properly cooked, you do not know the taste of vegetables at their best.

"Our Farmers Net More"

"Year after year, our farmers who sell through Land O' Lakes get highest average returns." That's the conviction of Charles G. Summers, operator of the Lily Creamery Co., Lake Crystal, Minn.

Shown making a butterfat test, Summers adds that "farmers feel sure of fair treatment when they deal through their own Land O' Lakes cooperatives."

"For myself, as an operator," he says, "I like the way Land O'Lakes sells my butter to best advantage and collects for me. Without this service, I'd have to hire a credit manager. With it, I save worry and time so I can serve our members better."

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Who is this Man?

Now and then, in the pages of the Clarion, I run a biographical quiz, under the heading of "Who Is This Man?" For instance ...

"He was one of the earliest lovers in American history...

"And yet he was too shy to court a woman outright...

"He came to the New World on the Mayflower ...

"A cooper to repair the beer barrels accompanying the Pilgrims ...

"Who is this man?"

I thought that everybody was stumped. But not Ma Hoskins, who returned the clipping to me with "John Alden" on it. She recognized all the clues—including that reference to "beer" and "cooper."

For Ma—who's read her history, knows that beer as the beverage of moderation, is as old in this land of ours as the never-ending American search for tolerance which brought the Pilgrims over to this country in the first place.

Associate Justices Thos. F. Gallagher, Oscar R. Knutson File for High Court

Incumbents Seek to Refill Two Open Terms

Associate Justice Thomas F. Gallagher of Minneapolis and Associate Justice Oscar R. Knutson of Warren filed Wednesday for the Supreme Court. They seek to refill the two terms on the high bench which they now hold. Simultaneously with their filing, plans were announced for the formation of a statewide lawyer's volunteer committee to sponsor the candidacy of the two justices and to wage an active statewide campaign in their behalf. Headquarters of the committee will be announced after its completion and the selection of its officers.

Judge Thos. F. Gallagher

Judge Oscar R. Knutson

Justice Gallagher, who was born at Faribault, first assumed his position on the high court as the result of the election in 1942, taking office January 4, 1943. He is second in seniority of the present associate justices.

Previous to his election, Judge Gallagher, a graduate of the University of Minnesota Law School, had practiced law in Minneapolis. In 1938 he was a candidate for governor and frequently has been mentioned as a possibility for that office this year, but his filing now forecloses any possibility relative to that office.

In 1944, shortly prior to the death of President Roosevelt, Gallagher's name was recommended to the President by Attorney General Biddle, for appointment to the United States District Court. Before it could be presented to the Senate for confirmation, the death of President Roosevelt at Warm Springs intervened.

Subsequently, Judge Gallagher was tendered and rejected appointments as American Judicial Representative on the International Court for the trial of Japanese war criminals, at Tokyo, and later, as a member of the United States Military Tribunal trying German war criminals at Nuerenberg. He has frequently served as referee for the National Railroad Adjustment Board. His opinions on the supreme court have often received nationwide recognition. He is an ex-serviceman, and active in veterans' organizations.

Justice Knutson was born in Superior, Wisconsin. He received his elementary education at Superior, and, at the age of 16, moved with his parents to Warren, Minnesota, where his father engaged in farming. He is a graduate of the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston.

Later he attended St. Olaf College at Northfield and the University of Minnesota, graduating from Law School at the latter in 1927. The same year he returned to Warren, where he commenced practicing law in the office of former Associate Justice Julius J. Olson.

When Judge Olson was appointed to the district court, Judge Knutson continued with the practice until 1941, at which time he was appointed Judge of the District Court for the 14th Judicial District by former Governor Harold E. Stassen, succeeding the late Judge M. A. Brattland. He was elected to that office in 1942, and continued as district judge until his appointment as Associate Justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court by Governor Youngdahl to succeed Justice Olson. At the time of his appointment he was president of the State District Judges Association.

Prior to his appointment to the district court, Judge Knutson had been active in civic and community affairs. He served three terms as Mayor of Warren, and held numerous other positions in civic activities.

State Views on Russia

Though Russia may not want war, she's willing to run the risk of war with the Unitee States if that will help her get what she wants, in the opinion of 42 per cent of Minnesota's adult residents.

That view was expressed to Minnesota Poll interviewers in a survey in which question were asked of a scientific cross-section of state adults.

Another 13 per cent are convinced that Russia right now is preparing for war with us, the study indicates.

But 35 per cent of Minnesota's men and women think that while Russia is trying to get as much as she can, she definitely does not want war; and another 7 per cent say the Russians are as mrch opposed to war ar sAmericans are Three per cent express no opinions about Russia's intentions.

The survey also shows that Minnesotans are inclined to oppose any suggestion that we tell Russia that if the Communists seize any more countries in Europe, we would consider that cause for war. Forty-three per cent are against such a move; 27 think we should take tsat step; 4 per cent give qualified answers, and 16 per cent are undecided.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Farm Groups OK Brannan Choice; Truce Request Fails in Palestine; GM Wage Pact Could Set Pattern

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

APPROVED:
Brannan

President Truman's choice of Charles F. Brannan to succeed Clinton Anderson as secretary of agriculture has received the wholehearted approval of the national farm organizations.

They consider the 44-year-old former assistant secretary of agriculture "a friend of the farmer."

One of the bases for this feeling of harmony is the fact that Brannan and the farm organizations concur in thinking that the prewar parity law is badly outdated.

Such crops as soybeans, for instance, have attained a much greater importance since the law was passed but still have no satisfactory price fixing basis. Other farmers, including cattle and dairy producers, claim their parity scales are out of line in this postwar period.

Ideas developed by Brannan to help remedy this situation have been largely adopted by the leading farm groups and are incorporated in bills now pending before congress. Unless congress acts by the end of this year the law guaranteeing farm prices at 90 per cent of the fixed parity rate will expire.

Serving quietly as assistant secretary of agriculture for the past four years, Brannan has made himself the backbone of the administration's drive to enact a long-range farm program.

Thus, the farmers think a lot of Brannon because he has demonstrated that he is looking out for their interests in a realistic, level-headed fashion.

President Truman, it appeared had made a good choice in putting Brannan at the head of the department. Almost everybody was satisfied, and that, in an election year, was a most desirable situation for Mr. Truman.

FAILURE:
No Peace

It was difficult to say who would suffer more from the Arabs' rejection of U. N. truce plea for Palestine — the Arabs themselves, the Jews or the United Nations.

Probably the Jews came off to better advantage in the world councils of public opinion, inasmuch as through their willingness to accept a truce they now can appear in the role of a nation which has been wronged and is forced to fight a war that has been thrust willy nilly upon it.

The Arabs simply brushed aside the idea of a truce with the contention that they could not halt the shooting war until the state of Israel is abandoned and the Jewish army demobilized. There never was any question in the minds of Arab leaders about the truce. It was literally unacceptable to them. Their position was stated definitively by the Egyptian premier, Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha, who said:

"There never will be founded a state called Israel, or any other name, as long as the creation of that state relies upon the theft of Arab land, the extermination of its Arab owners and the sacrifice of moral principles of its Arab neighbors."

Nevertheless, the Arab refusal was a bitter blow to the U. N. security council. It had been organized for the express purpose of resolving just such disputes as this one in Palestine, yet it could do nothing more than make a weak gesture of placation.

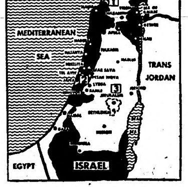
There was little doubt that the security council had been rendered toothless and impotent on the Palestine issue by the U. S. attitude, or rather lack of attitude, toward the whole thing.

What position the United States would take as an individual nation with regard to the Palestine war was not clear either.

At a conference with Chaim Waizmann, Israel's president, President Truman promised that the U. S. would provide financial support for Israel in the form of a loan of about 100 million dollars. Further, he hinted at the possibility that unless the Arab states cease fire the U. S. might provide arms for the Jews.

Day after the conference, however, Mr. Truman dismissed Weizmann's plea for a loan as something that could be handled by the export-import bank, and he completely ducked the issue of raising the embargo on arms shipments to the Middle East.

No Quarter



Fires of war between Arab and Jew continued to burn in the Holy Land when the Arab states refused to comply with a U. N. request for a truce. Attacking Jewish forces at all points, the Arabs said they would not quit until the Jews renounced their new state of Israel. Meanwhile, as victorious Haganah troops took over Acre (1), Egyptian planes intensified the air attack on Tel Aviv (2) and Arab troops enjoyed their greatest victories in Jerusalem (3).

PAY HIKE:
New Formula

When General Motors corporation averted a threatened strike of 225,000 auto production workers by offering an 11-cent raise based on a cost-of-living formula it probably set a precedent which will be followed in settling other industrial labor disputes.

Under the agreement, described as an "entirely new approach to the living cost problem," GM production workers get an 8-cent cost-of-living increase and a 3-cent pay boost based on annual industrial efficiency improvement.

Terms provide that wages be adjusted up or down each three months to conform with fluctuations in the consumer price index of the bureau of labor statistics.

It appeared to be a sound plan and one that might be followed to good advantage by other industries. Biggest flaw in the scheme was the fact that General Motors might have to pass the cost-of-living raise on to the public, which step might have the eventual effect of nullifying the benefits of the raise to the workers.

Significance of this adjustable cost-of-living wage formula can be seen in a review of the rise in prices since 1940. The cost of living today is 69 per cent higher than in 1940. Using 1940 as a base year —which is what GM and the United Auto Workers did in arriving at their agreement—living costs now are at 169 per cent.

Biggest jump in the steadily rising price pattern came after OPA collapsed in the summer of 1946.

VOICE:
Belittling

Voice of America broadcasts, which have never received a full measure of congressional approval, sank to an even lower level of disesteem because of a series of ill-starred programs beamed to Latin America last winter.

The scripts in question, denounced by senators as sabotage, slander and libel of the U. S., first attracted attention in March during house appropriation committee hearings on the Voice of America. In the sample script that the committee wanted to look over were some ill-chosen remarks about Wyoming.

Stout-hearted Wyoming congressmen shrieked in anguish. Other scripts were examined, and Sen. Homer Capehart (Rep., Ind.) finally aired the whole thing before the senate.

The legislators shuddered as they heard Capehart read from the scripts such excerpts as:

"New England was founded by hypocrisy and Texas by sin."

"Nevada's two main cities compete with each other because people get married in Las Vegas and divorced in Reno."

The programs were handled by the National Broadcasting company under contract with the state department. Rene Borgia, the man who wrote the scripts, was fired, and Alberto Gandero, Borgia's supervisor, resigned.

FEWER BENEFITS LOST

People Are Discovering Social Security

Although inadvertent loss of benefits remains a major problem, the number of persons who deprive themselves of old-age and survivors insurance benefits because they delay filing their claims is decreasing steadily.

That report has been made by the Federal Security agency's social security administration. In announcing the improvement, O. C. Pogge, director of the administration's bureau of old-age and survivor's insurance in Baltimore, said:

"Our continuing efforts to inform workers of their benefit rights have resulted in increased public awareness that old-age and survivors insurance benefits are payable only if they are claimed."

Hiyo Silver! Race to Old Mine Ready to Start Anew

DODGEVILLE, MICH.—The story of seven barrels of silver abandoned in an old mine near here is being told and re-told again and is expected to cause a silver rush any day now.

Seems that a group of miners in the middle of the last century wanted more pay. The mine management refused to grant them an increase. Having just neatly capped seven barrels of silver, the miners climbed out of their hole to continue the argument.

Negotiations continued for months while the seven barrels of silver lay in the mine shaft. Finally, when an agreement was reached the miners discovered that the shafting had weakened and they refused to enter the mine again. The silver treasure never was extricated.

Conservatively, the treasure is estimated to be worth about $14,500. Carlos Wenberg, graduate of Michigan College of Mining and Technology, contends that the story is true.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When preparing home-canned food for table use, do not taste string beans, corn, peas, or other low-acid vegetables until you have cooked them 15 to 20 minutes at a rolling boil in an uncovered pan! Thorough cooking is necessary to destroy harmful enzyme that forms in some home-canned foods.

When removing grease stains, always work from wrong side of the material: this will push the grease out rather than rub it into the fabric.

Keep the thermos bottle cork fresh and odorless by wrapping it in waxed paper: thus, it does not come in contact with liquids.

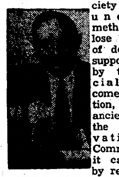
Throttling of Small Business Can Kill Democratic System

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—Over in England, where the majority voted to accept socialism because they felt the 400-year-old "capitalistic experiment" had been a failure, they are finding that you can't vote yourself into a prosperity any more than you can vote yourself into morality.

There are still a lot of Britons who think they have been voted out of the frying pan into the fire. Prime Minister Clement Attlee, in a recent report to the Labor party, admitted that conversion into socialist democracy was a long hard task, longer than they had imagined.



"We are engaged in a great venture," Attlee said, "We are trying to build a great, free, socialist democracy." He warned that a society changed by undemocratic methods is apt to lose the "habits of democracy." I suppose he meant by that that socialism had to come by evolution, which is an ancient axiom of the more conservative socialists. Communists say it can come only by revolution.

Attlee also said that socialism was a way of life—not an economic theory. That will be questioned by some people. He added that socialism demanded a higher standard of citizenship than does capitalism. Some people will quarrel with that too. Many will say that it isn't that capitalism doesn't demand a higher standard of citizenship, but simply that capitalism (or any other known system, for that matter) doesn't always get it.

Capitalism fails, when it does fail, not because there is anything wrong with free enterprise or competition, but because sometimes the standard of morality or standard of citizenship if you will, running the system, bogs down. Then free enterprise is shackled and competition destroyed. The anti-trust laws were passed to punish people who tried to check free enterprise by killing competition.

Those laws wouldn't be needed, government intervention wouldn't be needed, if the standard of morality, of citizenship, were high enough among the people who control enterprise. Long before the war, and increasingly so when shortages began to appear later, big business began crowding small business out of existence.

Because of war conditions and the powerful influence of big business, the small buyer couldn't compete. He wasn't able to get the raw materials.

Small business is the keystone of capitalism. According to the Committee on Economic Development, 98 per cent of the business units in this country employ 50 people or less. Those "business units" of course aren't limited to manufacturing firms—they include the roadside hotdog stand, the one - woman hand laundry, the tea room, and the country store as well as the business men producing manufactured items on a small scale.

If this 98 per cent of a capitalistic country's business isn't prosperous, capitalism can't succeed. In fact you can't have capitalism when big industrial groups monopolize business any more than you can have it when the state monopolizes business.

What is happening to small business today? It can't compete. Big business is making big profits, paying big wages (regardless of whether the take-home pay of the workers is equal to cover high prices or not). Small business can't afford to pay the big wages, and the small town merchant is not making sales and profits because the consumers in his company haven't the money to spend.

A recent issue of the Kiplinger magazine made a survey of conditions in small towns as reported in a thousand letters from small businessmen, teachers, preachers, doctors, lawyers, housewives, workingmen and working women in those towns.

The net of the survey was that there was a definite letdown in business after January of this year, and that the people surveyed believed that there is a further letdown in prospect. There is evidence of reduced consuming power which is the first sign of a depression. A sign that the wealth of the nation is getting out of the buyers' hands.

Now that's a pretty gloomy picture and not wholly subscribed to by commerce department people here. They will tell you that business everywhere, large and small, showed a tendency to level off after January of this year, that there was a definite weakening in the first quarter of the year. But they believe that was a temporary trend, that it's over now, that business will reverse itself, and that the general trend is now upward again. They make no differentiation between large and small businesses in their prognostications and studies, and they feel that the trend for all business now is up.

But listen to what the people surveyed by Kiplinger say:

A food wholesaler in Iowa: "Bread sales are extremely high, also flour sales are good and the sale of rolled oats is good, as people apparently are filling up on these nutritious foods in preference to more expensive items."

A baker in Ohio: "We are selling fewer cakes and pies."

Women are doing more sewing at home, with clothing prices so high. An Illinois businessman said: "The local high school decided to have a night school on sewing. The first registration was 135 women."

Young woman in Wisconsin: "I'm not the only working girl in this community who doesn't have the new look."

Illinois farmwoman: "We planned to buy some new furniture, but the price is too high. I am making slipcovers."

Even electrical items, dreamed of by housewives as an after-the-war necessity, are not selling well. Said an Iowa dealer: "The edge is definitely off on hard goods, such as refrigerators, washers, radios, stoves, etc. Prices too high."

A traveling salesman covering the small towns finds the going tough: "I cover New York state and I am working twice as hard for half the business."

Many little signs of hard times were reported by Kiplinger's survey. Examples:

A Texas housewife: "I am feeding tramps for the first time since before the war."

A deacon: "Collections are off at our church."

A loan company man: "More borrowing from small loan companies."

A village cobbler: "My shoe repair business is good."

As the Kiplinger magazine puts it: "The folks in the small towns are harder up. Their incomes haven't gone up as much as the prices they pay."

In other words, according to the survey, the wealth is getting out of the hands of the consumer. And whether this survey or the commerce department's optimistic prediction are more nearly correct, (congress abolished the small business section), this much at least can be said:

You can redistribute the wealth by the socialistic intervention of government. That kills capitalism. Or you can redistribute it by permitting full and free competition—competition on the part of the producers of raw materials, competition on the part of labor, (an expensive item), competition on the part of processors. Industrial or labor monopoly, as I said before, will kill capitalism in the end as effectively as the Communist with his little red hatchet.

Even Russians Get Re-oriented

This item was passed along to me by a friend. A high officer in one of the armies which fought against Russia was visiting this country, and told this story:

Recently in Berlin, he was entertaining a high Russian officer stationed there. It was a farewell party as the Russian and his wife had been ordered to return to Moscow. The host remarked that it was nice that the Russian could take his wife back from the rigors of occupation life in Germany.

The Russian had dined well, and perhaps was indiscreet. Anyway, he confessed that he was anything but pleased; that he was dreading the period he and his wife must pass in the "camp."

Then he explained that every Russian, before he was allowed to return to the Soviet Union, had to pass through a re-education center, and be indoctrinated with just what he should say to his friends and relatives.

I repeat this item because it comes to me in a direct, intimate manner; not a part of any organized propaganda.

It's as hard to reach an agreement with 16 lawyers haggling over every word in a labor controversy as it is to get into heaven with 16 theologians haggling over how many angels can stand on the head of a pin.

Olive Trees and Taxes

Many years ago, when the Balkan province of Macedonia was a center of contention among Turks, Bulgars and Greeks, the Turks, in possession at the time, set out to make the province unattractive to rival nationalities. They adopted the device of putting up taxes on olive orchards to the point that forced the unfortunate owners of olive orchards to cut them down. As olive growing was an important industry, the trick worked.

WHOLE WHEAT ROLLS
2 pkgs. Red Star Dry Yeast
½ cup warm water (100°-110° F.)
2⅔ cups milk
2½ teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons brown sugar
6 cups whole wheat flour
⅔ cup shortening
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
Add 2 pkgs. Red Star Dry Yeast to warm water. Let stand. Scald milk. Add salt and brown sugar. Cool to lukewarm. Stir yeast solution and add to milk mixture. Add half the whole wheat flour and mix well. Stir in shortening. Add all purpose flour and remainder of whole wheat flour. Mix thoroughly. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead for 5 minutes. Shape into smooth ball and place in greased bowl. Brush top lightly with shortening. Cover and let rise until light, about 45 minutes. Shape part of dough into round buns and place in greased baking pan. Shape remainder into loaf of bread. Cover and let rise in warm place until light, about 45 minutes. Bake rolls in moderately hot oven (375° F.) for 18 to 20 minutes. Bread should be baked for 1 hour. Makes 2 dozen rolls, 1 loaf bread.

Crooked Stitching

Rip out and restitch any broken, knotty, drawn or crooked stitching.

Seams: Narrow seams may need to be stitched deeper to make them hold. If the material isn't frayed too badly, a simple overcasting of the raw edges may make a seam secure. If it frays readily, however, it's better to run a row of stitching near the outside edge.

How to Live Longer

Someone asked Pappy Miller last week how he stayed so spry at ninety. Pappy told him:

"Well, sir—when I work, I work hard. When I set, I set loose. When I think, I go to sleep."

According to Doc Hollister, that formula isn't far amiss. "Hard work," says Doc, "never wore out anyone before his time, providing he knew how and when to relax."

Doc himself works overtime, with his daytime patients at the office, and his evening calls. And when he gets home he takes it easy with a mellow glass of beer and chats with the missus until it's time to go to bed.

From where I sit, relaxing is a fine art—especially in these tense, fast-moving times. And there's nothing like a temperate glass of beer—enjoyed with pleasant company—to restore that easy frame of mind that one needs after a hard day's work.

Prominent Holt Resident Passes

A pall of gloom came over the community to hear of the death of Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen, 50, who passed away at the University hospital in Minneapolis on Sunday at 4:20 o'clock, where she had been rushed after becoming ill a week before her death. Mrs. Sagstuen has been of failing health the past year, but has put up such a gallant fight to overcome it that she rallied several times. She will be remembered as a kind loving mother, a devoted worker of the Nazareth Ladies Aid and other organizations there and will be missed by all who knew her. She leaves a fine family as a heritage, who will, no doubt, take up and carry on where she left off. Complete obituary will be published next week.

High Taxes Revealed in Report

Higher tax levies for the current year are reflected in the tax collections since January 1 in Marshall county which totaled $514,643.58 or $71,596.91 more than the same period in 1947 when the collections totaled $443,046.67.

These figures were revealed by P. E. Kvikstad. county treasurer, after his office had completed records for the June settlement.

The June settlement, which includes tax monies collected since March 1, totaled $334,872.76 this year or $46,088.13 more than the June settlement last year which totaled $288,784.63.

Delinquent tax collections for this year. however, are $5, 269.76 less than a year ago, with the past due collections this year totaling $24,532,59 in comparison to $29,802.25 last year, Mr. Kvikstad's records indicate.

The distribution of the tax collection money is now being made and warrants for the various governmental subdivisions will be prepared and mailed out by County Auditor Levi G. Johnson.

—Warren Sheaf.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Grondahl and family spent the week end visiting relatives at Hastings N. D. and also visited at the Henry Offerdal home at Litchfield.

Delores Engen, bookkeeper at the Marshall County State Bank is now on vacation. She is spending it in Minneapolis.

They let the Wives in!

The ex-GI's of our town entertained their wives the other night at one of their "feeds" of hamburger sandwiches and ice cold beer. (The girls had hinted that they'd like to see what went on when their husbands got together!)

[illegible] wary, the boys provided [illegible] sandwiches and cake and [illegible] for those wives who might have other tastes. But though they were grateful for the choice, most of the wives agreed that hamburger sandwiches and beer were a mighty pleasant combination.

After the "feed" the husbands took their wives on at a game of darts, and later they played "Indications." The party broke up around ten, with the boys agreeing that it was mighty successful.

From where I sit, it's this companionship among young couples today, and their moderation in a sensible beverage like beer, that's won the younger generation such a wholesome reputation.

Ten Million Votes

If one of the first steps of socialization — government ownership — should come now in this country, ten million voters would be added immediately to the payroll of the federal government. Sounds unbelievable, doesn't it? Ten million votes could make quite a showing on a Tuesday of any November. Mr. Wallace, or any other candidate, could go far with that kind of backing.

There are approximately that many persons employed in the transportation industry in the United States. Transportation would be one of the first industries to be marked for nationalization, in this country as in Britain. This would include waterways, airlines, and possibly our trucks and their drivers. (Note on airlines: the British Overseas Airways Corporation, government owned and operated, is expected to show a $32 million loss!)

Is This Fantasy?

Even in taking over American railroads, a would-be dictator could get possibly 1,500,000 votes. There are that many people employed by our railroads. Not all of them would vote the party line, at first. That would reduce the number of rail employees somewhat, until replacements were available. Of course, a new and revised form of WPA would be set up to absorb the unemployed. But, even a WPA-er can vote. Either way, perhaps, the government would appreciate votes!

Lest we carry this satire too far, I will interrupt by saying that such a mess as the above is not sheer fantasy. It could happen here. The worst thing about it is that the general public, and even many folks in the transportation industry, are unaware of the danger. Yet, economic collapse and consequent government ownership is quite possible. The nation would not have to go Communistic or be conquered by Russia for this to happen.

Socialism, Quickly

Yet, some of those who are closest to the transportation industry fear that collapse may come. The trouble lies in outmoded forms of Federal regulation. Too much bureaucracy can take us to socialism more quickly than we think.

This setting of the scene for trouble goes back a generation. The nation has compromised on policies so long that the result is a patchwork of rules and regulations that creates as much inefficiency as possible. Over 50 government bureaus are charged with supervising some kind of transportation, with little overall coordination of policy. Actually, in event our common carriers find business no longer profitable, the government is already well prepared to begin the take-over.

Elbow-room!

The trouble is that despite the largest volume of peacetime traffic, too few of our common carriers are able to make enough profit to attract capital to the industry. If nationalization comes in this country, it may well come because private capital has dried up as far as transportation is concerned.

The problem is this: We must have efficient, low cost transportation, and we must have it the American way. At a time when our railroads, like other forms of transport, are trying desperately to reconstruct themselves after an all-out job in wartime, we can ill afford to shackle them with heavy tax burdens and other financial obstacles that prevent rehabilitation. As the president of one of our largest life insurance companies puts it: "Our railroads need financial elbow-room."

A "million dollar" rain fell on Sunday night and Monday breaking the dry spell we have had. The prospects for a good crop are now much better. Several farmers here have started haying but still welcome the rain.

Tuesday - rain.

Wednesday more rain. By then it was'nt worth a million but most places it is still not too much rain.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Davidson left Saturday to visit at the C. B. Vogen home at Bismarck, N. D. Mrs. Oscar Christenson Orrin and Delray and Mrs. Ole Davidson accompanied them as far as Fargo.

Farmer's Travel

Most of the farmer's driving is connected with his work, as 67 out of every 100 miles he drives go for the purpose of "making a living." Seventy-eight per cent of the farmer's travel can be classed as "essential."

Mulches Give Protection

Plan to protect your garden this summer with a mulch, County Agent Forbes urges Marshall local gardeners.

Values of a mulch are four-fold, L. C. Snyder, extension horticulturist at the University of Minnesota points out. A mulch conserves moisture, controls all weeds, keeps the soil cool and, as the materials of the mulch break down, will add to the fertility of the soil.

Granulated peat moss, lawn clippings and partly decomposed leaves make excellent mulches. In the flower border, use a mulch that is not unsightly. Apply a layer one to two inches deep after a heavy rain or after the flower border has been thoroughly watered. If fresh straw is used, a fertilizer high in nitrogen should be applied first, since decomposing straw will remove nitrogen from the soil and thus compete with the flowers.

Mulches can be used successfully in the vegetable garden too Apply the mulch after a heavy rain as soon as the vegetables are well established.

Everbearing strawberries will need a mulch to keep the berries clean as they ripen, Snyder says.

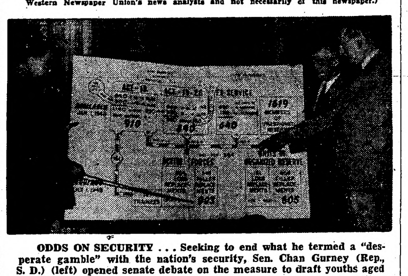
Truman's 'Non-Political' Tour in West Breaks Precedents, Also Hits Snags; Senate Fights to Recover Aid Slash

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)



ODDS ON SECURITY . . . Seeking to end what he termed a "desperate gamble" with the nation's security, Sen. Chan Gurney (Rep., S. D.) (left) opened senate debate on the measure to draft youths aged 19 through 25. Chairman of the senate armed services committee, Gurney here is discussing the draft bill with Senators Leverett Saltonstall (Rep., Mass.) and Richard B. Russell (Dem., Ga.).

NON-POLITICAL:
Truman's Tour

President Truman's "non-political swing through the West could be described as non-political only in the sense that Mr. Truman, as a candidate for Democratic renomination, had jettisoned many of the rules of standard party politics.

It was a lone wolf fight he was waging—going over the heads of party leaders to talk directly to the people. And most of what he had to say to the people concerned the Republican congress and what he termed its inaction.

In Chicago, speaking before the Swedish Pioneer Centennial association, he hammered out a platform upon which he can be expected to base his chances for renomination.

Specifically, he lashed out at the idea that communism can be legislated out of existence.

From Chicago the President, with his entourage, headed for the heart of the farm belt, Omaha, Neb., and it was there that he was set sharply back on his heels.

He continued his lambasting of the Republican congress—this time concentrating on GOP farm policies —in a speech at the Ak-Sar-Ben coliseum in Omaha. Fantastically, in the coliseum which has a capacity of 10,000, fewer than 2,000 persons were present to hear Mr. Truman talk.

This phenomenon was variously interpreted. Some said the President's box office appeal had wilted. Others claimed the Nebraska Democratic machine had done a miserably inadequate job in promoting his appearance.

Probably closer to the truth was the plain fact that the "non-political" label of the presidential trip had backfired seriously. He made a political speech and had expected to get a crowd of friendly Democrats to fill the hall for the occasion.

But the White House previously had told the Democratic organization in Omaha to lay off the political hoop-la, and the organization acted in compliance with those instructions. Payoff came when nobody else showed up to fill the aching void which the Democrats created by staying away.

It was an unpleasant blow for the campaigning Mr. Truman and one that might produce grave political repercussions.

But the President was resilient. And in a more or less happy frame of mind he left Omaha on his train and rode away into the setting sun in search of happier hunting grounds.

AID SLASH:
'Less Recovery'?

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg was fighting mad at what the house of representatives had done to his political baby, the world recovery program, by slashing nearly a million dollars from the appropriations for the Europe-Asia aid bill.

On the Republican foreign policy leader from Michigan rested the administration's hope of reclaiming the appropriations cut in senate action on the measure.

Certainly, Vandenberg has a more than usual affinity for global aid program since it was he who labored to steer the Marshall plan to congressional approval last April.

What the house had done was to approve a total foreign aid expenditure of $5,980,710,228 to be spread out over a period of 15 months. The administration had asked $6,533,710,228 as the minimum fund needed for a 12-month period.

Secretary of State George Marshall, fighting hard against the cut, had asserted that the smaller appropriation would mean putting Europe on a relief dole, rather than helping it to its feet.

But Rep. John Taber (Rep., N. Y.), chairman of the house appropriations committee, went right ahead and swung the ax. He said the funds his committee proposed were all that could be spent with any degree of prudence.

Paul G. Hoffman, head of the European recovery program, said he "certainly hoped" congress would restore the cuts.

ERP was hardest hit in the fund cut. Whereas congress previously had authorized up to 4.245 billion dollars in 12 months for that 16-nation recovery project, the appropriations bill as passed by the house knocked that figure down to 4 billion dollars for 15 months.

—Other reductions:

Assistance to Greece and Turkey was cut from 275 million to 200 million dollars and aid to China cut from 463 million to 400 million.

DRAFT:
Debatable

In the waning days before adjournment of congress the senate had buckled down to the task of producing action on a limited revival of the military draft.

The house was waiting only for the senate to dispose of the question before its members waded into the tricky currents of a similar measure.

Legislators in both houses were treading gingerly about on the issue, throbbing with the knowledge that this is an election year and furthermore there are any number of American parents ready to offer material objections at the ballot box if their boys are called up for military service.

In the face of all this the senate, nevertheless, was trying to do some kind of a job. Its measure provided for the drafting of men 19 through 25 in sufficient numbers to bring the armed services up to their authorized strength. The bill would permit 18-year-olds to volunteer for a year's training, thus disposing of a universal military training act for the present.

Among the side issues that arose during the senate debate was the old bugaboo of civil rights. After an abortive two-hour filibuster by southern Democrats, the senate voted 37 to 35 to outlaw the poll tax as a requirement for voting in federal elections so far as members of the armed forces are concerned.

Actually, it was a minor issue, inasmuch as most of the seven southern poll tax states still have in effect wartime suspensions of the tax for members of the armed services.

Under the senate measure the draft would be authorized for five years, but the program is left flexible enough so congress each year could raise or lower both the regular and reserve forces to meet shifting world conditions.

Drafted men, after completing two years of service, would have to serve in the reserve for five years or, as a matter of choice, volunteer for an additional year in the regular services or two years in the national guard.

LATEST:
In Bombers

Army air force is developing another new long range jet bomber which will use propellors driven by jet turbines. It is called the XB-52.

The experimental plane represents another effort by designers to overcome the high fuel consumption and resulting limited range of jet bombers but still retain the jet's high speed. Jet-driven propellors may provide a partial answer.

Biggest Eye

Scientists and astronomers are tugging at the leash in anticipation of the secrets of the universe which the newly dedicated 200-inch telescope atop Mount Palomar, Calif., will reveal to them.

The telescope's enormous mirror —almost 17 feet across—will permit penetration twice as far into space as has previously been possible and may solve the ancient problem about life on Mars.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE
by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: How can I put a maple finish on an unpainted wooden table?

ANSWER: First rub down the wood with fine sandpaper and steel wool until the surfaces are smooth and "satin"-like; then wipe off the dust with turpentine. If you wish to have an orange maple color, you can get this effect by the application of two coats of pure orange shellac. The first coat should be thinned half-and-half with denatured alcohol. For other shades, apply an oil stain, selecting the color that you prefer from a color-card at your local paint store. Apply the stain as directed on the label and finish with two coats of quick-drying varnish.

QUESTION: The mortar is powdering between the bricks of our chimney. How can I repair it?

ANSWER: Clean out the old mortar to a depth of half an inch or so, wet the grooves with water, then pack with a mixture of 1 part portland cement, 1 part hydrated lime and 5 parts of clean, coarse sand with just enough water to make a workable mixture.

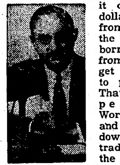
Reciprocal Trade Is Vital To Well-Being of the World

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—Despite the spirited battle over extension of the reciprocal trade agreement authority, nothing which even its best friends could hope to do about it would be definitive, for everyone knew from the start that final action must be postponed until next year.

Reciprocal trade agreements have been a definite part of our foreign trade policy for 14 years. If they were of any value in the past, they are of even more value now. But with an election a little more than four months off and congress trying to break a log jam of legislation, lengthy debate on the subject was impossible.



Putting it backwards, the reciprocal trade agreement policy is this: If a country is prevented by a high tariff wall from selling to us, it can't get the dollars to buy from us. Or, if the country has borrowed money from us, it can't get the dollars to pay us back. That's what happened after World War I, and the breakdown in foreign trade was one of the great factors in bringing on depression.

But that isn't the only thing that tariff walls do. They tend to force isolationism, extreme nationalism on a country and behind the tariff walls, as ex-Secretary of State Cordell Hull used to say so often, grow the roots of war.

Secretary of State Marshall stated that the Gearhart bill would destroy the substance of the reciprocal trade theory, a theory which is not only the cornerstone of our general foreign trade policy, but the principle which we have insisted must be followed by nations participating in the European recovery program.

The secretary said that "only the shadow of the original act would be preserved in the substitute bill proposed by Representative Gearhart, while its substance would be destroyed." And he added: "I think our national interests would be better preserved to permit the trade agreements act to expire than to permit H.R. 6556 to be enacted."

He pointed out that any serious weakening of the trade agreements act at this critical period in world affairs would "almost certainly be regarded by other countries not only as a surrender of our leadership in the international economic field, but as a repudiation of much that has been accomplished under our leadership in that field."

Presumably he meant this: When we agreed to the European recovery plan (E.C.A.), one of the things we emphasized, demanded in fact, was that the countries receiving our aid would have to break down tariff barriers against each other and the rest of the world. We knew there couldn't be economic recovery if there was not a free flow of world trade.

Even before the E.C.A. was ever thought of—since 1934, as a matter of fact—by vigorously pursuing the reciprocal idea, by concluding reciprocal trade treaties with so many countries (we have them will all but six or seven of the Marshall plan participants) we have encouraged the world to reduce tariff walls. Thus it would hardly seem consistent suddenly to reverse ourselves and go back to the old days of high tariff economic isolationism.

The measure as the house presented it had another drawback in the eyes of Secretary Marshall and supporters of his point of view. The bill would force the President either to accept the recommendations of the federal tariff commission on adjustments above or below a certain bracket or submit them to a congressional veto. That sounds reasonable in theory, but what it does is to smash absolutely the whole basis for reciprocal trade negotiation.

A nasty little joker in the measure stating that tariff commission recommendations must be made on the principle of protecting the special interests concerned revealed the intent of its framers. That provision would destroy the purpose of negotiation by removing trade agreements from the field of the "general good" and narrowing them down to a question of whether the particular industry is to be protected from competition. Thus, not only would international relations and conditions have to be ignored entirely, but broad national interests as well.

Secretary Marshall used strong words in criticizing this clause when he said: "The bill, in effect, makes pure protection the sole criterion for tariff action."

Very few groups outside of the big industries which want to keep down foreign competition oppose the reciprocal trade program. The great majority of the chambers of commerce are for it. Earl Shreve, national president of the chamber of commerce, has said that any "restrictions on or crippling of the trade agreements program would have very undesirable repercussions. Discontinuance or impairment would destroy consistency in United States policy and would undermine world confidence."

Former Republican presidential candidate Alfred E. Landon came out in favor of the three-year extension of the trade agreements act as urged by the administration. He said that failure to extend the act would be contrary to the Republican policy plank of 1944.

Frequent public opinion polls have shown that the majority of the people favor trade treaties. In fact, persons who know what trade treaties are vote better than eight to one to retain them.

I'm no economic expert, but all I have ever read or heard about the old high protective tariff debates, the experience under the Smoot-Hawley bill, the post-World War I debt repudiation and depression would seem to indicate that the high tariff idea should and would be dead as a dodo.

If not, it means we spin the wheel backward to the grand old days of high tariffs which killed foreign trade, made it impossible for foreign countries to sell us goods and spend their money here, or to pay back the money they owed us—simply to protect certain private interests.

This Convention Is Different

As the Republicans swing into action with the greatest hope they have had for electing a president since the fifth birthday of this year's first voters, there are a number of striking contrasts to be noted between this convention in Philadelphia and former GOP conclaves.

One big contrast is in the size of the audience which actually will behold the speakers as they step forward onto the rostrum. In 1940, some 10,000 people not actually in the hall witnessed the convention.

Two television cameras mirrored the scenes to a fairly select audience, some of it composed of persons fortunate enough to share the hospitality of the Railroad club in the same building as the hall. There one could escape the sound and fury, the glare of the lights, the heat and aridity, and could snack and sip in a comfortable chair.

This year in Philadelphia, the estimated television audience will be counted in the millions, for networks will carry the scene to viewers from Massachusetts to California. Instead of two lonely cameras, there will be the pooled equipment and programming of the various nets.

But there is a greater contrast in the Republican political situation than in the delegates' physical surroundings between today and 1940.

No one who witnessed the Willkie stampede can forget. It was just about as unorthodox a procedure as history records, for the candidate was chosen, not in the hall, nor in a smoke-filled room either, but out in the sticks. If this is to be a "wireless" convention, the 1940 affair was a convention "by wire."

A group of high-pressure amateurs, who were no amateurs when it came to organized action, was putting pressure on the "big men" in every community, and the "big men" were getting to bosses or to the delegates direct by telegram and telephone. The Willkie amateurs "stole" the show from the professionals, and the professionals swore it never would happen again. It isn't happening this year.

Another highly interesting contrast between conventions — this time between 1948 and 1944—is the hectic atmosphere of today as opposed to the comparative calm then. There was a "Dewey-has-it-in-the-bag" feeling back in Chicago four years ago which took the zip out of the Chicago air. Also the war overshadowed the conclave then. The National Republican (the party newspaper) started off its lead article on June 26, 1944: "With the invasion news commanding the attention of the entire convention . . ."

Another contrast between '44 and '48 is in the attitude toward foreign policy. Then it was the most delicate question which faced the platform committee. Today Senator Vandenberg has foreign policy wrapped up in a neat package signed with his name and sealed with his signet ring. That issue is no worry at all.

Baby Girl Sweater Fails To Fit Cocker Spaniel

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Two former school classmates met in a Terre Haute, Ind., elevator one day and began informing each other of the latest events in their lives.

Paul Hartwig remarked, "We have a beautiful four-month-old baby girl at our house. You must see her."

Mrs. Parker, who is Hartwig's former schoolmate, bought a little wool sweater for the baby and had it delivered to the Hartwigs.

She received a letter which thanked her for the gift but apologized:

"Our baby won't be able to wear it. Our darling girl is a registered cocker spaniel."

Smith-Wetterlund Wedding

The First Baptist Church of Karlstad was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock when Miss Ruby Vernice Smith daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph F. Smith of Holt, became the bride of Burton Rodney Wetterlund of Kenndey. The double ring ceremony was read by Rev. Reuben Smith, uncle of the bride, before an altar banked with garden flowers in the presence of about 200 relatives and friends. Mrs. Reuben Smith played the traditional wedding march and Mrs. C. Elgin of Roseau, cousin of the groom. sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of white nylon marquesette over taffeta with satin and sequin trim and a train; long sleeves that came to a point at the wrist. Her long floor length veil was borrowed from Mrs. J. Gusa. For the traditional "something old" she carried a handkerchief of her mothers. "Something new" was the single strand of pearls, a gift from the groom. Her bouquet consisted of red roses and white carnations.

Attending the bride were Miss Eunice Becklund, cousin of the groom, matron of honor and Miss Gladys Toren, cousin of the bride bridesmaid. Arlette Moe, bride's cousin, was junior bridesmaid. They were gowned in white, blue and pink, respectively, and carried red and white carnations.

The groom was attended by Mr. Chester Smith brother of the bride and Mr. Gordon Wetterlund, brother of the groom. Ushers were Mr. James Gusa and Mr. Milton Lundquist.

The brides mother was attired in a grey sheer dress and the grooms mother a dress of sheer brown and white both with white accessories and corsages of red roses and carnations. Grandmother Nordine wore grey and white.

A reception, held after the ceremony with 150 guests present, was given by the bride's parents in the church parlors. The bridal table was decorated with a three-tiered wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom, lighted tapers and flowers Serving as waitresses were Ruby Peterson, Marienell Struck and Marian Dagen.

For going away the bride wore a black gaberdine suit with white accessories.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was an elementary teacher. The groom is engaged in farming near Kennedy where the newlyweds will make their home on his farm.

Guests from a distance included Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Smith of Fergus Falls, Mrs. Alfred Swanson and Mary of McGregor, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Squellatti of Great Falls, Montana, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Elgin and Mrs. Green of Roseau and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Evans of Middle River.

Life of Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen

Funeral services were conducted last Thursday for Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen at the Nazareth Lutheran Church, Rev. V. G. Sorenson offciating.

Pall bearers were her nephews George, Clifford and Walter Moberg. and nephews-in-law Arnold Sannes, Oscar Lunke and Clarence Ness. Vocal Duets were sung by Marvin Sandberg and Joyce Peterson and Mrs. Sandberg served as organist.

The wealth of floral and memorial offerings were evidence of the high esteem with which she was held.

Mrs. Ragna Sagstuen, daughter of John and Anna Moberg, was born May 23. 1898 in Rollis Township. She was baptised and confirmed in the Landstad church near Gatzke and has spent most of her life in that community and Holt. She was united in marriage to Ludvig Sagstuen on Sept. 26, 1915. Five children were born to this union.

Mrs. Sagstuen was a member of Nazareth Ladies Aid, and had served as secretary of that organization. She also served as president and secretary of her circle and was Dorcrs leader and Sunday school teacher.

Mrs. Sagstuen has been failing in health for the past two years. She passed away at the University hospital in Minneapolis on June 20, 1948 at the age of 50 years and 28 days.

She leaves to mourn her passing her husband; 4 children; Louis; Margaret (Mrs. Hartley Peterson) Raymond and Dorothy all of Holt; 4 grandchildren, 2 sisters; 3 brothers; 1 aunt and a host of relatives and friends.

A son Arnold, her parents, 2 grandchildren and an uncle preceeded her in death.

Interment was made in the Ridge cemetery. Carlson funeral home had charge of arrangements.

For Rent - 35 to 40 acres hay meadow. On share or cash.

Card of Thanks

We hereby wish to express sincere thanks to all who assisted us during the illness, death and funeral of our beloved wife and mother. Especially do we thank Rev. Sorenson for his comforting words, those who sang, those who gave flowers and memorial gifts and Circle 5 for serving lunch.

Ludvig Sagstuen and family.

I wish to express sincere thanks to all who so kindly visited me while I was in the hospital. Also those who sent flowers, cards and letters and the Ladies Aid for the book and candy. Also Rev Sorenson for his visits.

Special thanks to John and Marlin Augustine, L. Larson and Roy Austad for finishing the work I had started before I was taken so ill.

Alfred Larson.

Academy of Science Memberships

Membership in the great national academies of science such as the U. S. National Academy and the Royal Society of London involves paying a subscription; on the other hand, the acadamy of sciences of the USSR in Moscow pays its academicians 5,000 roubles a month, awards them liberal rations of food and clothing, gives them discount in ordinary shops and allows them to buy in special stores, awards them cars, and entitles them to comfortable city apartments.

Beginning of Sweden

Tradition tells us that the kingdom of Sweden was founded between 600 and 650 A. D., by a union of the country's two most powerful tribes: the Svear (Swedes) and the Gotar (Goths). It is not known how this union was brought about, but it is known that the Goths, although obliged to recognize the Swedish king as their own, were allowed to keep their land and local self-government.

Cottage Cheese

A half-cup of cottage cheese is more than equal in protein content to a generous serving of beef or pork. It is about the cheapest of the high quality protein foods. Valuable proteins may be obtained from vegetables, cereals and breads, but animal proteins are superior. Therefore, cottage cheese may be used to replace grain products and save grain for foreign shipment.

Painting Pointers

First coat of paint is called the primer—like a petticoat for the dresscoat. A dull-finish primer is necessary under enamels. If painting an enameled piece, use an undercoat before re-enameling. For wood with knots or stained finish, use an aluminum paint primer to keep the resin or old color from bleeding through. When the primer is dry, rub smooth with sandpaper.

"Children's Charter"

Britain has received her first "children's charter"—a 10-point list of do's and don'ts for parents drawn up by 228 average boys and girls aged between eight and 12. The do's and don'ts were prepared from a poll that included children from an expensive preparatory school, a private middle class school and a London county council school.

Care of Fleeces

Wool is the source of one-third of the income of sheep. Correct fleece care, then, means more money for the flock owner. In shearing wool keep it dry, and keep fleeces clean. Separate tags and wet covered locks from the fleece. Tie fleeces individually with wool twine. All fleeces, such as black, burry or dead wool should be sorted and packed separately.

Grass for Chicks

Providing grass range for chicks is one of the best management practices used by successful poultrymen. Good, clean grass range not only reduces the feed cost 10 to 20 per cent, but also reduces the danger from disease. Birds do not care for tall or dry

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Uneasy Truce Prevails in Palestine; No Talks With Russia, Truman Says; Draft Machinery Set to Begin Work

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

HOLD FIRE
Still No Peace

For a little while the dove of peace drifted over Palestine on frayed and weary wing as Arab and Israeli armies were observing, more or less loosely, a four-week truce in the war for possession of the Holy Land.

At best the United Nations-supervised truce agreement was a fretful and uneasy affair. Before the four-week mediation period was two days old both Arabs and Jews had begun charging each other with violations of the pact.

Count Folke Bernadotte, U.N. truce negotiator, was investigating the accusations, but it looked very much as though another security council cease-fire order might go unloved, unhonored and unobeyed.

Actually, it is difficult to see how any synthetically imposed truce could succeed in Palestine. There are no basic grounds upon which a genuine interruption of hostilities could rest. Both sides profess military proficiency and the ability to keep on fighting and winning.

And more important, each side is fanatically opposed to modifying its demands: Israel is determined to retain its sovereignty and to have unlimited immigration of Jews into the state. The Arabs are just as determined to erase the state of Israel from the map.

Thus, there is little confidence in the security council's truce plan and its power to effect peace. And that pessimism was heightened by the knowledge that no U.N. cease-fire edict has worked yet.

Aside from the seriousness of the struggle for Palestine itself, deepest significance of the affair lay in the fact that it is raising once more the old question of whether any world peace organization of nations ever can succeed in the task it sets for itself—the maintenance of peace and order on earth.

Pressure of world opinion—which is all the U.N. security council can bring to bear, lacking both military teeth and the power to bring economic sanctions against offending nations—apparently is not going to be enough, at least in the case of Palestine.

One inference which may be drawn is that the U.N. will need more power of one kind or another before it can prevail against the fetish of blind, militant nationalism that has hurled the world into two major wars already in this cenury.

PRESIDENT:
About Russia

Forsaking for the moment the political whiplash he has been using on congress during his western tour, President Truman issued a major enunciation of U.S. foreign policy, bounded on all sides by an indictment of Russian tactics, in a speech at Berkeley, Calif.

His address was the clearest cut answer thus far made to the recent spurious but widely publicized Soviet offer to talk over Russian-American differences and the issues of the cold war.

Although the Soviet overture patently had been made as a last-ditch effort to derail the European recovery program and also slow down the U.S. military preparedness program, it undoubtedly carried a great propaganda impact abroad and, to a smaller extent, inside the U.S.

President Truman's Berkeley speech was a creditable reply.

His theme was that the Soviet Union is acting as an aggressor and obstructor of world peace, and he postulated the theory that there is no likelihood of settling disputes between the two nations by negotiation so long as Russia continues to wield international communism as a weapon to influence the course of world events.

The American intent, he said, is to deal with the East-West cleavage by deeds, not propaganda.

"We shall judge the policy of every nation by whether it advances or obstructs world progress toward peace and we wish our own policy to be judged by the same standard."

As a measuring stick for that principle Mr. Truman suggested that Russia begin the demonstration of her good intentions, if any, by halting the perilous strife in Greece and Korea.

Thus, both Americans and Russians know where the U.S. stood. And from this side of the ocean it looked to be as good a place as any.

Bingo!

In addition to taking rapid-fire pot shots at congress during his points west tour, President Truman sharpened up his target eye by blazing away at some clay pigeons on his stopover at Sun Valley, Ida. In contrast to congressmen, the clay pigeons couldn't snipe back.

DRAFT:
Machinery

Peacetime selective service actually had been all but a reality for months before President Truman put his signature to the draft bill.

The gears, wheels and levers of the draft machine needed but a flick of the finger to start turning out citizen-soldiers for the benefit of the nation.

So much spadework has been done that the office of selective service records estimated that it could have inductees on the way in 60 to 90 days after the law becomes effective.

Those 19-to-25 year olds eligible for service can expect something like this:

There will be no hoop-la or goldfish bowl drawings. Instead of being determined by lottery the order of induction probably will be figured out according to age groups.

It is likely that 21-year-olds will start the proceedings. After the registration, all men over 21 and under 22 would be classified. Those not exempt would be put into Class 1A as eligible for immediate induction. Whether the first age group selected would be exhausted before another is called up had not yet been decided.

Military authorities estimate that about two out of every three men in the 19-through-25 bracket who are single and non-veterans will have to serve in the army, navy, air force or marines, either as draftees or volunteers. Roughly, there are about 1,552,000 single non-veterans in that age group.

The whole business will have a familiar ring for Americans who can, without half trying, remember the details connected with getting an army together for World War II.

U. N. SITE:
Changeable

Not that it's an original idea, but another move is reported to be getting under way quietly to switch the United Nations headquarters from the U.S.

Geneva, Switzerland, is being mentioned as the substitute site, although nations supporting the idea are taking no open steps and are confining their efforts currently to laying groundwork for the real drive which may be expected to emerge this fall at the Paris assembly.

The whole plan might go down the drain, however, if congress were to approve the 65-million-dollar loan to the U.N. for building the projected skyscraper headquarters in Manhattan.

As usual, there is a play of forces behind the scenes on this question. The Arab states favor moving the U.N. to Europe, primarily because they are bitter over the success Zionist Jews have had in influencing the U.S.

Britain originally wanted a European site and might, under certain conditions, revert to that stand. Russia, another question mark, is expected to grasp the opportunity to attack the U.S. for failure to keep promises should congress fail to approve the loan.

City Parents

Mr. and Mrs. Girard Van Barkaloo Hale of Santa Barbara, Calif., "adopted" the war-ravaged French village of Maille in 1946, subsequently sent 12,000 gifts of food and clothing to its inhabitants. Now they've gone to Maille to receive the personal thanks of the 366 persons whom they shepherded through the hard years.

AID CASH:
And Politics

Although its funds were still in a state of confusion as a result of a combination of congressional economy and GOP political machinations, the economic cooperation administration nevertheless managed to toss off the biggest bundle of foreign relief cash so far.

Paul G. Hoffman, ECA administrator, approved the assignment of $95,610,605 for 10 European countries, including Trieste, and China. The action brought total Marshall plan authorizations from available funds to $393,737,029.

Countries sharing in the new approvals were Great Britain, The Netherlands, France, French zone of Germany, Austria, Denmark, Italy, Norway, Greece, Trieste and China.

The assignment of almost 96 million dollars in foreign aid funds served to point up the squabble set off in congress when the house voted to spread the recovery funds over 13 months instead of 12, thereby producing the effect of slashing aid appropriations by one to two billion dollars.

While the senate restored the appropriations cut, many U.S. leaders were gravely worried about another possible significance of the house action.

Theory was that the house, by cutting ECA appropriations, demonstrated that Republican organization bosses are determined to fight, and reverse if possible, the line of foreign policy represented by the Marshall plan.

It was thought to be part of a larger plan to gain control of the Republican party and to defeat the new postwar GOP leaders—Vandenberg, Dewey, Stassen and Warren—by chipping away the cornerstone of the foreign policy they all profess.

The situation had the outward appearance of chaos, but behind it lurked the business of playing election-year politics while permitting the rest of the world to go hang.

MIDDLE INCOME:
That's $2,920

Any American family which could add up the wages it received in 1947 and get $2,920 for the total had earned a "middle income," according to the way the federal reserve board has it figured out.

That "middle income," up $320 from 1946, incidentally, means that half of all the 42 million U.S. families made more than that while the other half made less.

About 69 per cent or 28,980,000 families had a joint income of $2,000 or more last year. By contrast, in the mid-1930s fewer than 6.6 million families had incomes at that level. But a dollar bought considerably more then than it does now.

Twenty-one out of each 100 families rated incomes above $5,000 in 1947, while eight of that group got more than $7,500 a year.

However, not all were in the top money. Of each 100 families 13 had incomes under $1,000 and another 18 earned between $1,000 and $2,000. But even many of the well-to-do were unhappy about the whole thing. They felt that they were becoming worse off financially because of the high cost of living.

According to the federal reserve board's sample survey, those persons who own their own business or manage somebody else's earn the most money. Middle income for families headed by "a managerial or self-employed person" was $4,500.

Next on the list were professional workers with a middle income of $4,000. Skilled and semi-skilled workers followed with $3,000, clerks and salespeople with $2,900 and unskilled workers with $1,800.

Weigh Your Words?

Scientists with a will to weigh have developed at the Rahway, N.J., Merck institute for therapeutic research a scales so incredibly delicate that it records the weight of a puff of air from a single wave of the hand.

The scales are being used to weigh potent new drugs and also to weigh the energy spent by animals placed under the influence of medicinal drugs.

INFLATION AND TAXES
Vacations Cost More This Year

If you haven't been on a vacation since 1940 and you are planning one for this summer, you're probably in for a shock—the kind that makes the bankroll tingle.

For depending on the kind of vacation you take and the brand of recreation you prefer, vacation costs in 1948 have jumped from 20 to 100 per cent over comparable prices in 1940, according to the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

For instance, a 12-day cruise from New York City to Nassau, Havana and Miami cost as little as $120 in 1940. Today the same cruise is listed at a $218.50 minimum, an increase of 82 per cent.

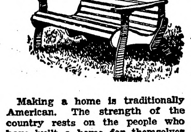
Live Out Of Doors! No Need To Break Your Budget Obtaining Attractive Lawn Furniture

By DONALD R. BRANN

Make your porch, terrace or lawn an outdoor living room — turn your backyard into a picnic ground. You'll be agreeably surprised to see what fun dining out can be. Food takes on an added zest when flavored with the thrill of a picnic.

You can build wonderful pieces of lawn furniture at very low cost. The set illustrated above was built from patterns. These patterns take all the mystery out of woodworking. Each shows the full size, shape and length for cutting each part. Wherever two parts are fastened together, the exact location is indicated on the pattern.



Making a home is traditionally American. The strength of the country rests on the people who have built a home for themselves and their families. Building lawn furniture or any other home equipment is not difficult. You can do it if you try. Each pattern is designed so that no special tools or skill are required. Build this lawn set for immediate use. You'll save money and have fun building it. All materials pattern specifies are stock size and readily obtainable at lumber yards everywhere.

STOP USING HARSH LAXATIVES
Try Lemon in Water—it's good for you

The juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination.
No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! Lemon in water is good for you!
Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They are rich in vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B1 and P. They alkalinize; aid digestion.
Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSES

By Roger Whitman

QUESTION: We have sanded our floors, put on one coat of shellac, and two coats of varnish. The floor is slightly rough; how can we make it smooth without redoing it?

ANSWER: Go over the rough places with a handful of fine steel wool moistened with turpentine. This will dull the finish, but you can touch it up with a little varnish.

SPEEDED-UP COMFORT for so-called KIDNEY SUFFERERS
Backaches, leg pains, broken sleep, painful passages usually go so much quicker if you switch to Foley (the new kidney-bladder) Pills. They stimulate sluggish kidneys; then ALLAY BLADDER IRRITATION. That's the cause of most pains, aches, urges once thought entirely due to kidneys. So for quicker, longer-lasting relief, soothe bladder as well as stimulate kidney action. Do this: use Foley (the new kidney-bladder) Pills; they also have direct sedative-like action on bladder. At your druggist. Unless you find them far more satisfactory, DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK.

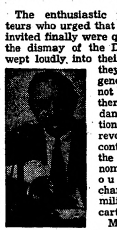
GOP Wanted Mac's Return; Oh, Yes, They Surely Did

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

PHILADELPHIA.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in regretfully regretting his inability to accept the senate appropriation committee's invitation to come to Washington to testify on the Far Eastern situation, said he'd rather wait until after the national political conventions; that he didn't want to get any political implications mixed up with his visit.

Regular Republicans solemnly accepted the general's response just as if they hadn't moved heaven and earth to keep him from accepting. Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire remarked gravely at the time that if anything should happen while MacArthur was away (from Japan), he (Senator Bridges) certainly wouldn't want the responsibility of having the general back here (Oh, dear no!).



The enthusiastic political amateurs who urged that the general be invited finally were quieted down to the dismay of the Democrats who wept loudly into their beards when they heard the general would not come. But there was enough danger of ructions, rows and revolt among contenders for the Republican nomination without taking chances on a military apple-cart upsetter. MacArthur in the United States, marching under arches of triumph, enjoying the laying on of leis, not to mention being cheered and perhaps even voted for by a few starry-eyed elephant cubs, was no pleasant thought for the Republican regulars to contemplate. On the other hand this contingency would fill the simple Democratic soul with joy beyond compare.

We observed the same sweet innocence as to the objectives of President Truman's recent little informal tour of the country. As Chairman Reece of the Republican national committee remarked before he left: "It (the trip) will be as non-political as the Pendergast machine," which indicates the nature of the inter-party amenities which may be expected from now on.

It is indeed a tragedy that this quadrennial election—in which we go through all the motions of tearing our adversaries to pieces, accusing them of all the crimes in the calendar just as if we meant it, should have to take place while wars cold, if not hot, seem to be breaking out all over.

It is probably a fine thing however, that, as civilization progressed, we changed our methods of choosing a leader.

In the old days it was a very simple process. When the eldest son had reached that point of strength and wisdom where he felt it was relatively safe to argue with papa the two of them took up their clubs, the ladies and younger children made a circle, and father and son held an election. It didn't take long, and the best man won.

The ladies buried the defeated candidate, and tribal life continued tranquilly until the first Tuesday after the first Monday of the month and year that junior thought auspicious.

Nowadays, we stretch the affair out for a whole year or more. The Russians have simplified elections by removing one candidate beforehand which eliminates much of the element of chance. With us the contest is highly absorbing and just as the sabre tooth tiger often sneaked in and carried off some of the tribe while the others were watching the "election," so all sorts of things happen to us when we have our minds on the political race.

This time there is some danger that a large fat bear may grab off a large chunk of oil-land while we are watching the events leading to the November finals.

Union of Nations To Secure Peace

Recently Gen. Omar Bradley, chief of staff of the army, made a masterful argument for an unselfish and positive effort for peace, along with an idealistic appeal that we steer "by the stars, not by the light of each passing ship."

"In our hatred and renunciation of war," said General Bradley, "we must not forget that the roots of conflict flourish in the faults and failures of those who seek peace, just as surely as they take shape from the diseases and designs of aggressors. While the American people have within themselves the moral strength, the power and wisdom to marshall their forces against aggression in whatever form it affects — we cannot feign wars. We have suffered enough in innocence through indifference or neglect of struggles that bring on two world wars to know that non-involvement in peace means certain involvement in war.

"Either we shall employ our strength, power and conscience, boldly and righteously in defense of human dignity and freedom, or we shall waste those reserves for peace, and default to the forces that breed new wars."

Wars can be prevented, said Bradley, just as surely as they can be provoked, and therefore "we who fail to prevent them must share in guilt for the dead."

That thesis of General Bradley's that it requires positive peacetime action to stop wars is concurred in by Clarence Streit, president of Federal Union, Incorporated, an organization working for the federalization of the free countries of the world.

Streit's argument, made before the house foreign affairs committee, did not get the publicity it should. Streit said that only through freedom can peace come.

Specifically, if the free nations unite in a federation (by free nations, he refers to nations which are not dominated by any foreign power and where at least the theory of democracy, as we understand it, obtains) these free nations can assure peace. He suggests as charter members of the federation the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Luxemburg, The Netherlands, Denmark, Iceland, Norway, Sweden, Eire, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Streit says further that power can be divided into four suits, like a deck of cards, and that these 15 democracies, if they federate, can hold every ace. He lists them:

"The Ace of Clubs: Armed power. Not only would their soldiers, if united, number as many as Russia's and be much more mobile and better-equipped, but this union would begin by having the bulk of the world's airpower; 90 per cent of its naval tonnage; advance bases everywhere on earth; 100 per cent atomic power.

"The Ace of Spades: Productive power. Despite the tangle on tariffs and currencies, these democracies outproduce the rest of the world. Think what they could do with a free flow of trade similar to that among our own states!

"The Ace of Diamonds: Raw material power. No need of separate stockpiling of essentials. These nations would produce 50 to 90 per cent of most of them.

"The Ace of Hearts: Moral power. This union would unite all lands towards which the rest of humanity has looked for refuge from oppression and leadership toward liberty. Nothing can appeal to men so deeply as can individual freedom—and to back it up with every ace is to add irresistible authority to its appeal."

I think that is a very concise and logical statement. Western Europe already is moving toward a union, slowly, out of necessity, because there is NO OTHER WAY!

The peoples of the world do not want war; the free nations, having achieved freedom, have no cause for war except to defend that freedom. The federation could maintain freedom without war for no one would dare challenge it.

Convention Coverage Took Much Planning

Convention hall in Philadelphia, as the Republican convention got under way, was no sight for the sore eyes of Harold McGrath and Bob Menaugh, superintendents respectively of the senate and house radio galleries and Bill Henry, president of the Radio Correspondents association.

Since October, 1947, they've practically been commuting from Washington to Philadelphia to inspect the hall, plan where broadcasts should originate, decide where network and independent radio news broadcasters of varying degrees of importance should be seated, confer with Republican and Democratic politicos, supervise hotel accommodations and, most vital of all, hurt nobody's feelings in the process.

Four hundred and 36 radio news-men were assigned to cover the Republican convention as compared to the 40 radiomen accredited eight years ago and 160 in 1944.

Forty-four organizations in addition to the four major networks originated broadcasts from the convention; 31 of these shows came from the hall itself. Others originated in the 14 other facilities scattered around the building, some on the stage of the hall, some in the basement and so on

Electric Fence May Kill; Safety Precautions Listed

Electric fences take their toll of human lives every year. Most victims are children. Also, many animals are killed. Listed below are some of the safety rules recommended by the National Safety council.

Do not use home-made electric fence controllers; they are not safe.

No fence should be energized from any electric source except through an approved controller, one that meets the safety standards of a recognized agency. It is important that the controller is properly installed with good ground and lightning protection.

Do not tamper with the controller. If it needs servicing return it to the manufacturer or have repairs made by a factory-authorized representative.

Teach children not to tamper or play with an electric fence.

Avoid locating an electric fence where the charged wire and a good ground such as a pipe line, pump, stock tank, pond, irrigation ditch, or other normally wet ground can be contacted at the same time.

Identify electric fences, especially those near buildings, property lines, or roads with prominent signs.

Provide insulated gate grips for opening and closing gates.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Pampered Farmers

If the folks in our town were less tolerant, they'd be really burned up over that nationally circulated article on "pampered farmers," describing them as living off the fat of the land.

From where I sit the farmer is anything but "pampered." If he's better off today than twenty years ago it's because he's worked hard to improve the quality and quantity of his production.

Take Bert Childers, for example. Bert is up at four in the morning, to get the milking finished—and ploughing or harvesting, depending on the season, until sundown. In the evening he finally relaxes with the missus over a moderate glass of beer.

And the farmer today's not only temperate in his habits, like Bert's evening glass of beer . . . but tolerant in his opinions. So he'll probably say of that article, "somebody got the facts wrong," and just let it go at that.

Joe Marsh

Marshall County's 42 Fair

Marshall County's 42nd Annual Fair will open at Warren on Monday, July 12 for a three day and night run of thrill packed program of Education and entertainment for Red River Valley residents. The big Fair will close on Wednesday nignt, July 14.

Exhibits from farm and home are expected to fill the barns and exhibit halls to capacity with many inquiries being received for space, W. R. Holbrook, secretary of the association, reported today. Every department will have representative displays of of the best produced in Marshall and Northern Polk counties. Entry day will be on Sunday from 1 to 6 P. M. and Monday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

The more than 400 Marshall county 4-H club members have been working for weeks in preparing their projects for public display at the Fair. There will be 14 or 15 club booths showing activities of the members while all projects will have their classes well filled, leaders report.

The grandstand exhibit hall space has been sold out for weeks to Marshall county firms who have arranged an outstanding Industrial Show which will include the latest in modern home appliances and conveniences. On Machinery Row. Marshall county farm equipment dealers are joining to arrange the largest farm machine exhit to be shown at any fair in the Northwest this year.

An elaborate musical revue "A Trip to Wonderland" with a cast of 50 people, will feature the night show in front of the grandstand. This revue has been produced by Miss Gertrude Avery in Chicago and was booked through Barnes and Carruthers, also of Chicago, the largest fair booking concern in America. The program, in addition to a chorus of 16 girls, will include 10 outstanding vaudeville, and circus acts.

Tuesday afternoon will be Horse Race Day at the Fair and will feature a Big International race in which Canadian and American horses will compete for a purse of $250.00. There will also be local running races and a shetland pony race. The afternoon program will have seven big heats of racing.

On Wednesday afternoon the Model T Ford races will be featured with from 10 to 15 cars competing for a purse of $450.00 in five separate racing events. The entry list for Model T races closed Saturday and competition will be keen for the entire program.

The Sunset Amusement company of Excelsior Springs, Missouri will provide the midway attractions this year. This carnival, with its 15 thrilling riding devises, 10 or more shows and 40 legitimate concessions, is the largest organization of its type to show at any county fair in the valley this year. They have arranged a special Children's Day on Monday afternoon until 6 p. m. when rides for children will be offered at greatly reduced prices.

X-ray Unit at Grygla July 14-15

The X-ray unit for taking chest x-ray pictures will begin it's work in Marshall county next week and will be at Grygla July 14 and 15, according to Walter Peterson, local chairman. "We're aiming at 100 per cent--everybody x-rayed" he said. Last week he took charge of distributing posters calling attention to the county-wide survey July 14 to September 17.

Those who live in Beltrami county, near Grygla, may have their chest x-rays on July 14 or 15 at Grygla.

Time and money are both at a premium these days. That's why the chest x-raying program is so popular. It costs nothing and takes just a minute. It is not necessary to undress.

All findings are confidential. If your x-ray reveals an abnormal condition in your chest, nobody will know anything about it except you and your doctor.

Saturday Night In Holt

Holt is now a Saturday night town. The stores are open and friends gather there for a chat while doing their shopping. Everybody comes to town. You'll see neighbors visiting over a cup of coffee or a dish of ice cream or waiting turn at the pool table. Everyone goes home with the feeling of satisfaction that can come only to those who live in a community surrounded by friends.

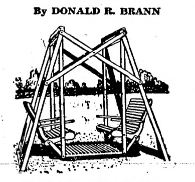
Build It From A Pattern

New Method Simplifies Building Modern Version of Old Fashioned Lawn Swing

By DONALD R. BRANN



Pattern Simplifies Building

The Lawn Swing is easy to build. No special tools or skill are required. The Full Size pattern offered below provides all the information needed to buy the materials, cut and assemble the swing. All materials specified are stock size and are now readily available at most lumber yards.

Trace, Saw and Assemble

It's as easy as that. The pattern provides a full size, printed paper outline of each component part of the swing. Trace each piece on the lumber specified, saw and assemble. Wherever two pieces are joined, their exact location is shown on the pattern. All bolts and screw holes are also shown. You'll have fun building this swing and lots more fun using it.

Send 50c for Lawn Swing Pattern No. 155 to Easi-Bild Pattern Company, Dept. W, Pleasantville, N. Y.

One Diplomat Knew Better: Scratch One Tyro Diplomat

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON.—Back in the partially-deserted capital after one and before another political convention in these days when Washington's tiger heat drives those who are not too driven otherwise out to the mountains and beaches, I took a short ride with a friendly official who, like most of the press and radio, has to stick out a good share of the summer in the city.

We passed some of the last few fine old residences and a number of embassies and legations. Shutters were drawn, orange-red paint was smeared in a pattern I never have been able to understand on ironwork of high picket-fences and window bars. Some windows were boarded up.

"If it hadn't been for you," I remarked to my companion sitting beside me in what he alludes to as 'the taxpayer's limousine,' "I might not have been in Washington this summer. I might have been loafing at a mountain - lakeside or elsewhere . . ."

"How so?" he inquired.

"Don't you recall," I asked, "that you were a newspaperman yourself once and, corollarily speaking, met a lot of interesting people? I was one of them. That meeting killed what I thought then was to be a brilliant diplomatic career."

The story begins right across the street from the office I now occupy on Eighteenth street, in a fine old brick house which I saw first in the year 1914. The carriage drive in front of it is blocked now by the curbing, probably because the traffic officials thought no automobile could safely make the turn which a "spanking pair" negotiated so easily three decades ago.

A sign on the lamp-post in front of the house says "no parking at any time." A brass plate over one of the windows, still barred with the gracefully-curving ironwork of another century says: "Columbus University." The plate it replaced used to say "Former Home of Secretary of State Lansing."

In 1914 it was some two hours after leaving that red brick house that I began "putting off"—(putting things off is a great art and one that has reached a high point of refinement in Washington. I always have practiced it.) If I hadn't put off then, I might have become a diplomat. As it was, all I got was deadlines the rest of my life.

It happened this way. I had just returned from an extended period in Europe where I had been going through the motions of acquiring an education. In the process I acquired the ambition to become a member of the foreign service of the state department. I planned to rise, by easy stages, on pure merit, of course, to the position of ambassador to the Court of St. James. Beyond that, as a cabinet officer says following a change in administration, I had no plans.

I did have four out of five necessary qualifications which I knew from experience on the Quai d'Orsay and elsewhere assured a successful diplomatic career. The four which I possessed were a top-hat, a tailcoat, striped pants and a pair of spats.

The fifth I was confident I could soon acquire easily since I had an excellent letter to the father-in-law of the secretary of state, who had been a secretary of state himself and an important pillar of Washington society. I was sure that under such auspices I could acquire that sine qua non—a wife rich enough to keep a diplomat in the style to which he is supposed to be accustomed.

I recall that afternoon very well. I rang the bell to that door—well it was a different door of course—there are four there now with brass handles worn shiny by ambitious Columbians—but at least the door which that afternoon was to be my portal to a brilliant career was right there in the same frame.

It opened, I handed the silk hat and ebony stick to the servant and in a few moments I was being warmly greeted by a gentleman wearing what Sam Blythe once called the most diplomatic whiskers in Washington, John Watson Foster.

I saw that my striped pants and tailcoat which had just enough of a continental cut to make a proper impression, as well as the bow-from-the-waist I had learned in Berlin, were doing their work and I made mental note of the less unattractive unattached females. So after tossing off a bon mot or two, I left, feeling that my career was virtually launched.

It was still fairly early, so I decided to drop in at the National Press club to which my old schoolmate, David Lawrence, had given me a guest card. As the weather was fine, I decided I might as well walk and give Connecticut avenue a chance to admire my distinguished stripes and tails, although tailcoats and top-hats, per se, caused very little consternation in those days.

As I walked, I idly speculated on what course I would take if knee-breeches were insisted upon when I was presented at court. Meanwhile, I observed the strolling young ladies who, though probably unable to support an ambassador, were nevertheless quite as attractive as any of the better-qualified ones at the reception.

I had just about decided not to make an issue of the knee-breeches thing—after all I had been on the stage for a short period in my career and a couple of pairs of long stockings underneath would do for my calves what nature hadn't—when I found myself at the club.

A tall, black-haired gentleman arose and gave my a dignified greeting. I had thought it best while I was considering my diplomatic career to accept a temporary position with the Associated Press—a position I received after some rather tall talk on the part of David Lawrence and a kindly letter from Superintendent Roberts of the Paris bureau for whom I had worked. The gentleman who greeted me at the club was one of the staff which I was to join, assigned to the state department. And he was the man I alluded to—the friendly official—in the early paragraphs of this column.

Right there, or shall we say in the course of an hour or two, there developed the beginning of a beautiful friendship and the beginning of the end of any illusions concerning a diplomatic career. I applied for membership in the club, never went to another "at home" in the fine old brick house on Eighteenth street.

From that time on it has been deadlines instead of receiving lines. Although I didn't realize it at the time I really wasn't properly equipped for a diplomatic career — my spats were black.

The diplomatic world has not been altogether neglected in the course of meeting deadlines, but when I entered that allegedly romantic demesne as I still do in the course of my job, it is by way of the back door, an entrance which, I have discovered, often provides a much more revealing view of the surroundings. Perhaps it isn't polite to refer to the chancery entrance that way, but it is certainly not the front door.

As it turned out, not many weeks after I had given up my dreams of becoming a Machiavelli or a Metternich, I found myself a caller at six or eight embassies a day—I was put on the diplomatic run because a war had broken out and it was quite as important for belligerents and nervous neutrals to provide news from their points of view as it was for us to collect it.

The butlers in most of the embassies before World War I would as soon admit a reporter as they would a rug-peddler or a scissors-grinder. It required considerable working over to bring them into line.

And what a change today! The amount of time, money and energy expended by foreign nations in getting information to the American radio, press and public is one of the major items on their Washington budgets!

Another Jawbone For Samson

An old-fashioned dentist thinks the Russians have Hitler's jaw. The dentist, Dr. Plaschke, says he read in a German dentistry magazine that his former assistant, now in Russian custody, had identified a jaw which the Russians were toying with as Hitler's.

Dr. Plaschke claims the assistant couldn't positively identify it, but he himself feels it must be Hitler's because the magazine ridicules the work as old-fashioned.

Plaschke says he did an old-fashioned job on Hitler when he made a bridge of 12 teeth in 1934. Plaschke also claims to have studied dentistry at the University of Philadelphia in 1908. Their methods have probably advanced since then, but Hitler was old-fashioned about some things.

All we can do is hope the bridge pained him. And remember that that jawbone, if it's authentic, slew more men than the one from a similar source that Samson used when he went after the Philistines.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Could you give me any information on tile flooring? Can I do the work myself?

ANSWER: Whatever type you choose, remember that a solid color will show dirt very quickly. Mottled colors stay clean-looking much longer. It is perfectly possible for a home owner to lay tile, provided he is handy with tools and has a good guide book. Any kind of tile must be set in the proper "bed" no matter whether it is clay tile, asphalt, rubber or anything else.

QUESTION: Should one patch plaster that has come off in a basement?

ANSWER: If it's ordinary plaster that is used for living rooms, it would be best to remove all of it instead of trying to patch it. This type of plaster is affected by dampness and is not intended for use in a basement.

QUESTION: How can I polish bad scratches off my glass table top?

ANSWER: That type of polishing cannot be done at home. It is a job for a dealer in plate glass who has the equipment.

QUESTION: There are finger marks on the head board of my bed, probably caused by perspiring hands. How can I remove these marks?

ANSWER: Clean the surface by washing with thick suds of mild soap, not just thin, watery soapsuds. Follow with a clean, damp cloth and rub dry. Turpentine may also help. If this does not work, try rubbing the marks with a scratchless scouring powder and a little light oil on the ball of your finger.

Missing Eye Provides Clue In Arresting Purse Stealer

PHILADELPHIA. — Mrs. Dora Baker, 49, was arrested on a charge of purse stealing. Frank Grube, a railroad detective, had no trouble recognizing her. The owner of the purse, Mrs. Bessie Ehmann, a nurse, of Alden, had provided the necessary clue.

Mrs. Baker has only one eye. Her right eye, blind since birth, was removed three weeks previously.

Appearing before Magistrate Benjamin Schwartz, Mrs. Baker testified that her handicap had led her to steal.

"I can't get work with only one eye," she said. "I had to steal to live." The $40 taken from Mrs. Ehmann's purse, she told the court, went to pay overdue room rent.

Mrs. Ehmann asked that the charges be dropped. Magistrate Schwartz turned Mrs. Baker over to municipal court.

"Perhaps they can provide an artificial eye," he said, sympathetically, "and straighten out your troubles."

Famed Exhibition Shooter Bettered Score of Oakley

Annie Oakley, legendary sharpshooter, had an equal! The world-famous marksmanship of the woman whose steady trigger finger shot her to international renown was equalled by the late Elizabeth (Plinky) Toepperwein, outstanding exhibition shooter, according to E. B. Mann, in an article in The American Rifleman.

So thorough was the build-up given Annie that her reputation almost eclipsed all other women shooters.

Plinky, with her famous marksman-husband, Ad, held American audiences spellbound by feats of shotgun, rifle and revolver prowess in 40 years of barnstorming.

She was regarded as the greatest trapshooter of her time. On November 11, 1916, she established the still unchallenged woman's record in this field by smashing 1,952 of 2,000 16-yard clay targets in three hours, 15 minutes actual shooting time.

It was Ad Toepperwein, held by many experts to be the best marksman America has ever produced, who taught his wife to shoot. The day Plink first saw him he was a quiet Texan visitng the Winchester Repeating Arms company in New Haven, Conn., where she was an ammunition maker.

Habits of Lightning

It isn't true that lightning never strikes in the same place twice. It can and does, because certain places and things attract lightning. Lightning is chiefly a rural hazard, where nine out of 10 deaths occur, and only occasionally strikes areas with many buildings. Here are some thunderstorm tips: Get inside a house. Avoid isolated outbuildings and single trees, especially on high ground. If you must stay out, seek a grove of trees or a gully. Stay away from utility poles, downspouts, wire clotheslines and metal fences. In the house, close windows and doors, stay away from stoves, fireplaces, radiators, telephones and radios.

Vets Get Snubbed

CHARLIE HALLECK, who used to be one of the best-liked members of congress when he was an ordinary young representative from Indiana, has now risen to the esteemed job of house Republican majority leader and can give lessons on how to "win enemies and alienate people."

Halleck recently kept three representatives of veterans' organizations cooling their heels two hours in his outer office, then gave them the here's-your-hat-what's - your - hurry treatment.

His callers—John Williamson of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Francis Sullivan of the Disabled American Vets and Robert McLaughlin of AMVETS—wanted to find out why the house leadership was blocking various vet measures, and brought with them a pamphlet, written by Gen. Bonner Fellers, former publicity adviser to General MacArthur and now veterans' adviser to the Republican national committee. The pamphlet boasted what the G. O. P. congress had done for ex-servicemen.

"You could drive a 10-mule team through some of the loopholes in this document," asserted Williamson. "Actually, this congress so far has been noted for what it hasn't done for veterans. General Fellers apparently had such a tough time making up a list of accomplishments that he included the army-navy merger bill. That didn't help war vets, and there's a question that the merger has done the army and navy any good.

"In fact, when you get down to cases," continued the VFW spokesman, "this congress has done absolutely nothing about even the most urgent kind of veterans' legislation, such as bills for the relief of widows, orphans and disabled vets."

Halleck grunted impatiently as he looked through the Fellers booklet: "We can't do everything. It's 500 million dollars for this, and more millions for something else, and 1300 million dollars for federal aid to education—"

He stopped suddenly and looked at Williamson, inquiring: "I understand the vets want that, also."

"Yes, sir," replied the VFW spokesman. "My organization is for the education bill."

The G. O. P. leader promised to "take up" the widows-orphans-disabled vets question with the Republican steering committee, jumped up, opened his office door and "invited" his callers out.

Intra-Committee Politics

G. O. P. FRIENDS of the real-estate lobby tried a smart, last-minute maneuver to try to block the housing bill.

Noticing that only four or five Democratic members of the house banking and currency committee were present, G. O. P. Congressman Clarence Kilburn of Malone, N. Y., quickly moved to report out the Wolcott bill minus public housing, slum clearance and other humanitarian features of the original Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

Representative Boggs of Louisiana and Mike Monroney of Oklahoma jumped into action, rounded up Democratic colleagues and all were on hand to help defeat the Kilburn motion, 14 to 13, with the support of three Republicans—Hull of Wisconsin, Stratton of Illinois and Scott of Pennsylvania.

G. O. P. Congressman Frank Sundstrom of East Orange, N. J., then moved that loans to farm housing be deleted. This put Scott, a city man from Philadelphia, on the spot.

But Scott fooled his G. O. P. colleagues by voting "present," thus defeating the motion by a 13-to-13 tie vote. Again, Republicans Hull and Stratton, both with many farm voters, voted with the Democrats. However the desperate Republicans didn't give up. Representative John Kunkel of Harrisburg, Pa., demanded a reconsideration of the vote, still hoping Scott would switch back to the Republicans.

Rank Has Its Privileges

NOW THAT THE DRAFT and a big army are on the way back, the Doolittle report and the caste system should be taken out and dusted off. What officers don't always realize is that enlisted men resent the special privilege system—sometimes bitterly.

Most officers in the Pentagon, for instance, don't realize that G.I.'s are griped over the $65,000 underground officers' club which is open to officers for play during duty hours. What was once underground storage space has been converted into a sports palace, lavishly equipped with modern facilities for bowling, basketball, badminton, volley ball, handball and ping-pong. Devices for exercising flagging muscles and a heat room for sweat baths also have been installed.

Those who prefer less strenuous sport can sip cocktails in the "pink room" in a setting of soft lights and pastel hues. Like any up-to-date cocktail lounge, it is furnished with a television set, streamlined bar and adjoining kitchen.

Harsh Laxatives are NOT necessary for most people
The juice of a lemon in a glass of water, when taken first thing on arising, is all that most people need to insure prompt, normal elimination.
No more harsh laxatives that irritate the digestive tract and impair nutrition! Lemon in water is good for you!
Generations of Americans have taken lemons for health—and generations of doctors have recommended them. They are rich in vitamin C; supply valuable amounts of B1 and P. They alkalinize; aid digestion.
Not too sharp or sour, lemon in water has a refreshing tang—clears the mouth, wakes you up. It's not a purgative—simply helps your system regulate itself. Try it 10 days.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Speeding, Main Accident Cause

Exceeding of safe speeds was given as the reason for one out of every three fatal motor vehicle accidents last year, according to the accident prevention department, Association of Casualty and Surety companies. The department added that a majority of these deaths occurred on straight and wide-open highways where drivers were inclined to step on the gas.

YOU Don't HAVE TO SHOP FOR ELECTRICITY

ELECTRICITY is one commodity you don't have to shop for.

When you need electricity (and you need it for scores of chores about the home), you do not have to make up a shopping list, stop your housework to dress up, park the baby with the neighbor and then go down town. Indeed you don't. You simply flip a switch, or walk to the nearest outlet and plug in, and REDDY KILOWATT, your electric servant, does the rest.

Ideas Pay Dividends In Minn.

In the cold waters of Lake of the Woods is a strange fish whose outstanding characteristic is an over-sized liver which accounts for about eight per cent of its body weight. Tucked away in this treasure pouch is a veritable storehouse of precious vitamin A and D.

This piscatorial freak of nature is called the burbot and fish experts are agreed that it belongs to the cod family. But how and where it migrated from salt into fresh water is a mystery that may go back to the great separation of waters at the time of creation. However the transition has been all to the good, for the potency of its oil is seven times greater than that of its salt water ancestor.

Some 15 years ago a young pharmacist by the name of T. H. Rowell opened a drug store in Baudette--a mere stones throw from the huge aquarium in which this odd creature goes about gathering its magic elixer of health and vitality. Intrigued by the fact that its oil had such an unusually high vitamin content he began a series of experiments aimed at making it available in commercial quantities.

A trade magazine published an article on his work with the burbot which was read by a pharmacist in Iowa whose grandson was seriously ill with undulant fever. Beleiving that here might be balm and healing for the pain-wracked lad he wrote for a sample and Rowell processed a pint of the magic oil by hand. Some thirty days later he received a fervent note of gratitude in which his fellow druggist informed him that the product had saved the boy's life. Such was the beginning of the Burbot Liver Products Company of Baudette — a unique, interesting and most unusual enterprise and the only one of its kind in the country.

In addition to the cargo of oil which it totes around in the cold waters of the border country, this creature has a number of other strange characteristics. A full-grown burbot averages about five pounds and its appearance can only be described as grotesque and almost frightening. It spawns in mid-winter, usually in February, and its oil is ready for processing in the fall. When the liver has been extracted the remainder is cut up and fed to mink and other fur-bearing animals. Its predatory habits make it very destructive to game fish--especially walleyes, and burbot have been found with the tail of a two pound walleye protruding from the mouth.

When the squirming nets of the commercial fishermen are hauled ashore the burbot is separated from the other varieties by the fishermen who cut out the liver and haul it to Rowell's laboratories. In 1947 the catch produced five million pounds with each liver packing 20 per cent oil.

The plant employs 75 persons and 10 salesmen who call on individual doctors and hospitals. The product, which comes in both capsule and liquid form, is available through pharmaceutical houses and can be purchaced at all leading drug stores. The potency of vitamin A in preserving eyesight is well known and Rowell has given considerable study to the regeneration of the visual purple in the eye to aid in improving and preserving vision.

That Bogota Affair

The bloody uprising which almost wrecked the Inter-American Conference at Bogota recently was headlined in the American press. Most observers thought it was just another South American political upheaval. Yet, when the smoke of pillaging, the looting, and the dynamiting had ceased, it was evident that this rebellion had something different. The new ingredient was the amazing precision of timing and the speed with which the events moved.

When American newspaper men who were in Bogota had time to think about it, they discovered that this "revolution" was pulled off with the same practiced techniques that European Communists have been known to use. It was also discovered, after the haze cleared, that our own State Department, including our Bogota foreign office, had received warnings out of Chile that something was afoot. Yet, nothing prevented the uprising.

"Mass" Action

First a liberal party leader was shot down on the street under circumstances that indicate the Communitsts may have killed one of their own, just to get things started. The assassin was stomped to death and mutilated so that identification was impossible. After that, just like clock-work, mobs in widely scattered areas got busy. They grabbed radio stations and asked the "masses" to go forward to the attack.

The Communists then really took to their soap-boxes. They openly identified themselves as Communists and called for comrades to raid any place that might have weapons. Other mobs attacked public buildings, including the famed Capitol where the Inter-American Conference was being held. Yet another mob dragged the assassin's corpse to the Colombian president's mansion, where it was flung across the doorstep for the rest of the afternoon.

Lawless Fanaticism

What happened to the police? They had disappeared. Nor did the army show up. The mob, therefore, went about freely burning automobiles and wrecking buildings. Though the army was said to be critically short of gasoline, yet plenty was available for the gangs. Plenty of dynamite also. While these things were happening in Bogota, key centers elsewhere were being burned and pillaged in the same manner.

Why am I recounting all this? I want to demonstrate that Communism is not a law-abiding political party. It is a lawless fanaticism. We have had a demonstration right here in this hemisphere which shows the type of terrorism and force Communists use to gain political power. What Communists have done in Russia and in European riots and uprisings, they will do again wherever they can, in whatever countries they find sleeping on the job.

America must not be lulled to sleep by the sweet words of misguided idealists, who are being used by revolutionists the world over. There are few real Communists in America. There are not many Americans that desire to join lawless mobs. But Communists will stop at nothing which will cause strife and division among our people. We must know the methods of Communists, for if we do not anticipate the harm that even a few of them can do, we stand to lose what is America.

GOP Convention Hands Nomination To Dewey in Display of Unanimity; Warren Second Choice on Ticket

DEWEY EYED

GOP Convention

Out of the smoke-blurred rooms during the recess before the third roll call came the word: It was Dewey—first again with the medicine men.

From the very beginning of the GOP convention in the sweltering confines of Philadelphia's convention hall it was a simple case of Dewey against the field. The field was composed of Taft, Stassen, Vandenberg, Warren and MacArthur, plus a scattering of favorite sons.

Despite some frenetic jockeying for delegates by Dewey, Taft and Stassen over the week-end preceding the convention, the big three of the GOP started out on Monday with their pre-convention alignments unchanged.

But by the time Gov. Dwight Green of Illinois had finished with his keynote address Monday night it was apparent that a stop-Dewey movement was struggling to get under way. As it turned out that movement never did get beyond the struggling stage and Dewey remained virtually the only one unaffected by it.

In retrospect, the convention by that time already had assumed an inexorable course toward the Dewey camp. Second-guessers maintained that the whole affair oozed along as if motivated by some fundamental and changeless law, although that was not fully evident until the convention could be viewed as a finished product.

If there was a fundamental law it was compounded from a series of heterogeneous factors, political and personal:

First of all there was the superbly functioning Dewey machine, operating with almost 100 per cent efficiency to corral votes.

Secondly, the Dewey opposition was divided. Taft and Stassen, poles apart in their political philosophy within the Republican party, could not get together. Stassen flatly refused a deal and Taft kept waiting for a break that never came. California's Gov. Earl Warren refused to have a hand in a stop-Dewey drive, insisted he was running for the nomination and not just against Dewey. Vandenberg added to the confusion by remaining silent, noncommittal and even disinterested.

Nomination

Actual climax of the convention came when Sen. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania renounced his favorite son candidacy and threw his support, backed by about half the members of Pennsylvania's 73 delegates, to Dewey. That started the blitzkrieg. From then on it was Dewey and downhill all the way.
